Verdict on Moon Pictures:

'THEY'RE SENSATIONAL!'

JODRELL BANK, England (AP — The radiotelescopic observatory here announced today it is receiving sensational pictures of the moon from the Soviet Luna IX satellite. They show individual rocks on the moon's surface, a spokesman said.

Signals from the moon rocket, which made history's first soft landing on the moon Thursday, were fed into a facsimile machine. After technicians worked out the focus, they got a picture showing rocks, a flat surface and the shadow of the spaceship itself.

Sir Bernard Lovell, director of the observatory and a veteran of tracking space vehicles, called them "the most sensational pictures we have ever had at Jodrell Bank."

Landing Feat Gives Russia Lead to Moon

MOSCOW (CP)—Luna IX, the Soviet mechanical moon pioneer, has transmitted to earth pictures of the lunar landscape, Tass reported today.

An announcement distributed by the official Soviet news agency gave no indication when the pictures would be made public. It would be the first ever transmitted directly from the moon's surface to earth, after earlier Soviet and American pictures sent from spacecraft above the moon.

Luna IX "has begun scanning the lunar landscape and transmitting it to the earth's surface," the announcement said.

The space vehicle landed Thursday in an area of the moon that will be in direct sunlight for almost two weeks. This would permit a number of pictures to be sent, if Luna IX continues working properly and sunlight can power its batteries.

The announcement, made 20 hours after Luna IX's landing, said four radio communications sessions had been held with it today, totalling three hours 20 minutes.

RECEIVE DATA

"Telemetric information was received during these radio links from the station," it added. "It confirmed the normal functioning of the flight system. Transmission of the lunar landscape was carried out on command from earth."

Before this announcement, the Russians had been characteristically silent about information received from the mechanical pioneer sitting on the plain named Ocean of Storms, though the British radio observatory at Jodrell Bank said Luna IX had transmitted radio information and pictures.

The official Thursday announcement said the landing was in the area of the Ocean of Storms to the west of he craters Reiner and Maria. Yuri Pakovsky, a scienist, described the site for Tass.

"This area is an easily observable plain," he said, "although in the zone of landing there are hills and craters. The large light spot of Reiner Gamma lies to the south. Scientists still do not know what it is."

Pakovsky said the land site can be seen from earth with ordinary field glasses.

But triumphant space program chiefs cautiously held back detailed information until experts thoroughly examine pictures and technical data said to be streaming back to earth.

Informed sources said ground control planned several radio links a day with the Luna IX unmanned station which Thursday night gave the Soviet Union a dramatic space victory in landing — apparently undamaged—on the moon's dust-covered surface after a 3½ day flight from earth.

The heavy instrument filled capsule glided gently into the surface of earth's nearest neighbor at 9:45 p.m. (10:45 a.m. PST), after scientists slowed Luna IX's speed from about one mile a second to almost zero by firing retro-rockets.

Russia's feat was likened to its success as the first nation to put a man into orbit, and the first to send a human being to walk in outer space.

But Russians were cautious in talking about how soon it may be before they can cap their victory by sending a cosmonaut to touch down on the moon.

Experts believe the split-second timing achieve in landing Luna IX after a flight of more than 240,000 miles shows Russia

Four Killed In 3-Alarm Quebec Fire

MONTREAL (CP)—Four persons were killed and an estimated eight persons injured today in a three-alarm fire which struck a department store and second-floor apartments.

Patrolling policemen spotted the blaze at 7:30 a.m. on Ontario Street East near Papineau Ave. They heard the screams of trapped victims and called firemen and ambulances.

The building, which was up for sale, housed a small department store on the first floor.

How Moon Looks From 10 Feet Away

One of the first pictures of the moon's surface taken by the Soviet Union's Luna 9 was released today by a British observatory.

The Luna 9 equipped with cameras and other equipment made a successful soft landing Thursday.

The craft's camera appeared to be shooting pictures from about six to 10 feet above the moon's surface, according to Sir Bernard Lovell, director of Jodrell Bank observatory where the pictures were being received.

Craters, rocks and pebbles could be distinguished and one crater was about 12 inches across, he said.

The pictures were being picked up in the United Kingdom by a big-dish radio telescope 250 inches across, fed into special receiving equipment and printed.

Lovell said Luna 9 began transmitting television pictures from the moon a few minutes after touching down Thursday which, he said, "would indicate the Luna had landed on a hard surface without encountering any great depths of dust."

The picture above was transmitted from Manchester, England, through the facilities of the Manchester Guardian simultaneously into the Associated Press wirephoto service in London and New York. The pictures were released by the observatory.

Lovell said:

"One thing is certain, these are photographs of the lunar surface in considerable detail. When we get a group of them we will be able to interpret them in more detail. We don't know yet the scale of the rocks shown in one of the photographs. There is a dark mark on one of them which is a shadow of the spaceship itself."

At first there had been problems in working out the focal length of the satellite's TV camera and the facsimile pictures showed a series of dark lines about one-quarter of an inch in width.

Then another shot showed light lines. But finally the focus was worked out and the pictures were translated from radio signals into visual images which technicians described as exceedingly clear.

UN Delegates Meet With No Success In Viet Nam Talks

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) —Delegates to the United Nations Security Council resume their private efforts today to deal with the Viet Nam war without any immediate prospect of agreement.

(See Page 3, Viet Nam War Today.)

Talks were agreed on Wednesday when the Viet Nam crisis was placed on the council agenda at the request of the United States and over strong Russian objections.

Debate was suspended shortly after a close vote on the agenda because delegates wanted to avoid an acrimonious public debate which could only make the situation worse.

There was considerable speculation that Sori Coulibaly, chief delegate of Mali, might have a key role to play in the private negotiations.

Mali, one of the non-permanent Council members, has diplomatic relations with Peking. Coulibaly, chairman of the "committee of 24" on colonialism, has a reputation as a militant African delegate.

He conferred Thursday with Halim Budo, chief delegate of Albania, Charles Yost, deputy chief U.S. delegate, and Roger Seydoux, chief delegate of France.

DECLINES ANY COMMENT

Coulibaly declined any comment except to say that any initiative for another meeting would have to come from the U.S., which made the original request.

Nikolai T. Fedorenko, the chief Soviet delegate, was expected to continue his stiff opposition to any Council debate on Viet Nam, which he said would be a "propaganda farce" aimed at giving Washington a blank cheque for further aggression in Viet Nam.

Many delegates indicated they thought the best forum for dealing with the Viet Nam war was at a Geneva conference.

Arthur J. Goldberg, chief U.S. delegate, has circulated a draft council resolution calling for talks between the appropriate interested governments — apparently excluding the Viet Cong.

Fedorenko said the Viet Cong were the "sole genuine representatives of the South Vietnamese people" and reaffirmed his support of Hanoi's four points, which include a demand for withdrawal of all American troops.

McNAMARA WON'T TALK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defence Secretary Robert McNamara declined today to testify in public in the Senate foreign relations comittee investigation of President Johnson's Viet Nam war policies. He drew quick fire from some committee men. (See story Page 3).

'Time Come for Queen To Visit Every Year'

OTTAWA — A Conservative MP suggested Thursday that Queen Elizabeth should spend a few weeks in Canada every year.

Wallace Nesbitt, Oxford, said the government could build permanent quarters for her at Government House in Ottawa.

"I think it would be a splendid thing to be able to announce in our centenary year —1967—that Her Majesty would be Queen of Canada not just by representation but by her presence for a few weeks of each year," he stated.

Nesbitt said it is possible now for the Queen to get from London to Ottawa by air in a few hours.

If Canada is to continue as a constitutional monarchy, it has to be brought up to date, said Nesbitt.

The member said he thought royal tours are exhausting and an imposition on the Queen, and do not satisfy the requirements of a constitutional monarchy.

IN HAWAII

Johnson Sets Up War Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson announced today that he will fly to Hawaii late Saturday for three days of meetings with South Vietnamese leaders and the U.S. high command.

Johnson told a news conference in his office that South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky and the Vietnamese chief of state, Nguyen Van Thieu, had accepted his invitation to meet him in Honolulu Sunday.

Also coming from Saigon for the conference are Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in Southeast Asia, and the U.S. Ambassador to Saigon, Henry Cabot Lodge.

Johnson will be accompanied by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara, Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman and John W. Gardner, secretary of health, education and welfare.

NO SHIFT SEEN

The president said he anticipated no shift in this country's policies in Viet Nam, but that the meeting was arranged because he wanted for some time to meet Ky and Thieu. He said he also had wanted to see Westmoreland and Lodge in person.

Johnson and his party planned to leave Washington for Hawaii in air force jet transports late Saturday. The president expected the Honolulu talks to run through next Tuesday and thought he would be back in the White House by Wednesday morning.

Jetliner Plunges Into Tokyo Bay

TOKYO (UPI)—An All Nippon Airways Boeing 727 jet airliner with 133 persons aboard crashed into Tokyo Bay tonight only four minutes from a landing in perfect weather. All aboard were apparently dead in the worst single airplane disaster in history.

The plane carrying 126 passengers from a northern Japan snow festival and a crew of seven fell into the bay seven miles from Tokyo as the pilot was circling for a routine landing.

A search boat of the Maritime Safety Agency sighted several chairs and articles of clothing floating in the water at 11:40 p.m. (6:40 a.m. PST) and they were identified as coming from the missing plane.

Wing Found Floating in Water

Search ships operating with spotlights and an occasional flare from U.S. planes overhead converged on the scene southeast of Tokyo and found the wing of the plane floating in the water where a light mist hovered just above the surface.

At 11:50 p.m., the agency said its search boat spotted the floating body of a man and a book explaining how to use life-saving equipment aboard the plane.

Six hours after the crash 21 bodies had been recovered.

A spokesman for the airways denied at 1 a.m. that there was any report by the pilot of instrument trouble and said the only word was that he was shifting over from instrument to visual flight for the final approach.

An official of the transportation ministry aviation bureau said, "Judging from the fact the plane lost contact immediately after it last made contact with the airport it is strongly suspected something—maybe some kind of trouble—happened to some mechanism in the plane."

The airways said the plane was almost new. It had been in service only since late last year and had a total of 1,600 flying hours. One of its three jet engines was replaced early this year and an airways spokesman said there was no foundation to reports of any faulty mechanism.

He said it was perfectly normal for a pilot to shift from instruments to visual landing under conditions of clear weather and long visibility such as existed.

The airline later led the weeping relatives from the terminal building and took them to the airport hotel to await recovery of the bodies. After serving them tea the company said it would take them to the morgue as soon as it could hire buses.

Fourth Fatal Crash of 727

It was the fourth fatal crash of the Boeing 727 three-jet airliner within a year and already Japanese officials were reported raising questions about the safety of the sleek craft in widespread use by airlines in the U.S.

Fishermen had reported seeing a plane trailing dense clouds of smoke and then a ball of fire as the plane apparently hit the waters of the bay. But the pilot had given no indication of possible trouble.

Capt. Masaki Takahashi, 39, trained as a pilot during the Second World War and cited only recently for his safety record, radioed the Haneda international airport control tower four minutes before his scheduled landing he was on the final, circling approach. Then disaster.

There were scenes of grief and despair at the Haneda airport serving the Tokyo-Yokohama area and at Chitose in the northernmost Island of Hokkaido where millions of Japanese were attending an annual snow festival to see the spectacular snow and ice carvings. The plane left Chitose earlier.

The passengers were said to be mostly Japanese from three Tokyo firms which sent its employees to Chitose on an outing.

About 50 relatives and friends were waiting at the airport when word of the missing plane was flashed on 9 p.m. television news broadcasts. Hundreds of Japanese poured into the terminal building.

Hysterical Scene at Airport

They jammed against the airlines' counter and simply stood. Most were stony-faced with the stoicism of the Orient. A few wept openly.

Among them were two small children, Emiko Yokoshima and her brother Yutaka whose parents had gone to Hokkaido. They wept with grief as a reporter tried to interview them before a television camera.

Airlines officials announced stonily every half hour there was no trace of the plane. There were shouts "were there enough life boats?" and "did the plane carry rescue rafts at all?" The questions were screamed in hysterical voices.

One man, clad in padded clothes and a hat with heavy earflaps, let the tears stream down his seamed and burdened face as he waited for word that did not come.

Shortly after midnight Saturday the Japanese government announced it had asked the U.S. embassy for assistance. It was assumed help was wanted from the military in rescue operations.

. . . LANDING

already has the technical capacity to land a human being.

But the hazards he may face on the mysterious moon surface are still unknown. Delicate instruments aboard the space station will help scientists determine how a cosmonaut can survive, testing such factors as temperatures and pressures.

There is a widespread optimism in Moscow that Russia will solve the problem before 1970. The next few years may see a spectacular race between the Soviet Union and the United States to get there first.

Although U.S. probes have sent back detailed pictures of the moon's surface just before crashing, the U.S. has not attempted a soft landing. Its first try is scheduled for May.

The Soviet success came on its fifth attempt.

Soviet Cosmonaut Andrian Nikolayev said in a Pravda article the landing "could be said to be already a step on the lunar surface . . . wait for us, moon."

In another Pravda article, Prof. N. Barabashov of the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences said investigations on the moon would have a great effect on "earth-bound" science and would "enrich mankind with new knowledge about the basic laws of nature."

The Soviet news agency Tass said: "Radio contact with the station on the surface of the moon is reliable. Transmissions are on 183.538 megacycles. The instruments on board the station are functioning normally."

Scientists at the Jodrell Bank Radio Observatory in England said Luna IX transmitted facsimile pictures from its landing at 9:45 p.m. until 10:50 p.m., went off the air, and resumed signals shortly after midnight (6 p.m. PST).

Congratulations from heads of states around the world have poured into Moscow.

"Your accomplishment is one that can benefit all mankind and all mankind applauds it," said President Johnson in a message to President Nikolai Podgorny.

U.S. space officials at Cape Kennedy, Fla., conceded the Soviet success gave the Russians a lead in this phase of the race to put a man on the moon.

SCORE OTHER 'FIRSTS'

The Soviets were the first to crash-land a rocket on the moon in September, 1959. The following month they sent a space station around the moon that sent back photographs of its far side, never before seen by man.

The United States also crash-landed a picture-taking satellite on the moon, but not until July 31, 1964. This was Ranger 7 which sent back the most complete series of pictures taken of the moon.

An earlier U.S. attempt, Ranger 6, hit the moon Feb. 2, 1964, but its cameras did not work.

At Jodrell Bank, Lovell said the spacecraft landed in a region that will be in full sunlight for 14 days, permitting solar power to replenish Luna IX's batteries.

Cosmonaut Gherman Titov, the Soviet Union's second man in space, told Tass today he believes dogs or other animals will precede man to the moon, just as dogs preceded men in orbiting the earth in Soviet space shots.

He said the chief problem in preparing for manned flight to the moon is the return of the men to the earth.

Russian Moon Landing Hailed Around the World

LONDON (CP) — Political leaders and scientists around the world joined today in congratulating the Soviet Union on its successful moon landing.

Newspapers and radio and television stations in most countries gave the soft landing of Luna IX top attention. President Johnson was one of the first to hail the Soviet feat.

"You and the people of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics are to be congratulated for the great success of Luna IX," he said in a message to Soviet President Nikolai Podgorney.

"Your accomplishment is one that can benefit all mankind and all mankind applauds it. Your scientists have made a major contribution to man's knowledge of the moon and space."

President de Gaulle of France said in a telegram to Soviet leaders: "Soviet science has, in the interest of all humanity, added a new chapter to the history of great discoveries."

PRAISE FROM INDIA

Indian President Sarvapallo Radhakrishnan hailed "yet another triumph for Soviet scientists." Indian Premier Mrs. Indira Gandhi said the landing "comes like a sudden reassurance of man's continuous quest to transform the unattainable into the attainable."

"A great feat of science and technology," said Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake of New Zealand.

Scientists could not agree whether the landing put the Soviet Union ahead of the United States in the race to put a man on the moon or only in one phase of it.

The race to put a man on the moon is "still fairly even now," said Sir Bernard Lovell, director of the Jodrell Bank Radio Observatory in England.

"The Soviet Union has gone ahead in the techniques of soft landing," he said. "The Americans already achieved the other essential feature of rendezvous in space. Both countries now have one each to their credit."

LUNA TICKS OFF MOON SECRETS

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — With the successful soft landing of Luna IX, the Russians apparently have proved that man can safely explore the moon. They also put added pressure on the troubled United States Surveyor program, which hopes to make a similar landing in May.

Until Luna IX settled gently onto the dry, relatively flat Ocean of Storms Thursday, scientists were divided on whether the moon's surface could support a landing.

Some felt the surface might be a thick layer of dust or a fragile honeycomb structure that would swallow a heavy spacecraft.

But Luna IX touched down, established firm radio contact with Russian ground stations, and started sending photographs and information which will help in developing a manned lunar landing vehicle.

Other goals must be achieved before men venture to the moon. A key one is the joining of two vehicles in space, which the U.S. hopes to do with the Gemini 8 flight in March.

It's been nearly a year since the last Russian cosmonaut went aloft. In that period 10 American astronauts have rocketed into space.

But, as one rocket expert noted about Russian secrecy: "They could have a 20-man spacecraft on the pad right now and we wouldn't know about it until after it was launched."

NEAR-EPIDEMIC OUTBREAK OF RABIES IN ONTARIO

TORONTO (UPI)—An outbreak of rabies in southern Ontario has spread to near-epidemic proportions, the Ontario Lands and Forests Department warned today.

The department issued warnings to parents, pet owners and farmers.

During November last year, the department said 110 cases of rabies were reported in southern Ontario—the largest number from a large area north of Lake Huron.

FIRST REIGNING MONARCH . . . . . . TO VISIT BRITISH GUIANA

Amid the Splendor, Holiday Atmosphere . . . Mounting Security Measures

Times News Services

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip stepped ashore here today to the cheers of thousands of Guianese at the start of a five-week Caribbean tour.

The royal yacht Britannia sailed into the mouth of the Demerara River early this morning carrying the first reigning monarch to visit British Guiana in 152 years of British rule.

The Queen was met by Governor Sir Richard Luyt, who will be the first governor-general when the colony becomes independent May 26.

A resplendent capital, decked out with British flags, bunting and decorative lights, awaited the royal couple

Amid the holiday atmosphere, however, the government took tight security measures to meet any disorders that might be stirred up by the present boycott announced by the opposition People's Progressive Party, which is led by Marxist Cheddi Jagan and his American-born wife, Janet.

Jagan is away on a tour of Communist countries, but Mrs. Jagan told a press conference the members of their party—most of them of East Indian descent—would close their doors and windows and refuse to take part in any events.

Police arrested at least a dozen opposition members on suspicion of using strong-arm tactics to enforce their boycott.

Prime Minister Forbes Burnham, who leads the British colony's Negro population, refused to discuss security measures, but added "no nonsense will be tolerated by the police."

But his security police raided a PPP print shop Thursday, arrested Earl M. G. Wilson, a leader of the party, and seized 5,000 posters which alleged that Guyana—as British Guiana will be known when it becomes independent May 26—and Rhodesia "are victims of British oppression and exploitation."

British Guiana, under British rule for 152 years, has a population of about 640,000. The population of Georgetown was expected to be doubled to 250,000 for the royal couple's two days here.

Police and volunteers were bolstered by 1,300 British troops and a 600-man local defence force.

PPP leaders said they called the boycott as an act of solidarity with Rhodesia's African population. But the party is also bitter about the system of proportional representation which the British government introduced before the 1964 election. As a result Jagan lost the prime ministership to Burnham, leader of the People's National Congress.

The Queen's program today included a tour of slum areas and the only public address of her stay, from the balcony of the Parliament Building.

The chief focus of concern was the couple's visit Saturday to La Bonne Intention, outside Georgetown. The area is considered a PPP stronghold and East Indians there told reporters they feared reprisals if they were seen watching the Queen.

It is the first royal visit to British Guiana since Prince Philip came in 1962. Princess Margaret made an official visit in 1958.

Five U.S. Aircraft Lost In Four Days of Bombing

MP's DEATH CUTS MARGIN FOR WILSON GOVERNMENT

LONDON (Reuters)—Prime Minister Wilson's tiny parliamentary voting margin dropped to three today with the death of Labor MP Harold Hayman.

Hayman, 71, member for Falmouth and Camborne in southwest England since 1950, was the first Labor member of Parliament in a Cornish constituency.

His death reduced the government's over-all majority in the House of Commons to three again after a massive Labor victory at a Hull byelection a week ago pushed it up to four.

Falmouth, like Hull, is another marginal seat for Labor. Although Hayman held it for 16 years, his margin in a three-cornered fight in the 1965 general election slumped from 4,197 to 2,926.

SAIGON (Reuters)—The United States has lost at least five aircraft in the first four days of its resumed bombing offensive over North Viet Nam, a U.S. military spokesman disclosed today.

U.S. planes today again ranged north of the 17th parallel — the line that divides the two Viet Nams—attacking bridges, barges and other strategic targets.

And the Viet Cong continued scattered harassing attacks around Saigon. The guerrillas lobbed mortar shells into the defences of Phu Cuc, 25 miles northeast of Saigon, and raided a refugee camp near An Hoa, setting fire to several buildings.

The U.S. spokesman announced the loss of two more American aircraft over North Viet Nam, presumably from groundfire, in addition to the three already known.

A U.S. Navy A-4 Skyhawk from the 7th Fleet carrier Kitty Hawk disappeared near the coastal city of Vinh Tuesday, the second day of strikes after a five-week pause.

An RA-5 Vigilante supersonic jet from the Kitty Hawk crashed in the South China Sea about two miles off the North Vietnamese coast, on its way back from a raid.

The vigilante's two crew members were listed as missing, bringing a total number of U.S. flyers reported killed or missing in the resumed raids to four.

The spokesman said he did not consider the rate of losses over the North as significantly higher than before the suspension began on Christmas Eve.

Kill-Per-Buck Level Scored by Fulbright At Viet War Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator J. W. Fulbright told foreign aid administrator David E. Bell today that the United States is paying "a very high cost per kill" in the Viet Nam War.

A dispute between Bell and Fulbright, Arkansas Democrat who is chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, enlivened the renewal of public hearings to President Johnson's Viet Nam policies.

Fulbright, spearheading an attack by Senate critics of policies underlying the Viet Nam fighting, said Americans are beginning to know what the war means in lives and suffering for Americans and South Vietnamese alike.

"Do you know how many Viet Cong (guerrillas) were killed last year? "Fulbright asked the witness.

Bell said he did not have exact figures, but he estimated it was nearer 30,000 than the 11,247 Fulbright said his committee staff estimated.

At the close of the year, U.S. military sources in Saigon had counted the year's Viet Cong dead at more than 34,000 with almost 6,000 more Viet Cong captured.

Fulbright stuck by his estimate and said the U.S. administration contemplates spending a total of $15,800,000,000 in military and economic assistance to South Viet Nam before this fiscal year ends June 30.

With 11,247 Viet Cong killed, the chairman said, "it works out to a very high cost per kill."

Fulbright said witnesses in the new hearings will appear by invitation only and the sessions will continue "as long as they are fruitful."

Fulbright pressed Bell for evidence of popular support for the South Vietnamese government and for any evidence that the Viet Cong control any less territory than they did a year, two or three years ago.

"Do you think there is any evidence of popular support for the Saigon government?" Fulbright asked.

"Yes," Bell said, citing elections in the countryside last year in which he testified 70 per cent of the eligible voters turned out. In nearly every case, Bell said, a mayor or other official of democratic leanings was elected.

The witness said "there is no certain way" to establish how much of South Viet Nam is under control of the Viet Cong.

A Necessary Evil?

THERE CAN BE NO VALID denial of the fact that the toll of automobile fatalities has become a major problem of our society. The traffic situation has reached a point at which very strong deterrent measures must be instituted, and the efficacy of these measures will be determined by the degree to which they impinge on the most prominent factors in the traffic accident problem. Two of these major factors are obviously alcoholic impairment and the mechanical condition of vehicles.

The provincial government's plan to establish vehicle testing stations throughout British Columbia will meet with widespread approval. Despite the possible minor expense that individual drivers may incur as a result of having defective brakes or lights or steering, even the worst offender must admit that correction of the trouble is in his own interest, to say nothing of those with whom he shares the roads.

The increasing severity of penalties for impaired drivers has also won public approval. The driver obviously unfit to be behind a wheel receives little sympathy from a public which is being educated to appreciate the terrible results that can ensue.

Mr. Bonner's new proposal, empowering police to carry out roadside testing of drivers who show no outward sign of alcoholic intake, but with loss of driving rights if they record more than an acceptable alcoholic reading in a breath test, opens up heretofore unexplored legal territory in this province.

As with the mechanical testing, it can be logically argued that the measure is designed to protect the driver himself as much as anyone, and should therefore be welcomed. And certainly if statistics should show that the measure was effective in lowering the accident rate it would be universally welcomed. On such pragmatic grounds there could be little objection.

There are certain qualms regarding individual rights, however, which should be examined and satisfied before the proposed legislation is passed. There is an element of "prove-yourself-innocent" in the suggested procedure, inasmuch as a driver refusing to take a roadside test would be deprived of his licence just as though he had failed the test. He would be presumed guilty. Since failing a test would not be registered as an offence and would not lead to a court charge, the effect would be felt in the inconvenience and possible expense of having to abandon one's car at the scene for a 24-hour period or longer.

But there would be no court protection and presumably no appeal from the policeman's reading of the machine's recording. And variations in the individual's tolerance of alcohol, his extra care in driving and obeying all the laws as a result of his recognition that he had had a drink or two, and consideration of his temperament under various conditions — these presumably are beyond the power of the testing equipment to adjudicate.

Mr. Bonner has said that the innovation — still to be detailed in legislation—would be used only in the course of roadblock campaigns, such as New Year's Eve checkups. But presumably, with the law on the books, the test could be imposed at any time and place. Any hotel lounge, beer parlor or club could conceivably yield a harvest of dozens of de-licensed drivers on any Saturday night if the police decided to institute their testing in the vicinity. Yet would the responsible citizens involved, not impaired but having had drinks, be those who are most prone to contribute to the toll of accidents listed as due to alcohol? Last year's statistics show that carelessness caused twice as many traffic deaths as alcohol.

It seems inescapable that at least in some measure an infringement of human rights will be involved, and there are bound to be many borderline decisions that will arouse the ire of the victims. Is this a place for the individual to make a stand, or is it merely another of the small steps which gradually are eroding personal rights in favor of the increasingly more crowded society which is our twentieth-century environment?

This is a typical dilemma of our age. Perhaps only the ensuing statistics can establish that the sacrifice, if any, is worth it.

A Committee Door Slams

VOTERS WHO ELECT MEMbers to city and municipal councils in Greater Victoria are the same public who elect representatives from Greater Victoria ridings to the provincial government.

Hence, when persons elected to councils want those elected to the provincial government to entertain a request for the study of provincial-municipal financial relationships, it might be assumed that a certain community of representation existed among them.

The assumption is seriously strained by this week's reaction of the legislature's municipal committee, chaired by Esquimalt's Mr. Herbert Bruch and numerically dominated by Social Credit members.

Oak Bay's Mr. Alan Macfarlane sought, at the municipal committee's opening session, to advance the municipalities' case for an impartial investigation, or at least a committee study. His efforts were blocked by the chairman, who ruled that it was beyond the jurisdiction of the committee to follow the suggestion.

The Oak Bay member was denied an opportunity to pursue his argument at that meeting, but a Speaker's ruling might alter that situation.

It is understood, of course, that the responsibility of a member extends beyond the task of representing the community which elected him. He must, under a well-established principle, be in a position to stand above the parochial demands of the people of his own riding.

But that is no argument against discussion of an issue of vital concern not only to local government but also to the entire structure of municipal government throughout the province.

The attitude of the chairman, and his supporters on the committee, should be kept in mind when property owners pay their municipal taxes, or go to the provincial polls.

The Moon and Expense

THE RUSSIANS HAVE achieved a most impressive feat in placing a space vehicle safely on the moon's surface. The Luna 9 projectile is apparently functioning well and sending radio information back to earth. This is a great step forward in the program of landing a man on the satellite and represents the successful outcome of a number of attempts by Soviet scientists.

Achievements of United States in manned orbital flight are a natural complement to the Russian lunar landing, and these developments raise again the obvious proposal that the two nations combine their efforts to make the most efficient and economical use of their joint scientific resources.

The prevailing step-by-step progress to the moon is, of course, a deterrent to combining resources, since each achievement by one nation acts as a spur to the other to excel it. But it must be said that scientific rivalry, expensive though it is, has much to recommend it over the military contests that down through the ages have determined national superiority and prestige.

Peeking!

FROM SAIGON

By JOSEPH ALSOP

Testing LBJ's Fibre

Alsop

BEHIND all the churning and wallowing and tergiversation of American policy in these last six weeks, there is one very simple, bleak fact. Once again, the war in Viet Nam has been radically transformed, almost to the point of becoming a new war. The last major transformation occurred last summer, with the commitment of U.S. ground forces on a big scale. The President's decision to make this commitment was extremely courageous, and the commitment paid off magnificently.

Largely as a result of Defence Secretary McNamara's reform and modernization of the armed forces, every unit committed was hard-trained and combat-ready. Green troops fought like veterans. Brilliant victories were won against heavy odds—which will no doubt surprise a lot of people at home, for the U.S. public, for some strange reason, were only told about the casualties and not about the victories.

'Nearly on the Ropes'

In consequence, by the beginning of November, "the Viet Cong main forces were nearly on the ropes." This summary was given by Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge. His view is shared by just about every other American out here with experience to form a judgement. At this juncture, however, the next transformation of the war began to be evident.

Precisely because the American commitment threatened to break the fighting strength of the Viet Cong main force, as well as the North Vietnamese units already in South Viet Nam, a massive further invasion of South Viet Nam by North Vietnamese regulars was ordered in Hanoi. The new units swiftly moving in quite naturally upset the whole balance of the war.

This led, in turn, to the exceedingly grim briefing given to Secretary McNamara when he was last here. The chances are, in truth, that it was much too grim. For example, the North Vietnamese were credited with the capability of laying down 138 tons a day on the South Vietnamese border, via the Ho Chi Minh Trail. This tonnage, of course, would sustain all too many North Vietnamese divisions.

In fact, however, if the enemy is currently laying down 60 tons a day on the border, he is now doing a lot better than the wisest analysts believe. Furthermore, distribution from the border forward to the fighting units of 138 tons a day would require an army of at least 80,000 coolies, who would in turn consume about 65 tons of rice a day.

Exaggerated Picture

There can be little doubt that Secretary McNamara was given an exaggerated picture of the number of additional North Vietnamese units that can be permanently supported in South Viet Nam. "Permanently" is the key word, however, for the desperate decision to eat up all the stocks accumulated and cached in the jungles by the VC would of course permit a good many additional units to be temporarily supported. And in any case, without regard to future capabilities, the stepped-up North Vietnamese invasion of the south had already created a wholly new situation.

Secretary McNamara's report on the demands of the new situation thereupon touched off the churning and wallowing in U.S. policy, typified by the peace offensive and the bombing pause. But no amount of wallowing and churning can change the necessities, as the outcome has shown. Three additional divisions, either three American or two American and one South Korean, are needed to redress the balance and recapture the initiative enjoyed in October.

This increase in General Westmoreland's troop requirement, from six to nine division equivalents, in turn means a requirement for more U.S. troops that can be rapidly provided without calling up the reserves. For the time being, the President may perhaps think he can escape from meeting General Westmoreland's requirement by one dodge or another. If so, the enemy will soon enough teach him his error.

Clever Dodges

It is far more likely, however, that the President thinks he can meet General Westmoreland's requirement without calling up the reserves, by using a whole series of clever dodges. For example, all sorts of specialized troop units, easily obtainable by a call-up, are desperately needed to break the logistical logjam here, without which larger forces cannot easily be supported.

But at the cost of some delay, private contractors can be hired to attack the logistical logjam. By the same token, the army's authorized troop strength has been greatly increased. Ready divisions may therefore be borrowed from the U.S., with skeleton divisions taking their place in the strategic reserve.

But such dodges are dangerous and unworthy. They mean delay when speed is vital. They mean a further show of irresolution when stern resolve is vital. They mean no margin for the future, when the conspicuous existence of a margin is vital. Thus Lyndon Johnson's fibre, as a leader of a nation at war, is now being put to a supreme test.

"WOULDN'T THAT BE BEAUTIFUL OVER THE FIREPLACE?"

Looking Back

From The Times of Feb. 4, 1906:

The proceedings of the legislature today occupied a little over two hours time. The bill calling for the granting of the franchise to women came up for second reading and was defeated, the vote standing at 24 to 12.

Arguing for passage of the bill was Mr. J. R. Brown, who said that at present women were placed on practically the same footing as men in the municipal elections. He saw no objection to extending the privilege to the provincial eelctions.

Some other members agreed that the extension of the franchise would tend to elevate politics.

Where the Money Goes

Western

THIS is the age of big government and the bigger government gets, the lengthier become the critical annual reports of the auditor-general. It is possible that the document for the year ending March 31, 1965 would be even more interesting and extensive if Mr. Henderson had been free to recruit his own staff as recommended by the public accounts committee. Despite the shortage of trained personnel, Mr. Henderson notes that his office has managed to increase and diversify the scope of its work within the 12 months.

The range of his activities is indicated by the fact that he has rather more than 150 irregular and unsatisfactory situations to bring to Parliament's attention. In addition, he notes that only 10 of 50 recommendations of the public accounts committee have been implemented since last year; four others partially so.

Checking further on implementation of the Glassco Commission's findings in respect to outdated procedures and wasteful practices, Mr. Henderson observes that 73 per cent still await action while three per cent are "disputed."

The criticisms are extremely varied and as usual concern many departments and government agencies. At one extreme are cases of alleged falsifications (involving, for example, PFAA payments in certain districts where there appeared to be a disparity between wheat grown and that shown on cultivated acreage reports.) At the other are disputed points of law.

Corner-Cutting

In between there are a great many cases where departments managed to cut corners by questionable charges to certain votes. An example is an Easter Island expedition, actually a contribution to an internatoinal program, but smuggled in as a project under Vote 15 of the department of national defence.

There are some interesting observations on the ways of government in dealing with Crown corporations. It had been the custom for Parliament to meet through separate appropriations the capital and operating budgets of the CBC. In March, 1965, however, there was a change, the capital requirements of the corporation being met by "loans" from the government totalling $14,250,000, with interest rates at 5¼ per cent and 5⅜ per cent per annum. As these were entered as an asset item in the statement of assets and liabilities of Canada, the first consequence was to understate the deficit.

But this is not all. As Mr. Henderson sadly observes: The CBC is "not in a position to repay either principal or interest on loans such as these unless it is placed in funds for the purpose." (It is now obvious from the Fowler report that it is not likely to be in such a position in future.) To complete the farce, therefore, the operating grant included an amount of $374,000 to enable the corporation to pay its interest. Furthermore, a similar arrangement was made in respect to interest and principle for 1965-66, although this information was not disclosed by the wording of the vote.

The auditor-general also estimated that the CBC, in accordance with union agreements, paid out $450,000 in the year for work not performed. While the corporation justified this in terms of various exigencies, Mr. Henderson felt constrained to report it as "non-productive expenditure."

Not surprisingly, Mr. Henderson has been fascinated by the progress of EXPO '67. He notes that there is legislative authority for grants to the fair (by Canada, Quebec and Montreal) not exceeding $40 millions. However, a revised overall plan indicates a very large deficit, with the result that the corporation's requirement in grants is $117,620,000. (This will have to change its legislation, otherwise the corporation will be burdened with loans and interest which it will be in no position to repay.)

Borrowing Rules

There is a provision in the act permitting temporary borrowings from the government "but the aggregate of all amounts loaned under this subsection and outstanding at any time shall not exceed $1 million." Other subsections make provision for the corporation to issue securities guaranteed by Canada and Quebec. The corporation made use of this power, the arrangement being that Canada would purchase and hold them to the extent of $80 millions. A supplementary estimate for this purpose was introduced in June 22 but the vote was not passed because of adjournment and dissolution.

Mr. Henderson feels that Parliament never contemplated such an arrangement when it approved the restrictive sections of the act. In that case it seems to have been manoeuvred into a position in which it is now a free agent. This is an interesting example of how Parliament can be committed without its knowledge by a Crown corporation.

One wonders if there is not a similar risk in the CBC's favorite project of a five or ten-year charter in place of annual appropriations from Parliament.

The auditor-general includes a fairly detailed chronicle of the Bobcat project. This story is not, of course, new. It spanned 10 years. No vehicles were produced for the army and the final toll of wasted funds is officially recorded at $9,252,808.

Monks at Labor

There are some rather amusing items in Mr. Henderson's impressive list. He finds, for example, that many questionable practices have developed in connection with the municipal winter works program. Possibly the most startling case relates to a group of monks who seem to have qualified as unemployed and earned wages in construction work on a local auditorium.

Mr. Henderson, in the course of his researches, may even have discovered some of the box-cars missing from elevator points in Western Canada. Back in 1958 the department of public works decided to construct a deep water winter port at a place called Point-au-Pere.

The cost of some $3 millions included construction of a spur track (price $401,000) to the main CNR line. Evidently the dream of surging local prosperity failed to materialize. "Only four carloads were handled on the spur in 1962 and none in 1963. The primary use of the track has evidently been to bring railway cars to the wharf in winter to serve as a windbreak for ferry traffic."

Embarrassment of Riches

Dewey

PRIME Minister Harold Wilson would be the first to agree that Labor's astonishing by-election victory in the marginal constituency of Hull North was to a large extent a personal triumph. But it is just possible that he would have been happier if his triumph had been a little more modest. Of the triumph there can be no doubt. The Labor party, after giving its supporters a case of the jitters with a slow-starting campaign, confounded the experts by increasing its share of the poll from 43.3 per cent in 1964 to 52.2 per cent and its majority from 1,181 votes to 5,351.

Moreover, the underlying 4.5 per cent swing to Labor was a startling reversal of normal byelection voting patterns, which tend to operate against the ruling party.

The Hull result was also unusual in that it offered no comfort whatever to either of the opposition parties. After a razzle-dazzle campaign in which they eventually convinced themselves and most of the press that they would win, the Conservatives didn't budge their share of the poll from the 40.8 per cent they achieved in 1964.

For the Liberals, it was a disaster. The party lost its deposit when its share of the vote fell from 15.9 per cent to 6.3 per cent. So did the three independents, including Richard Gott, the Radical Alliance candidate who set out to split the Labor vote in protest against the government's support for the United States in Viet Nam. Hoping for 1,000 votes, he ended with a humiliating 253.

Tories Chastised

At first glance, there is nothing in these results to suggest that Mr. Wilson should be anything but deliriously happy. The Conservatives have been chastised just as they were threatening to launch a great new offensive in the Commons. Moreover, their rebuff at Hull should fan the flames of internal controversy in a very agreeable manner. As for the Liberals, they will now be less inclined to parade about as the people who have saved Britain from Socialism by trading on a precarious parliamentary balance of power.

However, it may be that Mr. Wilson's laurel wreath is a bit prickly. Indeed, it may be that if he had had his druthers at Hull he would have chosen a much narrower win. The reason for this strange suggestion is that the big win at Hull could inhibit Mr. Wilson's freedom to use a prime minister's most powerful political weapon—the privilege of choosing the moment for a general election—almost as much as a loss would have done.

A loss would have reduced Mr. Wilson's parliamentary majority to one seat and it would vastly have increased the risk that an emboldened Conservative Opposition might contrive to defeat the government in the Commons and force an election at a time of its own choosing. On the other hand, a modest win at Hull would have neither increased nor decreased election pressure on Mr. Wilson from within his party and cabinet. He could have continued to say, as he has been saying all along, that Labor's lead in the opinion polls didn't guarantee a general election result and that the risks were too great. In short, he could have continued his favorite game of playing it by ear.

Now, however, the findings of the opinion polls have been translated into the hard currency of votes. Members of the Labor party who have been pressing for a general election—and they are many and influential—will remind Mr. Wilson that the pro-government swing in the difficult constituency of Hull North, if applied throughout the country, would have provided Labor with a 150-seat majority.

Trend in Polls

They will also point to the fact that the opinion polls have been revealing an overall decline in the government's position since the heady days of last autumn and will argue with renewed vigor that Mr. Wilson is duty-bound to strike while the iron is still hot.

Of course, the Hull result cannot in itself force Mr. Wilson's hand. But it will dangerously increase the politcal risks of his present course. If the polls should suddenly turn against the government—and there are huge storm clouds on the political horizon—he would come under the heaviest possible fire for not having gained the party another five years in office when he apparently had the chance.

The results of the Hull byelection would then be brandished, not by his admirers as evidence of a great victory, but by his enemies as evidence of an opportunity tragically lost.

Something New in Cats

Medical scientists sometimes speak about the behavior of the animals on which they experiment. Lovers of justice for all creatures have long been concerned about the behavior of the scientists.

At Cornell University Medical College, New York, a tax-supported experiment is described: "As a beginning for a behavioral study, cats were completely deprived of their senses of sight, sound and smell."

Then follows a description of the method by which this was accomplished.

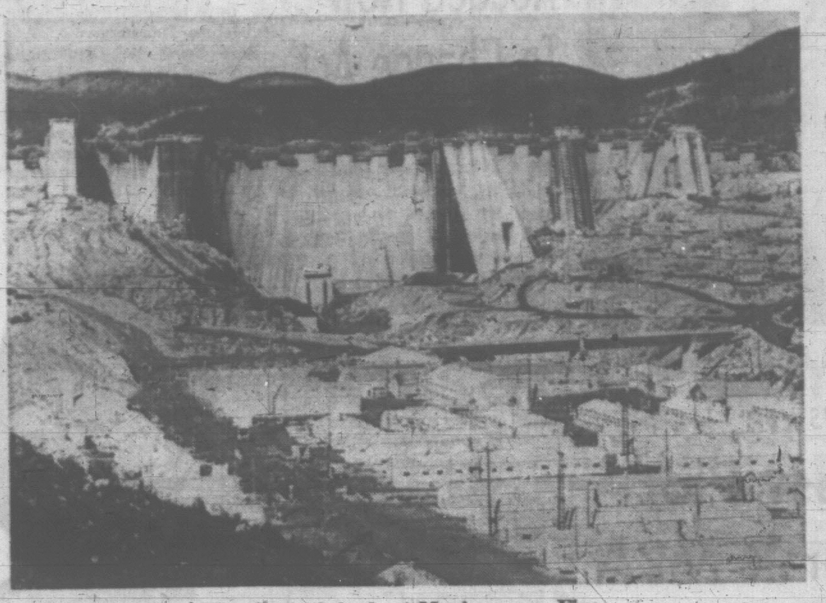
Ten blind, deaf, anosmic cats were studied as long as six years. Some particularly heartless persons may say, "They're only animals." But the late Professor Slosson said: "The final experiment must be on man."—Crusader.

Manicouagan: A Symbol of the 'New Quebec'

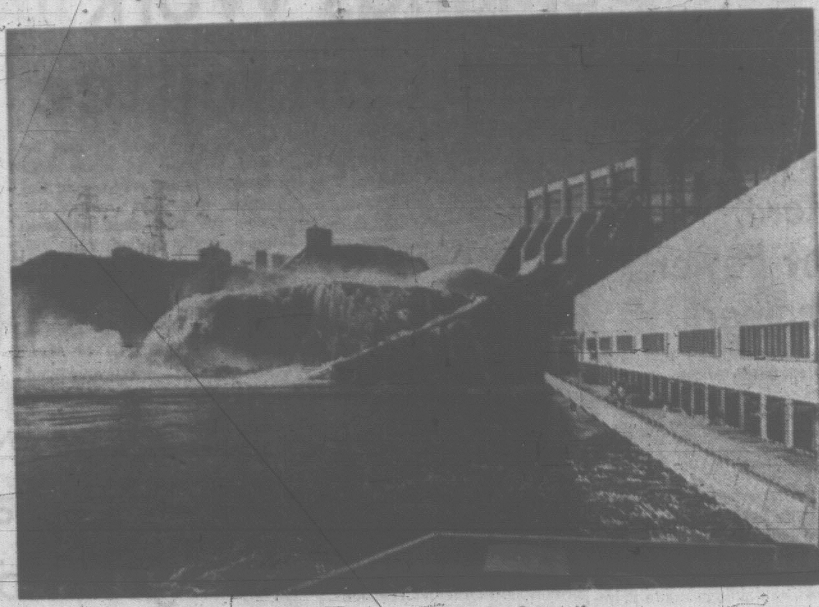
$2 Billion Project Bringing Industry

(Like British Columbia, the province of Quebec is engaged in a mighty development of its hydro-electric resources, seeing in them the hope for a more prosperous future through the wealth which is created by power. Here the Times Quebec correspondent describes the huge Manicouagan-Outardes project which dwarfs even the Peace River development in this province.)

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Quebec Correspondent



Central Arch at Manicouagan Five



Manicouagan Two Now in Operation

Some of those "acres of snow" that Voltaire scoffed at in the days of old New France have turned out to be among the greatest assets of modern Quebec.

McDowell

The snow falls 13 feet deep in an average winter on the wild land that is the watershed of the Manicouagan River.

The river, flowing south from Lake Manicouagan into the St. Lawrence near Baie Comeau, 250 miles east of Quebec City, drains 17,600 square miles. The spring runoff, from that depth of snow over that area, is enough to set the water gushing at 200,000 cubic feet per second through the river mouth.

But no more spring torrents will go raging down the 250-mile course (with 1,900 feet of fall) of the Manicouagan. The old watercourse itself is desappearing, swamped by its own waters, as a series of dams turns the river into a chain of colossal reservoirs, and one of the greatest sources of hydro-electric power for Quebec's growing industry.

When installations at four power sites on the Manicouagan, and three sites on its sister river the Outardes, are completed by 1973 at a cost of over $2 billion, the Manicouagan-Outardes development will be capable of pouring 5,504,000 kilowatts into Hydro-Quebec's power grid.

But Manicouagan is much more than a great addition to a public utility. It has become a symbol of the new Quebec.

To many people in French-Canada the development is a spectacular answer to the old myth that French Canadians make great painters and poets but are no world-beaters at practical matters like engineering and industry.

New Industry

The fact is that the harnessing of the Manicouagan and Outardes rivers is contributing mightily to the growth of Quebec as an industrial society.

Its development has brought in new industries, from the United States and Europe, to supply components and materials for power plants and transmission lines and has stimulated the expansion of industries that were already in the province.

Its promise, of plentiful electric power, has been one of the key factors in the establishment of 2,835 new industrial plants in Quebec in the last five years.

With striking timing, a few weeks after the first power began flowing from Manic 2, Hydro-Quebec's single largest customer, Quebec Iron and Titanium Corporation at Sorel, announced a $13.5 million expansion

The heart of that expansion is a new electric furnace that is half again as large as any now in operation.

The project, moreover, commits the province to an all-out effort to develop its industry.

Electric power cannot be stored. A power plant that is ready before it is needed is an investment that pays no return. To make Manicouagan pay, the demand for power must keep pace with its ability to produce power.

Although Manicouagan is one of the glowing names of the "quiet revolution," and rated proud mention in the recent speech from the throne of the Lesage government, the first serious work toward its development began in the late 1950s, the last years of the Duplessis era.

Started in 1962

But it was in 1962 that construction began on the main dam, largest of its kind in the world. And that was the year that Rene Levesque, then minister of hydraulic resources, waged his high-voltage campaign for the nationalization of the privately-owned electric power companies and made hydro power one of the symbols of the French-Canadian renaissance.

From then on "Manic" was more that just a great engineering undertaking, although on that score alone it is impressive enough.

The heart of the whole Manicouagan development is the immense, multiple-arch butressed dam at the site called Manic 5, some 125 miles upstream from the river mouth. It will control the flow of the river to provide a constant source of power at all generating stations the year round.

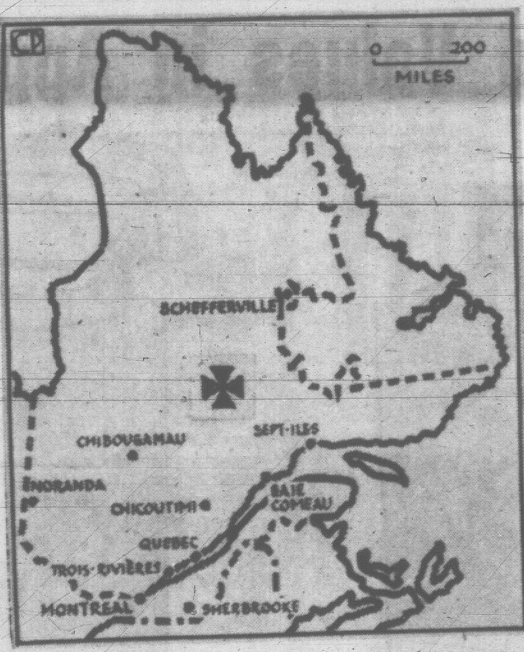
Everything about the Manic 5 dam is on a Paul Bunyan scale. It is being built in 14 arches, the central one 703 feet high and 530 feet between butresses. The whole dam, its arches striding 4,310 feet across the valley like a cross-section of some strange and immense cathedral, is almost 83 feet thick at the base of the central arch, and will carry a 17-foot roadway across its top.

The batching plant used in its construction turns out 320 cubic yards of concrete an hour. It will have mixed 2,900,000 cubic yards when the dam is finished.

Behind the dam the waters are already backing up into a reservoir that will contain 115,00,000 acre feet — that's 5,000 billions of cubic feet — and cover 800 square miles.

Because it will take eight years to build up such a volume, impounding of water began in 1964 and continues as the dam is built, with the water rising 50 feet below the crest of the dam.

This reservoir will provide a head of 505 feet to the Manic-5 power plant: eight 225,00-horsepower turbines, each driving a 168,000-kilowatt generator.



Cross on map above locates centre of Manicouagan-Outardes project in the heart of Quebec's wilderness, 250 miles north of Quebec City.

The plant's total installed capacity of 1,344,000 kilowatts is to be completed in 1971. First power will start flowing from Manic 5 in 1968.

Water from the tail-race at Manic 5 will enter a second reservoir, created by the dam at Manic 3, about 50 miles above the river mouth.

There will be no Manic 4 plant. The waterfall at the site that was named Manic 4, between Manic 3 and Manic 5, will be submerged by the 315 billion cubic feet of water backing up from the Manic 3 dam to the Manic 5 tail-race.

Seven Turbines

The head of water at Manic 3, boosted by adding the drop of the old falls at Manic 4, will be 310 feet. It will be used to drive seven 210,00-horsepower turbines turning seven 160, 430-kilowatt generators.

The Manic 2 plant, fed by water from a 344,000 acre-foot headpond behind a 300-foot dam, is already in partial operation.

Late in 1965 five of it eight 126,900-kilowatt generators began driving out electric power across the province to Montreal on a 735-kilovolt power line, the highest power-line voltage in the world. All eight generators are to be at work by 1967.

Flowing on down from Manic 2 the river has one more round of work to be done before its fresh waters merge with St. Lawrence salt.

At First Falls, near the river mouth, there is the McCormick generating station, operated by the Manicouagan Power Company, a subsidiary of Quebec North Shore Paper.

Power Added

The McCormick plant turned out 191,250 kilowatts up until 1965. Last year two additional 60,000-kilowatt generators started turning.

They were installed by the company at the request of Hydro-Quebec, to make use of the increase in available water resulting from control of the river's flow by the Manic 5 dam.

Hydro-Quebec will have its own plant as well at First Falls. This Manic 1 station, operating under the same 124-foot head of water as the older plant, will develop 180,000 kilowatts. The first of its three generators is to start this year.

A third of the total power of the Manicouagan-Outardes development will come from three power sites on the Outardes.

The Outardes, which falls 1,800 feet over a 350-mile course roughly parallel to the Manicouagan, drains a 7,258-square-mile watershed and empties into the St. Lawrence some 15 miles west of the Manicouagan's mouth.

The control dam on the Outardes will be at Outardes 4, some 58 miles above Outardes Falls and 65 miles above the mouth.

The main dam, 380 feet high, will be supported by seven other dams that will cut off open valleys to enclose 860 billion cubic feet of water in a new lake that covers 252 square miles.

Thus controlled, the water can be released in a steady flow of 12,500 cubic feet per second to drive generators turning out 632,00 kilowatts.

Two Sites

This controlled flow will also make it possible to develop 760,000 and 632,000 kilowatts at two sites further downstream, the last of them at Outardes Falls, where a small plant has been operating since 1937, supplying power to Baie Comeau pulp mills.

First power from the new Outardes developments is expected in 1968 and full output from all of them by 1969.

One of the side effects of the Manicouagan-Outardes development has been, the construction in Quebec of the highest-voltage power line in the world.

Because the greatest part of the demand for power in the province continues to be in the Montreal region, 400 miles away, the problem of current loss in transmission over such a distance was serious.

Engineers had the choice of installing the conductors of enormous size that would have been needed to carry the immense wattage turned out by Manicouagan-Outardes, or to take on the technical challenge of a higher voltage than had ever been turned onto a transmission line.

Stepped Up

Their decision was to step the power up to 735 kilovolts. The first of three lines went into use last fall when power was turned on at Manic 2.

Demand for electric power doubles, in Canada, every 10 years. Hydro-Quebec is already looking into the potential of rivers flowing into James Bay and other northern waters to meet the future demand.

The corporation's view is that eventually all the rivers will have been exploited and they will have to turn to large-scale use of nuclear power generation.

But for the present, nuclear power would be extremely costly, in comparison with hydro power.

Provinces, like Quebec and British Columbia; with a wealth of rivers to develop, can afford to wait until nuclear generating stations are a better buy.

Britain's Churches Losing Their Grip

By CECIL NORTHCOTT

More than seven million people are missing from the registers of the Church of England according to the latest statistics. These are people who in their teen-age years were "confirmed" in membership of the church but later neglected to go to church at least once a year.

The figures show that each year the church "confirms" over nine million young people but loses seven million of them. The key statistic is the total number of people who make their Easter Communion. This has dropped to 2,300,000 a year.

One of the prime reasons for this serious fall is the shortage of parochial clergy which has fallen over the last decade from 15,000 to 11,000. The clergy also are ageing, the present average being 53 which is considered to be too old for active work among young people.

An even more serious situation in the religious life of England is revealed by the figures for baptisms. These amount to 27 million but when it comes to regular church attendance and support of the church these baptised millions produce only just over two millions of faithful church people.

Ten thousand members a year are likely to be lost by the Methodist Church in England if the present decline goes on. What was the fastest growing church in England in the 19th century has now become the church that will lose 100,000 members by 1975 according to a survey made by the Methodist Home Missions department just issued.

Social Change

Dr. Leslie Davidson, commenting on the situation, says the decline is partly due to changed social conditions in England. Methodism used to appeal to the lower middle and upper working classes but those class distinctions are now becoming middle class where the Methodist evangelical appeal is weakest.

Total membership of the Methodist Church is now 700,000. In 1933 it was 856,000. During this period the population of England has increased by 500,000 a year, but Methodism has failed to keep up with the increase in population.

Driver Suspension Proposal Could Touch Off Big Rumpus

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Well, the political war is joined again but the troops still seem to be ambling towards the front rather than sallying out of their seats for tongue-to-tongue combat.

Mika

By comparison with other campaigns, the opening days of the current legislative session were strangely quiet.

Even the opposition leaders' traditional counter-attack against the government's throne speech seemed to be a remote business, like a set-piece artillery barrage fired to a predetermined pattern which was endured by the targets with relatively little screaming.

Perhaps all the members are too pre-occupied with the question of redistribution which undoubtedly will be terrible for some. Exactly which ones won't be known until the government makes up its mind on the Angus Commission's report.

This is not to say the fuses of controversy have not been lit—just that they're slow burning.

A big rumpus, outside if not inside the legislature, could be touched off over the "roadside suspensions" proposal.

Almost 10 years ago I sat in a press gallery when Saskatchewan's provincial treasurer, Clarence M. Fines, introduced this country's first legislation permitting an agent of the state to suspend a driver's licence on the basis of a Breathalyzer test and it started a long and bitter argument that spilled out of that legislature and into almost every living room, street corner and beer parlor.

This week, I listened to Attorney-General Robert Bonner give a rough outline of how B.C. proposed to become the second province to venture in this direction.

Mr. Bonner's proposal is not quite as bold as Fine's plan and therefore it is not likely to be as controversial—still, a decade has not hushed my memory of the violent din that arose not only in Saskatchewan but across the country, particularly among lawyers, to greet the Saskatchewan bill.

There probably will be some echoes of the same basic arguments for and against the B.C. plan in the weeks ahead so here's what to expect.

The Saskatchewan legislation was aimed at virtually compelling—through the threat of a licence suspension or cancellation—a driver to take a blood-alcohol test which could be used as evidence against him in a court case or justification for a licence suspension by bureaucratic order.

This, of course, raised the cry of infringement of civil liberty and a back-door effort to circumvent the principle that no one should be compelled or intimidated into incriminating himself in respect of a criminal charge.

But the nub of the argument soon was revealed as a political issue, in the broadest sense.

This revolved around the nature of a subject's use of the Queen's highway.

If this was an unqualified right many contended, then officialdom clearly had no business interfering with a driver's credentials to use that road before he was convicted of any offence.

The counter-argument ran that free use of the highway was available only in the sense that the subject's person could not be barred from it—that is to say, he could walk on it.

But bringing a motor vehicle, wagon, bicycle or what-have-you onto that same road was a conditional privilege and the best proof of this was the fact that both cars and drivers had to be licensed in the first place. And submission to blood tests was just another condition.

All the arguments that began about the accident statistics, the demon rum and other aspects of the question usually wound up with the antagonists divided only by their attitude to this one point: Is driving a car a right or a privilege?

Soviets Set For Chinese Showdown

By LAJOS LEDERER

LONDON — Delegates from 79 out of the world's 81 Communist parties — the two absentees will be China and Albania — are due to meet in conference soon with the object of revitalising and reuniting the movement, so long at odds and at cross-purposes.

Place and date have not yet been announced, but it is clear that high on the agenda will be a proposal, certain to be carried, to excommunicate China and her ally, little Albania.

The calling of the conference is a triumph for Soviet leaders Brezhnev and Kosygin; they have succeeded where Khrushchev failed. It has taken months of patient consultation betweeen the two Russians and the leaders of the major Communist parties — with the exception of China and Albania — to hammer out differences and to reach agreement on all issues, issues which had divided the Communist camp since Peking publicly denounced Moscow two years ago.

As a result of policy changes by Mr. Khrushchev's successors, which eased relations with their East European allies and made important concessions to other Communist parties, the long decline of Moscow's authority in the world Communist movement has come to an end.

ON MUNICIPAL RELATIONS

Grit Demands Work For House Committee

A written ruling to decide a procedural question that has caused violent argument in the B.C. legislature for the second year running is expected to be handed down Monday by Speaker William Murray.

The issue came to a head Thursday when Alan Macfarlane (L—Oak Bay) raised a point of order in the legislature to seek a ruling on whether legislative committees have the right to ask the legislature to give them some work.

Earlier in the day, the municipal affairs committee was disrupted when Mr. Macfarlane was overridden by chairman Herb Bruch (SC—Esquimalt) in his attempt to have the committee request the legislature to refer to it for study of Greater Victoria inter-municipal committee's demand for a hearing this session on provincial-municipal relations.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Macfarlane seized the floor on the point of order when the legislature's regular session opened and raised the question again despite some running demands from Premier Bennett and Attorney-general Robert Bonner that the speaker rule him out of order.

At one point, a heckle lost to hearing in the galleries above cause Opposition Leader Robert Strachan to shout at Mr. Bonner: "You are a smart, pompous ass."

But the speaker did not rebuke Mr. Strachan or rule Mr. Macfarlane out of order.

1948 RULING

Mr. Macfarlane said a 1948 speaker's ruling held that no legislative committee could make a report or a recommendation on a subject to the legislature unless it had been asked to study it first.

"But that doesn't mean the committe can't respectfully ask the house to submit something to it for examination," he said.

"There was no suggestion this morning that the committe examine or inquire into any matter. My motion only was that it request the legislature to refer a matter to it for study.

"The point I make goes to the very root of the reason for having committees. The question is whether a committee is going to have life or whether it is going to be sterile.

"Can the members ask to be put to work or must they just sit there impotent."

Mr. Speaker Murray said he agreed a point of order was involved and observed that the question had had much discussion in the past without being formally settled.

"I think the point is an interesting one and I would like to have the courtesy of the house to bring in a written ruling on the subject," he said.

His request was approved without dissent.

'More, Not Fewer' Members

Government policy and redistribution came under attack in the legislature Thursday by one of its own members.

Jacob Huhn (SC—North Peace River) became the third government member to openly criticize the recommendations made by the Angus Royal Commission on Redistribution.

He told the House that distances involved in representing the northern ridings made it impossible for the area to be served by fewer members.

The commission recommended giving more representation to the populous Greater Vancouver and lower mainland area while taking seats away from the north by expanding the ridings.

Cyril Shelford (SC—Omineca) questioned the recommendation Wednesday in the light of recent development in the north and J. Donald Smith (SC—Victoria City) suggested the addition of five members to represent the north.

Mr. Huhn said the urban residents of the province likely do not realize the vast distances involved in the sparsely-populated north.

"These well-populated regions have municipal government to represent the people whereas most of the northern area is unorganized territory.

"What bothers me is that now the north is beginning to develop we're getting rid of its members."

Mr. Huhn's criticism of government road policy—not enough paving for the north—brought a quip from Dave Barrett (NDP—Dewdney):

"You should be a member of the opposition."

Mr. Huhn went on to say the government was not providing enough campsites and parks in his riding and not changing the Motor Vehicles Act to allow northern residents to leave their cars running unatttended in winter.

STEWART-CASSIAR ANSWER

Corridor 'East Plot' Charges North MLA

Demands for Ottawa to negotiate a corridor through the Alaska panhandle were blasted Thursday by a northern MLA who said it was an "eastern" plot.

Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) said that "every time (Northern Affairs Minister) Art Laing comes back from the east, for lack of something to say, he shouts 'let's have a corridor.'

"Well I don't go along with that," Mr. Calder told the legislature.

"I am an advocate of the Stewart-Cassiar Highway and Stewart (most northern community on the B.C. coast) could be our corridor when it is built. It has a fine harbor and only needs the road."

WON'T SHARE COST

He said Premier Bennett deserved praise for deciding to complete the Stewart-Cassiar Highway by 1967 despite Ottawa's refusal to share costs of a $15 million final leg.

"You put a corridor through southeastern Alaska and you're going to practically kill the highway."

Mr. Calder, an Indian, also took issue with Mr. Laing on Indian policy.

"Laing says he doesn't want to get rid of reservations, well I'm one boy who does.

"He says keep them—he's just so doggone many years behind the times."

Mr. Calder also said he strongly favored transfer of Indian affairs from the federal government to the B.C. government.

"In all the other provinces they (Indians) may not agree with this because its a binding clause in the treaties they signed but we have no treaty Indians in this province," he said.

"The constitution doesn't provide for segregation yet we are treated separately in this province . . . give us (Indians) the same treatment in this province as everyone else."

Mr. Calder urged the cabinet at the next federal-provincial conference to demand jurisdiction over B.C. Indians from the federal government.

"I have been criticized by some of our own Indian leaders for advocating such a bold step.

"But one day that is exactly what is going to happen so let's be bold and set this up. Try it. If it doesn't succeed, rub it out and try something else.

"But I am certain that if we take this action, we won't go wrong."

Former, Globe Mail Publisher Dies

TORONTO (CP) — Harry G. Kimber, former president and publisher of The Globe and Mail and active in the Canadian newspaper industry for more than 40 years, died today after a long illness. He was 73.

He was appointed president and publisher of The Globe and Mail in 1952

'Another Shot Needed Now To Change Act'

Redistribution of provincial constituencies would only be half a reform if the Elections Act is not amended to make it easier for persons to be registered as voters, the legislature was told Thursday.

Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) said he sympathized with other northern MLAs' complaints that the proposed new ridings would be too large for one man to represent, but said "I'm one who may just accept the boundaries as they are set forth" by the royal commission report.

"But, the question of redistribution is just half the story," he said, speaking across to Premier Bennett. "If you're going to give one needle in the redistribution seats then you've got to give another shot in the seat of the Elections Act."

SEVEN-DAY DEADLINE

Mr. Calder noted that the present act puts a seven-day deadline on registration of voters in rural ridings.

"It is absolutely impossible in Atlin and other ridings to register the people in seven days."

WILL STAND ALONE

Mr. Calder also dissociated himself from other NDP members—including leader Robert Strachan—who accused the government of trying to stall demands for government auto insurance by setting up a royal commission study.

"I contradict anyone on this side of the house that argues putting this to a commission means waiting two or three years," he said. "I don't believe that."

Sooke-Jordon Road Breaking Up

Highways Minister Philip Gaglardi was criticized by one of his own backbenchers in the legislature Thursday.

Herb Bruch (SC—Esquimalt) complained that the Sooke-Jordan River Road is breaking up.

"The minister said at the last session that he would repave this road but unfortunately this has not been done," he said.

"I would urge the minister to let a contract so surfacing can get underway eraly this spring."

Mr. Bruch also said reconstruction of several roads in the Happy Valley and Cobble Hill areas is needed.

The Social Credit caucus chairman said he was pleased to see the B.C. Medical Plan being well received in this area despite some early difficulties which he did not detail.

"I'm glad to see the people who were in a financial squeeze before coming into the plan now," he said. "It was unfortunate that there were some initial troubles."

Smooth talk will never make a whisky mellow.

Extra charcoal filtering will. That's why every drop of Gooderham's Brown Jug is filtered through layer after layer of hard maple charcoal. It's a slow process, but we're in no hurry. In fact when it's finished, we take the time to do it all over again. Just to make sure Brown Jug is perfectly polished. Remember that when someone tries to smooth-talk you into buying another brand of whisky. The charcoal filtering story is printed on the back of every bottle of Gooderham's Brown Jug. Why don't you pick one up and read it sometime?

Gooderham's have been distilling fine whiskies since 1832.

INDIAN PEOPLE WILL BE PAID . . . . . . NATIVE MLA TELLS LEGISLATURE

'I Congratulate You on 100th Birthday, But . . .'

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

FRANK CALDER . . . they listened

Choking with emotion, British Columbia's only Indian MLA Thursday predicted that the white man will never get away with his land grab—that the account will be paid in full some day.

"I'm going to predict in this Centennial year that some day we're going to be paid for the land in this province," said Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin).

"I tell you—whether you believe it now or not — that one day a government will sit on that side of the fence and it's going to damn well pay for the province of British Columbia," he said waving at the government benches.

INTENSE DELIVERY

Mr. Calder, visibly struggling with himself to keep his control, punched the air with his finger and slapped his desk to emphasize his points many times. He repeated himself over and over to underline his message.

An intent silence settled on both sides of the house during his remarks about the land question.

Mr. Calder said he wanted to congratulate the province on the current centennial celebrating the union of the colonies of Vancouver Island and B.C. mainland.

"As a member of the people who witnessed — I hate to say the word — the advent of the white man, I congratulate you on this 100th birthday of the province," he began.

"In that 100 years my people have had a rough go of it, but there have been some of our goals achieved and I'm sure that in the next 100 years, through good, constructive negotiations there will be more.

NOT LONG TIME

"Being here 100 years may seem like a long time for some people but for my people, who were here first, it is not a long time."

Applause from all sides, the only interruption to his remarks, greeted his statement:

"Some of our achievements in the past 100 years are the vote and the fact that I am standing here and I predict that in the next 100 there will be more of my people sitting in this house."

Mr. Calder said he conscientiously tried to speak for all his constituents but occasionally, because he was Indian, he had to give voice to Indian causes.

"We are gaining many legislative goals — but we have one thing in this province which is foremost in the minds of the Indians and that is known as the British Columbia land question."

Mr. Calder noted that the question was part of the Supreme Court case involved in the recent series of actions dealing with the question of Indian hunting and fishing rights outside of game regulations.

He said he did not want to discuss the case or the issue except to remind everyone again that British Columbia is the only province in which there has not been a treaty signed by the Indians.

NO SETTLEMENT

"There has been no settlement as far as the land is concerned — no treaty and no payment.

"In this Centennial year, if the premier doesn't see fit to recognize the rights of the Indians to a settlement, then I'm telling you that one day — even after all of us here are gone — there is going to be a settlement.

"It is going to be settled — it is going to be settled. You may not believe it now, but I tell you it is going to be settled."

First waving at the Socred benches, then at the NDP benches, he continued with emotion:

"If not by this government . . . if not by that government . . . I still say to you — it is going to be settled some day'

"This is the only place in the world where the people have not been paid for their land — we've never been paid for it!

"But one day we are going to be paid for this province."

Protect Consumer, Curb Sharp Dealers NDPer Urges House

The legislature was urged Thursday to get tough with shoddy goods and sharp dealers by enacting consumer protection laws.

Tony Gargrave (NDP—Mackenzie) suggested a publicly-supported consumers' council, controls on pedlars, an interest rate disclosure act, revision of conditional sales legislation, subsidized consumer report organizations and Better Business Bureau, and safety certification of used cars.

Stressing the need for quality in daily life, Mr. Gargrave said it is important that the consumer be protected "and informed to enable him to avoid faudulent practices and make wise selections in the market place so that businessmen and consumers may benefit.

"Shoddy goods and sharp dealers should be driven from the market place so that men can improve quality of their goods and services, the person of small means stretch his income and the busy man of affluence obtain good quality," he said.

Common law's rule, "let the buyer beware," is not broad enough to cover business dealings in one of the world's most affluent societies, Mr. Gargrave said.

Quality, not quantity, should be the aim of the market place.

He said a small minority of high-pressure door-to-door salesmen "should be swept aside."

A short contract cooling-off period to allow for cancellation of contracts should be allowed.

Off-premises salesmen should be licensed centrally; bonds should be required, and false advertising should mean offence in law.

A prospective buyer should be helped to decide whether to pay cash, obtain credit or wait and not purchase, which could be done through an interest rate disclosure act, he said.

The cash price of goods, total lump sum cost of carrying charges and rate of simple interest per year should be outlined, the speaker said.

Conditional sales legislation should be standardized, as with insurance policies, he argued.

When a contract is terminated early, the buyer should get an interest rebate, and when a certain percentage has been paid off, the chattel should not be repossessed. He cited several British practices which he found commendable.

Mr. Gargrave said existing legislation needs to be more aggressively applied through police to deal with faudulent pedlars and confidence men.

There should be insistence on accurate, informative package labelling, so that a housewife need not compare grams with ounces to decide whether the "giant economy size" really costs less, he said.

MLA Opposes Free Tuition For Students

Free university education was opposed Thursday by Herb Bruch (SC—Esquimalt).

He said university graduates make much more money in a lifetime than other workers "and the university students should have the responsibility to take this into account when they advocate free education."

Mr. Bruch said if undergraduates were to be given grants to cover tuition on the ground that they enrich the country later, "then are we going to say to the young man who wants to go into logging that he can have so many acres of crown forest for free?

"After all, he will be creating wealth and jobs too, yet that's the argument these professions use for university fees." he said.

SKI TRIP

Mr. Bruch also said he heard of some undergraduates working as security guards at a mainland dock area during their vacation who left four freighters at anchor unable to offload cargoes "because the security guards had gone off on a six-day ski trip."

"You can't have the parents of children who can't afford a university education or a six-day ski trip to pay the shot for a free education for university students," he said.

Mr. Bruch had some harsh words for vocational students too.

"In some of the machine shops, it's almost intolerable when a young man comes in with a diploma and thinks he knows it all," he said.

He said the education department should obtain closer cooperation from industry to inject more practical teaching into vocational school and apprenticeship programs to balance the theoretical training.

BEER PARLORS

'Pour It Down Your Throat Plan'

Any British Columbian disgusted with American commercialism should take a hard look at his own beer parlors, Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) told the legislature Thursday.

He said the sight should convert everyone to his view that legislation should be enacted to eliminate beer parlors and allow grocery stores to sell beer.

"I watch these people who sling beer," he said. "They have a trayful ready right there so you don't even get a chance to ask for a glass—it's a sort of 'pour it down your throat' plan.

COMMERCIALISM

"I've heard about commercialism in the United States but at least they don't pour it down your throat. When you go into a bar there, they wait for you to order before they bring anything."

He said people want the liquor act amended — particularly in outlying areas where liquor stores are rare—"not so we can drink more but so that we can be moderate drinkers, buy a few cans at the grocery store and take them home to drink."

Stop Moonlighting

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—The man who wrote the lyrics for the Bossa Nova hit, The Girl from Ipanema, has been told by his superiors at the foreign ministry to quit moonlighting. Vinicius de Morais, 53, a consul who also is a poet and journalist, was ordered to stop making public appearances under a rule that prohibits Brazilian diplomats from outside activities.

Dutch Donate Bell Instrument To B.C. Museum

A 37-bell carillon worth between $25,000 and $30,000 will be installed in the Centennial museum-archives now under construction beside the Legislative Buildings.

The instrument will be donated by the Dutch community of the province as a centennial gift, B.C. centennial chairman L. J. Wallace said Thursday.

L. R. Doorman, Vancouver, chairman of the Netherlands Community Centennial Committee, explained reasons for the choice in a letter to Dutch residents in the province.

"By presenting this gift your committee had thought this would express the feelings of all Dutch people in B.C. and show our gratitude toward Canada for everything we have received."

Industrial Harmony Aim of New Committee

A labor-management committee to promote industrial harmony in the province will be formed, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson announced in the Legislature Thursday.

Mr. Peterson made no mention of the fact but the committee had an additional significance because it placed one of the labor movement's "black sheep" in a joint committee for the first time.

'PROMINENT ROLE'

He is E. M. Lawson, president of the Teamster's Joint Council No. 36, who criticized the proposed general strike last fall and played a prominent role in fashioning the settlement formula of the oil industry dispute which prevented the B.C.-wide strike.

The significant factor is the the Teamsters were drummed out of the Canadian Labor Congress and B.C. Federation of Labor and still are considered beyond the pale by most unionists.

GOODWILL

The committee, headed by deputy labor minister William Sands, will also include the fiery secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, Pat O'Neal, who helped fashion the general strike ultimatum.

"Needless to say, a great amount of goodwill will be required if this new project is to be successful," said Mr. Peterson.

"The new committee will be asked to accept a much greater responsibility and undertake duties which will be much wider in scope than those performed by the Conference Planning Committee.

"I believe it is reasonable to expect representatives of labor and management to consider more controversial matters than has been the case in the past."

Mr. Peterson said although the exact functions of the committee have not been clearly defined one of its first jobs would be to examine the findings of Dr. J. T. Montague, director of the Institute of Industrial Relations at the University of B.C., who has been appointed to make a study of the manpower needs of the province.

Dr. Montague is named as vice-chairman of the new committee.

Other members are: John Billings, president of Forest Industrial Relation Ltd.; R. K. Gervin, secretary-manager of the B.C. Federation of Construction Associations; F. Fieber, secretary-treasurer, Western Canadian Regional Council No. 1, International Woodworkers of America; R. S. Wilson, works manager, Vancouver Plant, Aluminum Company of Canada.

J. R. St. Eloi, president, Vancouver, New Westminster and District Building Construction Trades Council; D. R. Blair, president, Pulp and Paper, Industrial Relations Bureau; S. G. Green, Canadian vice-president, International Brotherhood of Pulp and Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers Union; C. H. Mitchell, secretary, Mining Association of B.C.

3 Mines Hit High for Year

Three mines — Dynasty, Arlington and Slocan — rose to 1966 highs in fairly active trading in Vancouver today while industrials continued to score moderate gains at Toronto.

AT VANCOUVER Dynasty rose 37 cents to $22.37, Arlington put on 12 cents to $1.25 and Slocan gained 23 to 84 cents on 415,000 shares.

Midwest and Lytton also touched 1966 highs, Midwest gaining five cents to one dollar and Lytton putting on three to 57 cents.

Patricia Silver lost eight to 92 cents.

Rolling Hills was up five to 63 cents.

AT TORONTO Ford of Canada, which announced its 1965 profit had risen to $15,400,000 from $7,400,000 in 1965, climbed 8 points to 155.

CPR was ahead ⅞ to 63⅞, Bathurst Paper ¾ to 24¾, Bell Telephone ⅝ to 59¾ and Aluminium ½ to 37⅜.

In golds McIntyre was ahead 1 to 100, Kerr Addison ⅛ to 11⅞ and Hollinger ¼ to 27¾. Bralorne and Cochenour Willans added 5 cents each at 4.20 and 4.85.

In speculative activity D'Eldona moved up 10 cents to 1.38, Windfall 8 to 36 cents, and Readiore 7 cents to 1.31. Vandoo lost 1 to 9½ cents.

AT NEW YORK the stock market held a moderate gain in relatively quiet trading late this afternoon.

Volume for the day was estimated at 7,000,000 shares compared with 8,160,000 Thursday.

The averages were bolstered by gains of selected blue chips. American Telephone and Air Reduction rose more than a point each, General Motors nearly a point, Du Pont and U.S. Steel tractions.

Ford was up more than a point, responding to record quarterly earnings. It was heavily traded.

Zenith slid nearly 3. Xerox advanced about 2½.

Liggett and Myers dropped 2 in reaction to disappointing earnings.

AT MONTREAL stock prices rallied towards 2 p.m. today as most sections moved fractionally higher in light trading.

Industrial volume was 82,500 and mines and oils 512,000.

Papers were higher with Price Bros. and Domtar each climbing ¼ to 34¼ and 20½ respectively.

Among the utilities Bell Telephone and CPR each rose ½ to 59⅝ and 63⅜ respectively. Quebec Natural and Nova Scotia Light each added ½ to 14½ and 37¼ respectively.

Banks were higher. Royal and Scotia Each advanced ½ to 78¼ and 74½ respectively.

AT LONDON rumors of a March election stimulated the market today and brought some sharp rises in steels. The announcement of an agreement between British Petroleum and the gas council on the price of North Sea gas lifted BP's shares 1s 3d to 67s 7½d. Burmah Oil added 6d and other oils were strong.

Heavy Water Out

MONTREAL (CP)—A 250,000-kilowatt nuclear power plant, planned by Hydro-Quebec to go into operation in the early 1970s, will be built much more cheaply than existing Canadian plants, a nuclear power authority said. The plant will use ordinary water rather than the heavy water generally used in Canadian reactors, said J. W. Stirling of the atomic fuel department of Canadian Westinghouse Co.

GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — March rapeseed futures shot ahead the maximum permitted 15 cents while the deferred months advanced about five cents in thin trading today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Other commodities moved in a narrow range in moderate trade. Export interest was quiet.

FOR NEW TOWN

Myra Falls Name Eyed

By AB KENT
Times Business Writer

A new suburban-type mining town in Strathcona Provincial Park may be named Myra Falls, Western Mines' general manager C. M. Campbell said Thursday.

If Recreation Minister Kiernan accepts the company's proposal to build on the picturesque east side of Buttle Lake the site will look toward Myra Falls about a mile across the lake.

Mr. Kiernan so far wants the town to be built on desolate Thelwood burn, a narrow canyon-like site subject to snow slides, which was razed in a forest fire about eight years ago.

Mr. Campbell said it is the "ugliest place on Vancouver Island."

Building the town to house some 300 miners and their families on a site such as Thelwood Creek would be a "giant obstruction" to the best interests of both miners and the park.

FOREST SITE

Thelwood lies about five miles around the southern tip of the lake from the forested site suggested by Mr. Campbell.

Regular production of 750 tons a day is expected to begin this summer at the company's Lynx mine above Myra Creek. Shipping of ore concentrates to deep-sea wharf facilities at Campbell River should start in the late summer.

Construction of the highway is being timed to co-incide with completion of the custom mill and installation of a 4,500 horse-power hydro-electric station on Tennant Lake nearby.

Mr. Campbell said some leadership and counsel from the department of recreation and conservation is required to allow construction on the townsite to start.

A decision has been coming for 15 months, the manager said.

LONG WHARF

According to agreement with the government, Western Mines will pay the $2 million road-building bill, install the $1 million hydro facility to power the mill — and perhaps another to supply the town—in addition to erecting an extended wharf for $1 million and spending about $3 million on the town.

It will post $100,000 performance bond and turn over the hydro and townsite to the government if desired.

A total of $15 million is expected to be spent on development.

"The road will transform the wilderness into an active recreation area. It will necessitate creation of first-class housing for the miners, the basis of the economy, who are entitled to the best environment their work can provide," Mr. Campbell said.

CATTLE EXPORT JUMPS

Shipments of cattle from the B.C. Interior to the U.S. increased nearly 600 per cent between 1964 and 1965, according to a provincial department of agricultural release.

Shipped in 1965 were 36,555 head of cattle compared with 6,406 head the previous year.

No reason is given for the increase.

At the same time cattle shipped to the prairies, while in larger number, went up only 8,592 head, the release says.

In 1964, 49,875 head of cattle were shipped there from B.C., while last year the figure was 58,467.

Cattle purchased for export by American buyers last year were bought at cattle sales at Williams Lake, Okanagan Falls, Merritt, Quesnel, Spillamacheen, Dawson Creek, Kamloops and Cranbrook.

Total cattle inspections for the province were 195,171 head, an increase of 50,365 head over 1964.

HIDE SHIPMENTS

Inspections of cattle from the Cariboo increased 4,796 to reach 32,857 in 1965, and a total of 73,823 inspections were made at Kamloops-Nicola, an increase of 15,783 over the previous year.

Hide shipments went up 15,011 last year from 13,224 in 1964.

PGE Loadings Show Growth

Pacific Great Eastern Railway car loadings continued to show an uptrend during January, when a figure of 5,053 cars was recorded.

A year ago there were 4,786 car loadings in the same month.

PGE car loadings are a gauge of trade and commerce activity in the province since the railway lies wholly within B.C.

WINTERS CONFIRMS CANADA NOT HURT

OTTAWA—Trade Minister Robert Winters has contacted representatives of major subsidiaries of American firms in Canada and found no evidence that the United States guidelines have had any adverse effect in this country.

The guidelines were announced early in December by the U.S. government to curb the growth of American investment abroad.

His findings supported Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp's similar statement to the House of Commons.

Bank Reserves Drop

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada has taken another hitch in the already taut money supply and interest situation.

The bank announced Thursday that the cash reserves of the eight chartered banks on Wednesday totalled $1,477,000,000, compared with $1,487,000,000 a week earlier and $1,494,000,000 on Jan. 19.

The amount of money the banks can lend borrowers is limited to 12 times their cash reserves.

The money supply — currency in circulation and chartered bank deposits — nudged past the $20,000,000,000 mark before Christmas, but has since been checked to $19,784,000,000, including the federal government's own deposits in the chartered banks.

Mary Ellen Was First to Serve

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Forbes

Proposal was made in the legislature this week by Liberal Leader Ray Perrault that the provincial government give its blessing to a series of children's villages in designated areas of British Columbia, to supplement foster home care.

Mr. Perrault suggested that these villages be planned to commemorate the 50th anniversary of grant the vote to women British Columbia (April, 1917) and that they be named for the first woman member of our legislature — Mary Ellen Smith.

It's a good suggestion. I hope the provincial government will take more that a passing glance at it.

Certainly our foster home program needs all the help it can get. Certainly, the village pattern is the modern way of treating and caring for disturbed and confused youngsters.

Men and women who know anything about the problems and the frustrations of social workers, through lack of adequate foster homes, will certainly applaud Mr. Perrault and give him full marks for his effort.

But, just as certainly, when he mentions Mary Ellen Smith, few will remember of whom he speaks.

●

For the record then, and to bring into better focus a great champion of women's rights, let me tell you something about her.

Mrs. M. E. Smith, "Mary Ellen" as she was affectionaltely known to everyone, was a woman distinguished by many "firsts."

She was the first woman member of our legislature, the first woman cabinet minister and some even credit her with being the first woman in the world to succeed, to a deceased husband's seat in government.

When her husband, Hon. Ralph Smith, minister of finance in the provincial government and a former member of the House of Commons, died in 1917, she was elected to his seat in the legislature, by a big majority. At the next general election in 1920, she easily topped the Vancouver polls. She was elected again in 1924 but only by a small majority.

Her last contest, in 1928, saw her pitted against the popular Harry Pooley in Esquimalt. The Conservatives, headed by Dr. S. F. Tolmie, went in with a sweep and the result wrote finis to "Mary Ellen's" political life.

When Mrs. Smith first took her seat on the floor of the House, almost 50 years ago, the question arose whether she should take off her hat when addressing the Speaker. It was ruled that she must and she made her maiden speech with her hat on the desk beside her.

In 1921, Hon. John Oliver offered her the Speaker's chair but she declined, feeling she could accomplish more for social causes as a member. He then named her minister without portfolio but she retired from that position later the same year.

On one memorable occasion, Mrs. Smith did take Mr. Speaker's place and in doing so became the first woman to exercise such a function in a British Parliament.

●

It was on Feb. 22, 1928, that Mr. Speaker Buckham asked "Mary Ellen" to replace him, while he left the chamber for a short rest.

The change was made so quietly, few noticed until Joshua Hinchcliffe of Victoria, who was speaking on the budget, suddenly startled the Assembly by looking up, starting to say "Mr. Speaker," and then changing it to "Madam Speaker."

"Mary Ellen" had the reputation of being a quick thinker and an able strategist and she was never wanting in her championship of women's interests.

She was largely instrumental in the enactment of the Mothers' Allowance Act and she was the force behind the Female Minimum Wage Act.

She was credited with having the Deserted Wives' Maintenance Act passed, also the Equal Guardianship Act and the Mothers' Pension Act. She helped establish the provincial industrial school for boys.

●

She sincerely believed — and she lived by the code — that government is not merely a matter of business in a narrow sense but that it should concern itself also with the social needs of the people.

Mrs. Smith died in May, 1933, at the age of 72.

Certainly let us, in some way, commemorate the work of this outstanding figure in the early days of women's achievements in this province.

If we can do so by placing her name on children's villages, so much the better. "Mary Ellen" would have loved that!

NEW HEAQUARTERS of British Columbia Automobile Association, at Pandora Avenue and Cook Street, is scheduled for opening at the end of the month. 'I WAS SO TIRED'

Lamarr Fired by Producer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"I was so tired from sleeping only one hour in four days. I just sort of collapsed for a day. That's human, isn't it?"

Thus actress Heddy Lamarr, 51, exotic star of the 1930s and 1940s, explained her absence from work which resulted in her firing Thursday from her first starring role in 15 years.

It was not, said producer Bert I. Gordon, because of her arrest last week on suspicion of shoplifting $86 in goods from a department store. Due for arraignment on a petty theft charge Feb. 9, she has denied stealing anything.

Miss Lamarr was replaced in Picture Mommy Dead by Zsa Zsa Gabor, Gordon said, adding in explanation:

"The only remaining scenes are those in which she (Miss Lamarr) appears. I have great admiration for Miss Lamarr as an actress and as a woman, but with a million - dollar budget, the people financing the picture will not allow me to gamble further on possible delays."

Gordon said he learned Miss Lamarr was taken to hospital for nervous exhaustion Wednesday when he sent a studio car to pick her up.

"I just needed a good night's sleep," Miss Lamarr told reporters at her home. "Should one day's sleep upset them that much?"

Although Gordon said he would be pleased to have her in a future picture, Miss Lamarr declared:

"I will never act again."

Too Many Broadcasting Probes

There are so many investigations of broadcasting the industry has little time to concentrate on the business of broadcasting.

Ron Morrier, public relations director of CHAN-CHEK TV, told a meeting of the Rotary Club of Victoria that "it is possible that whatever is wrong with broadcasting is so because we have so little time to concentrate on the business of broadcasting."

A veteran of 30 years in the business and a former Canadian boxing champion, Mr. Morrier said the latest committee consisted of the president of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, a lawyer and a civil servant.

"One might think this is a strange choice for a committee ordered to investigate such a complex industry as broadcasting," he said.

Yi Dynasty Ends

SEOUL (AP)—The 500-year Yi dynasty of Korea ended Thursday with the death of its last queen, Yunbi. She was the 72-year-old widow of King Soongjong who died in 1926. Soongjong was deposed as monarch in 1910 when Japan annexed Korea.

THAT DARN CAT
Hayley Mills
Capitol Theatre

Victoria's many cat lovers will be more than delighted with this latest Disney performer — a male, blue-eyed, seal point Siamese, with a radio transmitter round its neck and the tenacity of a four-footed James Bond.

Hayley Mills, that delightful teen-ager, lets the cat out of the bag (as it were) when she calls up the FBI and says "I have some information about one of your crimes."

No normal FBI man could resist Hayley's unsophisticated high-school voice, and soon the whole squad is in action. They pin-point the movements of Hayley's cat all around town and radio their observations back to headquarters.

They are interested because the cat came home wearing a wrist-watch which may have been slipped round its neck by a kidnapped lady bank-teller.

Suppose the teller is right in the neighborhood. Suppose a pair of psychotic holdup men are trying to do away with her because she knows too much!

They are evidently intent on killing the teller as soon as the coast is clear in order to keep their identities secret. But the lady teller succeeds in scratching a message for help on her wrist-watch and slips it round the cat's neck.

When the cat returns home, Hayley Mills recognizes the plea for help and appeals to the FBI.

Agent Dean Jones is assigned to the case and tries hard — but the cat proves unco-operative until it is fitted with a radio-transmission collar.

The climax is startling and proves, once again, that Walt Disney has a genius for appealing to the family instinct in human beings. He shows, too, that the cat may be, not just an adjunct of the family, but an integral part of it.

Wind Brings Life or Death to Indians

Life-giving rains brought to the parched lands of India by the monsoon wind provide the central theme for an outstanding film, to be shown Feb. 11 and 12 at Oak Bay Junior Secondary School.

The film Monsoon Mosaics, describes how life in India centres around the seasonal phenomenon of the monsoon by showing various modes of life in different parts of the country.

It is personally narrated by the man who shot the film, Dr. Telford H. Work, an experienced traveller, author and photographer.

Wildlife shown in color include langur monkeys and Mysore elephants feeding in jungles, spot-billed pelicans nesting near the Bay of Bengal, and paddy-birds catching polliwogs in the rice fields.

Monsoon Mosaic is of special interest now because of India's present drought, caused by the failure of the monsoon, and resulting in a massive famine.

Dr. Work, an American medical officer in Second World War, has since lived in the Fiji Islands, Egypt, and Poona, India, and is a specialist in tropical diseases.

His work has appeared in the National Geographic, the Saturday Evening Post and the magazine of the Royal Geographic Society.

The film, sponsored by the adult education division of the Greater Victoria School Board, begins at 8 p.m.

Jankowski's Overtime Shot Give Victoria 3-2 Win

Victoria 3, Los Angeles 2

By HAL MALONE

LOS ANGELES—A stitch in time saved two points for Victoria Maple Leafs here Thursday.

The stitch (in his side) came to Gordie Redahl, the Leafs' large right winger, at the end of the second period.

At that time the Leafs trailed Los Angeles Blades 2-0. It could as easily have been 5-0.

Coach Frank Mario inserted Mike Labadie in Redahl's place and gesundheit!

Before goalkeeper Marcel Pelletier could say "sacre bleu" the Leafs awoke, the Blades went blah and the Western Hockey League game was knotted 2-2.

Six minutes and 54 seconds into overtime, Louis Casimir Jankowski caught Mons. Pelletier with his net showing. Nobody does that to Louie without paying a price.

The price was the 3-2 goal that gave Victoria four points of breathing space over Portland Buckaroos. The loss did not seriously affect the Blades' position in the WHL. Their position is horizontal and sinking.

Jankowski's jab climaxed an otherwise imperfect day for the Leafs. Or as Julius Caesar said, "A funny thing happened to me on the way to the coliseum."

It Was Ground, Leafs Had a Beef!

The Leafs' gear neglected to arrive at the same time as they did.

It didn't even come on the same plane. Inexplicably it was shunted onto the aircraft of another flying service. Fortunately that plane was headed for Los Angeles and not Bangkok. An hour and a half and much perspiring later it was found.

Dinner steaks ordered beforehand were omitted from the Leaf's flight. Instead they hungrily devoured pgymy-size Swiss steaks that might have made the run on foot from the highest Alp.

That enough? Hardly. Fred Hucul, bound with Millie Marcetta for Tulsa today, may have to face winter in Oklahoma with the clothes on his back, a smile on his face and nothing else.

In the baggage mixup, Fred's personal valises never did arrive, at last reports they were in San Francisco. If so, they could be in quite a tangle, having fallen some 30,000 feet since the Leafs' plane never stopped there.

For two periods and nearly four minutes at Memorial Coliseum, the Leafs looked as if they shouldn't have stopped there.

They gave up a snappy first period goal to Willie O'Ree. They neglected to remove Leo Labine from taking up residence in front of the net in the second period. Advantage LA 2-0.

Only for the grace and acrobatics of Al Millar, Buddy Boone, Norm Johnson and Bob Schmautz could well have improved on that total.

Aut's Analysis Delightful, Simple

Then came the stitch, the shift (to Labadie) and success. Autrey Erickson accepted a pass from Marcetta, drifted across the blue line and snapped his wrists. When Pelletier looked up the puck was nestling in the goal.

Erickson's analysis was delightfully simple: 'I didn't have anything else to do but shoot, so I shot.'

The Leafs maintained target practice thereafter, broken only by rare Los Angeles forays. But the Blades showed on at least two occasions why they so richly deserve their staatus.

They goofed on a three-on-none break, followed it up with four successive blasts from close in, each time firing directly into a piece of Millar's anatomy.

With four minutes five seconds left they failed (for the 1,065th time) to clear the puck out of their own end. Freddy Hucul trapped it, gave it his best two iron whack. Andy Hebenton, standing in front of Pelletier, decided to play a little trick on Marcel. Hebenton waited until the last second—and tipped it past a paralysed Pelletier.

Fittingly, it was the "new" line of Jankowski, Labadie and John Sleaver that threw out the used Blades.

Sleaver set up Labadie, who was denied by a great Pelletier move. But having stopped 47 shots, Marcel lacked the energy to do anything about one more. Jankowski took care of that.

'MONOPOLISTIC OUTLOOK'

Leader Fires Blast at NHL

Shifting of Milan Marcetta and Fred Hucul from Victoria Maple Leafs to Tulsa Oilers for seven games is just another reason why the Western Hockey League may consider action to protect its teams.

Thus spoke WHL president Al Leader at Seattle Thursday when asked about the orders from Toronto Maple Leafs of the National League that sent two key players of the first-place Leafs to the last-place Oilers.

Both clubs are Toronto farm teams.

"Moves like this are going to force our league to adopt some form of protective legislation," said Leader. "We don't want to stop any player from bettering himself, but sending players to a lower classification is ridiculous.

"It's just another example of the monopolistic outlook the NHL has on hockey."

Leader, however, does not feel that Victoria is near the end of participation in the WHL. He pointed out that if Vancouver, Los Angeles and San Francisco were included in NHL expansion, Victoria would play an important part in the western circuit.

He added that, despite rumors, Toronto could not shift its WHL franchise to San Diego which has a 13,900 seat arena under construction and due to be completed by Oct. 1.

"San Diego already has a franchise," Leader said. "It's for next year."

★ ★ ★

Although Toronto would be able to sell its players to San Diego, which apparently wants to purchase players and have only a limited affilliation with an NHL club, Leader believes it is possible that Victoria could eventually become the WHL farm team of Vancouver's NHL club.

There is also the indemnity plan that is being considered. It would require the NHL to pay $450,000 to remaining clubs in the WHL—Victoria, Seattle and Portland—if and when the NHL absorbs Vancouver, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

That would make the Victoria franchise a valuable item. Any franchise owner receiving the indemnity would be required to keep a team in the WHL for six years, but there is no rule to prevent him from shifting his club to another city.

FOR ERNIE TERRELL

Licence Renewal Revives Title Talk

CHICAGO (AP)—The Illinois Athletic Commission Thursday renewed the boxing licence of Ernie Terrell, World Boxing Association heavyweight champion clearing the way for a possible Chicago title match between Terrell and generally accepted world champion Cassius Clay.

Terrell, under oath, said he did not have a manager and was serving as his own manager.

The New York State Athletic Commission last Friday denied Terrell a licence to box in New York.

The New York Commission said the denial was based on business connections between Terrel and Bernie Glickman, admittedly previously associated with underworld figures in boxing.

Although Glickman, a former fight manager, was in Terrell's corner in his Toronto victory over George Chuvalo last year, the 6-foot-6-inch Chicago boxer said Glickman had no strings on him as a fighter.

Talk of a possible March 29 Clay - Terrell bout in Chicago grew with indication that the Clay camp would be interested if the Illinois commission was satisfied Terrell had severed all ties with Glickman.

German Joins Chase For Bout With Clay

FRANKFURT (UPI) — European heavyweight champion Karl Mildenberger today set his sights on Cassius Clay's world title after turning back American challenger Eddie Machen.

The West German heavyweight halted Machen's comeback bid with a 10-round decision Thursday night that took two referees to officiate.

Machen had one good round, the sixth, hitting Mildenberger with a flurry of head and body blows. After the fight he had a few words about referee Gerhard Seewald.

"Sure, I lost, I admit it," Machen said. "But what can you do when the referee doesn't let you fight the way you're accustomed to?"

Machen referred to Seewald's action in the sixth round, when he continuously broke up Machen's attempts at in-fighting. Seewald was soundly booed by the crowd after the round.

At that point, judge Helmut Bertram took over the referee duties. Officials explained that Seewald was "not feeling good."

Claremont, undefeated Delbrook, Chemainus and North Vancouver's Handsworth High will participate in an invitational tournament at Claremont.

Action starts tonight with Chemainus facing Handsworth at 7 and Claremont facing Delbrook at 8:15. The four teams will be in action Saturday night on the same floor.

Milwaukee No Longer Good Baseball Town

NEW YORK (AP)—Milwaukee no longer is a good baseball town and expansion for the coming season is unthinkable, a National League club executive testified Thursday.

M. Donald Grant, board chairman of New York Mets, echoed the opinions of other baseball officials in his deposition for Wisconsin's lawsuit against the Braves and the National League to prevent the club's transfer to Atlanta, Ga.

Grant also said he felt the court action by the people of Wisconsin "can't help but hurt their chances of getting a franchise" in the future.

THE LAST STRAW

When asked at what point he began to think Milwaukee was declining as a good location for baseball, Grant answered that it was when attendance fell "substantially below 2,000,000" beginning in 1958.

After drawing 773,018 in 1963, Grant added, it "took a Herculean effort" to reach 910,000 the next year, and "that was the straw that broke the camel's back."

Wisconsin has initiated an antitrust action against the Braves and the league, seeking to keep the team for 1966 or getting another franchise for this season.

BRIEFING BEFORE BATTLE

Former Canadian and world curling champion, Lyall Dagg (left) of Vancouver, mulls over pre-game strategy with Hec MacDonald before taking to ice in annual Victoria men's bonspiel. Dagg rink was one of 13 unbeaten foursomes that started play today. Six-event 'spiel winds up Sunday.

GETS POLICE ESCORT . . . . . . BUT NO PAPER CLIPS

Fuss Over Letter Irks Howe

BOSTON (AP)—The authorities seemed more disturbed than Gordie Howe Thursday night that the super-star of Detroit Red Wings had received a threatening letter.

Howe, given a police escort while he was in the city for Thursday night's game with Boston Bruins, didn't let it affect his play as he scored his 20th goal of the year and assisted linemate Alex Delvecchio on his 300th National Hockey League goal.

Police ringed the stadium to ensure that nothing more than a few chiding remarks were thrown at Howe and that no unauthorized individual approached him.

Except for a brief display of temper which netted Howe a high - sticking penalty, there were no incidents.

Boston Police Capt. Peter J. Donovan said the FBI sent him a copy of the anonymous letter Howe received at Detroit two or three weeks ago.

Donovan said the writer identified himself as a six-foot-four Negro weighing 240 pounds and that the letter was mailed from Brooklyn.

Howe, 37, was irritated by the publicity.

"Now my wife will be worried," he complained. "And once the story is out, then you get a lot of these things."

A Red Wings spokesman said Howe turned the letter over to manager-coach Sid Abel, who forwarded it to league president Clarence Campbell who sent it to the FBI.

The writer threatened to throw paper clips on the ice, a move which causes skaters to stumble and has resulted in serious injury to many players in the past.

The letter also said:

"If the players don't get you I will."

Howe also was watched by police when Detroit made a visit to New York's Madison Square Garden last week.

Delvecchio Gets 300th As Wings Tie for Lead

Alex Delvecchio scored his 300th National Hockey League goal Thursday night as Detroit Red Wings moved into a league-leading tie with a 4-2 victory over Boston Bruins.

He was assisted on the goal by Gordie Howe, who also scored his 20th goal of the season—chaperoned by a cordon of police officers following a threat on his life.

In Montreal, Jean Beliveau scored a goal with less than six minutes to play to give Canadiens a 5-4 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs which left the Montreal squad with 53 points, just one behind Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit.

Howe, who received a threatening letter, has scored 20 goals or more for 17 consecutive seasons.

Detroit's win also means the team has beaten Boston 13 straight times, stretching back to last season, and has outscored Boston 44 to 16 in nine games.

COULDN'T CLEAR PUCK

Three Detroit goals in the first period—by Howe, Bruce MacGregor and Delvecchio—resulted from Boston's inability to get the puck out of its own territory.

Floyd Smith scored Detroit's only second-period goal, while Boston's Johnny Bucyk managed to slip past the opposition's defence.

The Bruins held Detroit scoreless in the third while John McKenzie scored from a face-off to the right of the Red Wings net.

In Montreal, Beliveau's pair of goals were his 16th and 17th of the season and the 374th and 375th of his NHL career, just four short of equalling the all-time mark of 379 set by Ted Lindsay of Detroit.

Other Montreal scorers were Bobby Rousseau with his 18th of the season, Claude Provost with his 11th and Henri Richard with his 17th.

Toronto marksmen were Eddie Shack with his 18th of the year, Frank Mahovlich with his 19th, Ron Ellis with his eighth and Dave Keon with his 15th.

Assisting on both of Beliveau's goals were Gilles Tremblay and defenceman Noel Price.

Price, called up by Montreal at 11 a.m. Thursday from Quebec Aces of the American Hockey League, played his first NHL game in four years.

"He was the best defenceman on the ice," said coach Toe Blake, who called on him to fill the vacancy created by Jean-Guy Talbot, out with a back injury.

Price played for Detroit in 1961-62. He spent three years at Baltimore of the AHL before coming to Quebec last year.

Owning Cubs Is Costly But P.K. Snubs Lights

CHICAGO (AP — When the lights go on in Wrigley Field—that'll be the time. And it will never come, says Chicago Club owner P. K. Wrigley.

He told the Chicago Sun-Times that his mind hasn't changed although night baseball was suggested as an answer to a loss of $311,197 last season and nearly $8,000,000 in the last four years.

"There definitely will be no lights in Wrigley Field now or in the foreseeable future," Wrigley said. "It isn't night baseball we need, but winning baseball. If we can put a winning team back on the field like we had years ago, the turnstiles will begin spinning again, whether we play in the morning, afternoon or night.

"Sure, attendance would increase if we put in lights: But it would be an artificial stimulus based on the novelty of the thing at Wrigley Field. If the ball club still was losing, attendance would level off and we would be right back where we started.

"Personally, I still believe baseball is a daylight game. It is more enjoyable then. And people will come out. After all, we set a record in 1929 that stood for more than 20 years in the National League (1,485,166) attendance with nothing but day games."

OVERLOOKED TUDOR FAME WINS

AT SANTA ANITA

George Royal Not Physically Ready for Task

By HAL MALONE

ARCADIA, Calif.—He was the darling of the racing form, the sweetheart of the selectors, the punters' key to happiness and wealth.

Precisely $52,435 was bet on his tender probiscis but George Royal would have needed a nose three horse lengths long to win the $25,000 Arcadia Handicap at Santa Anita track here Thursday.

That's how far away he was when they served up the money. Fifth and not chopping them down, behind Tudor Fame, Plaque, Aurelius 2nd and Cedar Key.

Not until the field hit the stretch did the B.C.-owned bay get recognition from the announcer Joe Hernandez that he was running in the same race as the others.

He was so far out of the hunt to that point that he might have been running on snowshoes. But that's when he gets down to business isn't it? That's where Johnny Longden whapped him rat-a-tat-tat with his baton.

But in front the traffic was like the Pasadena freeway at suppertime . . . six abreast. Longden had to fan out.

They put on a run in the lane, the old gentlemen and the young horse. But at the 16th pole it was plain that their backers weren't going to eat New York cuts this day.

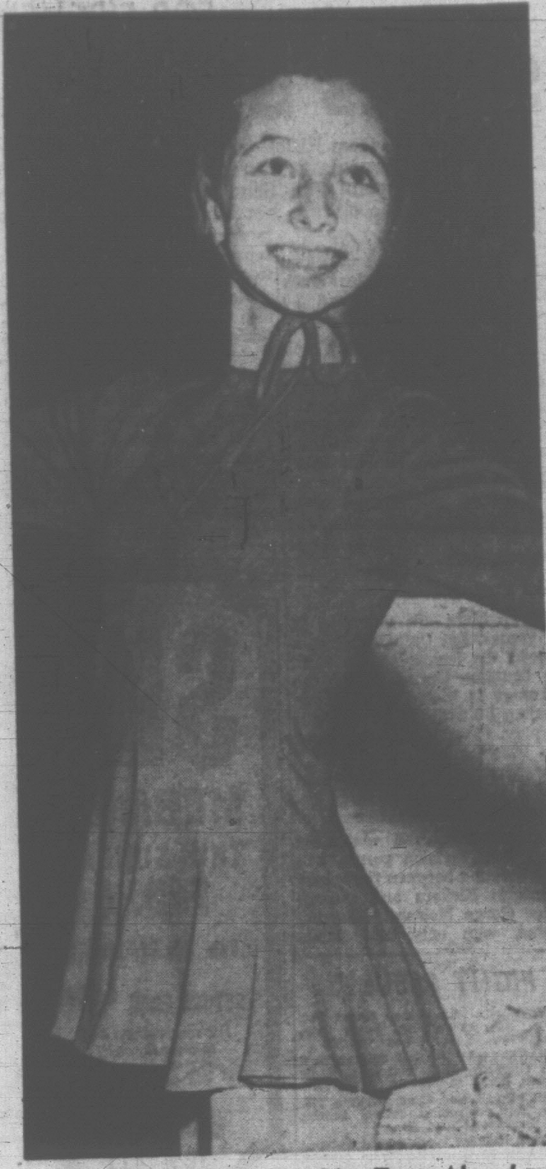
Tudor Fame took the pork chops, $18,250 of them, and had his supporters eating pretty high off the hog, too. Overlooked despite winning his previous start, Tudor Fame paid $72.20 for deuces.

In retrospect, the race seemed an ideal opportunity for George to add to his illustrious record. They ran it on the Hillside Turf course, rated "slightly soft" after weekend rain. And the distance 1¼ miles reasoned to be ideal for George to get the kinks out of his legs before putting on his fire brigade run.

Not Thursday. Phlegmatic as usual, Longden said only that George went to the leaders strongly "but he got tired in late stages."

To press box observers, the B.C. horse was short, not physically ready for the task.

In the grandstand and clubhouse, a majority of the 24,253 horseplayers wouldn't have argued. When a 2-1 shot comes in late a lot of people are short.



Heather Fraser . . . Big Test Ahead

AFTER SIX YEARS OF WORK . . .

Eagle-Willed Heather Set for Biggest Test

By GLEN ALLEN

Victoria's only envoy to the Canadian figure skating championships at Peterborough next week will be a slim 14-year-old girl with the grace of a swan and the will of an eagle.

Her name is Heather Fraser —and her flight east Tuesday could be the end of the beginning.

She has been getting ready for six years . . . Six years of three hours of daily practices.

"I feel okay," she says, her voice thin in the cavern of Memorial Arena. "But this is my first time to the nationals."

The ice she has just left, is scrivened with the rows and links of circles of school figures.

Bit of a Problem

"My weak point," she says.

What she means is she is weaker in compulsory figures than free skating. A brilliant performance in the free skating section of the junior ladies' event last month took her from sixth place to within three points of first.

She won the event the year before last.

"But school figures more or less decide the thing," says Victoria Figure Skating Club professional and Heather's teacher, Guy Nick.

"Heather hasn't been well these past two weeks. Since there will be more than 20 girls out for the same title and since skating is—well, one of the most demanding physical efforts you can undertake—it's not going to be easy."

The way Heather skates it looks effortless. Her swift yet easy, almost balletic free-skating routine choreographed for her by Nick conforms perfectly to the music, selected from "La Boheme" and "Rigoletto."

'Fugitive Quality'

It seems a perfect accord of steel and ice.

"And yet," says Nick, "there is a certain fugitive quality to ice.

"It can be soft—or very hard.

"So many things can go wrong. But Heather is getting better and better."

They are a dedicated and strangely matched pair . . .

. . . The girl who leaves school every day at noon to come and put endless silver scratches in the ice.

. . . And her teacher, a man who had a brief but brilliant career as a skater himself, and who trained to be a museum curator.

Next week in Peterborough may be their week—and Victoria's.

UBC Pulls Away In Final Quarter

VANCOUVER (CP)—The University of B.C. Jayvees used three quarters of the game to wear down YMCA Thursday night, then came on to defeat them 47-42 in the first game of their best-of-three Inter-City Junior Men's Basketball League semi-final.

YMCA led 22-14 at half-time and maintained the lead until the final 10 minutes.

Guard Joe Kainer of UBC tied the score at 34-34 and then the action started.

YMCA fought back to tie the score at 40-40 with seven minutes left.

With one minute remaining, UBC coach Norm Watt called a time-out and set up a post play which saw the league's leading scorer — Sam Vandermeullen—drive to the basket for the lead.

The series continues Saturday night.

Victoria Chinooks meet North Shore Mountaineers, who trail Victoria 1-0 in their series, Saturday night.

Lineups:

UBC Jayvees — Langley (3), Kainer (12), Blumenscheit (10), Carter (4), Vandermeullen (11), Kern (7).

YMCA—Field (4) Joyner (2), Gatley (9), Knapsl (14), Cooper (3), Aschenbrenner (1), Molberg (9).

Seniors' 'Spiel Starts Monday

The 'spiel is restricted to curlers 60 years and over.

Finals will be played Wednesday.

Stottlemyre Gets Boost to $26,000

NEW YORK (AP)—Mel Stottlemyre, one of the few New York Yankees who does not regard 1965 as a complete disaster, received a sizeable raise when he agreed to terms for a reported $26,000.

The right-hander won 20 games for the sixth-place Yankees in his first full season in the majors. He came up in mid-season of 1964 and compiled a 9-3 record after winning 13 and losing three at Richmond in the International League.

'Catfish' Out to Hook First Tournament Title

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Harold (Catfish) Kneece, who fishes for the fun of it but plays golf as if his life depended on it, carried a four-stroke lead into the third round of the $100,000 Bob Hope desert golf classic today and gave the touring PGA pros something to shoot at.

The 31-year-old Kneece from Aiken, S.C., who has had many high finishes but never has won a tournament, fired five birdies and just one bogey in posting his second straight four-under-par 68 Thursday or a 36-hole total of 136.

However, with three rounds left to play in this 90-hole, five-day marathon tournament, at least 20 pros were close enough to Kneece to make it a battle to the finish.

McGOWAN BLOWS

Closest to Kneece, who loves to fish but never eats his catch, were Jack McGowan, the first-round leader, Jack Rule and Dick Sikes, all tied at 140. McGowan who had an opening-round 66, skied to a 74 Thursday while Rule added a 68 to his first-round 72, and Sikes matched his first-round 70.

All four desert courses over which the Hope Classic is played—Indian Wells, Eldorado, Bermuda Dunes and La Quinta—are par-72 layouts.

Arnold Palmer, the Los Angeles Open wniner on the tour this year, and Don Massengale, who upset the form when he won the Bing Crosby two weeks ago, were among seven players tied at 141. Defending champion Bill Casper, who won the San Diego Open, was in a group of seven deadlocked at 142.

George Knudson of Toronto soared to a 78 and a 36-hole total of 145. Jerry Magee of Toronto was a stroke behind, trailed by the two other Canadians in the field, Al Balding of Toronto at 151 and Stan Leonard of Vancouver, 158.

HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

When we were playing in Boston recently, Normie Ullman and I were the only two players out in front of Bernie Parent, the Bruins' goalie.

"Is anybody bothering you two?" he asked. Normie and I looked at one another and almost laughed. He said it more or less in jest. This is the kind of protection he was getting, none whatsoever.

I scored the first goal against him that night. Ullman came down with the puck so he had to play Normie. Parent didn't have much of a chance.

Normie made a quick little pass over to me. When I got it I was too close to shoot. So I pulled the puck to my left and threw it in the open side when Parent's body came across.

* * *

As we skated off the ice together at the end of the period, Parent said he had made a mistake in not slipping his hand up on the stick and throwing it out to block me when I came in front of the net.

"Well, that's good," I told him. "It's good for me because it was a goal." So he's learning. When you put seven, eight or ten goals behind an individual it's pretty hard to see his good points. When he learns all the tricks, he'll be another Glenn Hall or Terry Sawchuk or Roger Crozier.

* * *

Boston was missing a number of players due to injuries at the time, among them, Ted Green. So it isn't a true test of goaltending to see what a man has when he isn't getting any protection.

The same goes for Gerry Cheevers, when Boston has used him as Parent's replacement. I haven't really had that much of an opportunity to see him in a tight game because of our success against Boston this year. We didn't lose a game to the Bruins in our first eight meetings this season.

Softballers Can't Wait To Play Ball

Last year's champions of the Victoria Senior Men's Softball apparently are determined to keep their crown for another season.

Players with the Colony Inn club, who performed last season under the banner of Century Inn, plan to have legs and lungs in condition before outdoor workouts start.

They are going about the task with a two-hour basketball session every Sunday.

Possibly more important than conditinoning to coach Bonner Haney of the newly-named club is the expectation that pitcher Geoff Hett and catcher Doug Wilson will be back in the fold. Hett won 14 games last season while losing only two and was named the league's most valuable player.

East Germany Withdraws From Biathlon

GARMISCH - PARTENKIRCHEN (AP) — East Germany withdrew from the world biathlon championships Wednesday as an East-West political dispute rocked the competition scheduled next weekend.

The withdrawal came after police told the East Germans they would not be allowed to practise unless they removed their national emblem from their ski suits.

Police said there is an unwritten agreement that neither of the two German teams wear national emblems.

Jamboree To Decide Six Titles

Almost 200 youngsters on 19 clubs will frolic at Mount Newton Junior High School tonight and Saturday in struggles to decide six hoop champions.

They be appearing in the annual Peninsula Basketball League jamboree, which starts tonight at 6:30 and resumes Saturday at 10:30 a.m., with play due to continue until six league titles have been settled.

About 2[illegible] games will probably be needed to name champions in double-loss elimination playoffs in each of six divisions—pre-midget boys and girls, midget boys and girls, and bantam boys and girls.

Competing will be clubs from Saanichton, Brentwood, Sidney and Cordova Bay. Title winners will represent the league in Vancouver Island playoffs later this month.

Cubs Reward Fisher With Salary Boost

CHICAGO (AP)—Relief pitcher, Eddie Fisher of Chicago White Sox has signed for the coming baseball season at a substantial salary increase.

UNITED READY . . . . . . FOR FIREMEN

Schulz Starts Sniping

The Queen's Own Rifles' contribution to the soccer wars hit the bullseye last Saturday, and Victoria United boosters are hopeful Jim Schulz may be the one to throw cold water on the hot Vancouver Firefighters this weekend.

Schulz scored once and helped set up the other goal last week when United pulled out a 2-0 victory from Burnaby Villa.

That's the stuff coach Frank Grealy expected when soldier Schulz was signed to a Pacific Coast Soccer League form. The big, well-conditioned centre forward, playing in only his third game, turned in his best effort against Burnaby.

It earned him another starting assignment—this Saturday against the Firemen at Royal Athletic Park.

NOT CONVINCED

Firefighters are unbeaten in 12 games, but United isn't convinced the league-leaders can't be beaten. United "had" the Firemen in their first meeting, leading 1-0 with only 12 minutes to play. Two late goals helped the Firemen slip away with a somewhat fortunate 2-1 victory.

The Sunday soccer stage belongs to the District League.

And the featured match of three first division games will be a meeting between first-place Hourigan Kickers and second-place Gorge Molsons. The top teams, with only four points separating them, meet at Heywood Avenue Park.

Victoria West will face Brodies at Central and Navy entertains Canadian Scottish on the Naden Field in other first division games.

Unbeaten Esquimalt will face second-place University Vikings in the key second division game, scheduled for Bullen Park. Gorge plays Sidney and Wests meet Colony Inn Lions in other second division games.

All matches start at 2 p.m.

CONDITIONS 'EXCELLENT' FOR SKIERS

The ski condition sign pointed to "excellent" following a light snowfall Thursday at Green Mountain.

The rope tow will definitely be in operation at the weekend and officials of Green Mountain Recreation Co. are hoping to put the new T-bar lift in working order by Sunday.

Twenty-nine people were injured. Snowplows hurled most of the cars aside in trying to reopen the highway. More than 1,000 people were stranded in Batavia for several days. (AP Wirephoto.)

FUN AND GAMES WITH EXPENSIVE MACHINE

And Then the Snow-Blower Wouldn't Blow

TORONTO (CP) — After an embarrassing initiation, Toronto's new snow - melting machine is in successful operation and officials hope it will prove a rapid and inexpensive solution to snow removal problems.

The machine, which has been called a "giant kettle," did not have an auspicious beginning here last week.

First, the snow wasn't being fed into it rapidly enough by two front-end loaders so the road crew went to borrow a snow-blowing machine. Meantime an air hose froze on the snow-melter.

The snow-blowing machine arrived but broke belt. Finally all was ready — but then it was found the snow-blower couldn't blow wet snow mixed with road salt into the snow-melter at the required speed.

COSTS $45,000

The next day the snow was crisper and both machines worked well. In fact, Murray Browning, maintenance engineer for Metropolitan Toronto, says the snow-melter is even better than the manufacturer promised.

The device has been rented from Equipment Sales and Service Ltd. in suburban Weston at a cost of $17,000 for four months. Purchase cost runs about $45,000.

The machine, which has a two-man crew, is really a huge tank heated by two fuel oil burners. Melted snow is poured into the sewer system.

Operating cost is about $20 an hour. The contraption can handle roughly 25 truck loads an hour.

"It will work in any temperature," said Mr. Browning, "although of course the milder the weather, the more efficient the machine."

He said it won't be known until the end of winter whether it's worth the city's money to purchase the device.

"So far we've found it cheaper simply to truck the snow out. However, as dumping sites become more and more distant, we expect the machines will become more and more efficient" in terms of ultimate cost of snow removal, he said.

Victim's Love Habits Hold Trial Spotlight

By ARTHUR EVERETT

MIAMI, Fla. AP)—The state lost no time in coming to grips with the defence contention that Jacques Mossler's murder may have been the result of weird sexual habits.

State Attorney Richard Gerstein Thursday asked one of his own witnesses at the first-degree murder trial of Mossler's widow, Candace, and her nephew, Melvin Lane Powers:

"Did it ever occur to you that Jacques was a little bit effeminate?"

"Never," replied the witness, Howard B. Walker, for 21 years an executive in Mossler's $33 million banking and loan empire.

"Was Mr. Mossler a homosexual?" Gerstein asked.

"To my knowledge, no," said Walker, manager of the Miami branch of the Allen-Parker Co., a Mossler-owned auto finance firm.

KILLED FOR MONEY

Mossler, 69, was bludgeoned and knifed to death June 30, 1964. The state claims Candy Mossler, who gives her age as 39, and Powers, 29, plotted Mossler's murder for his money and to further "a sordid, illicit love affair."

In his opening statement, Powers' chief counsel, Percy Foreman, told the jury that "there was not a conceivable sexual deviation in all psychiatry that Mossler did not have."

The import of the accusation, Forman explained, was that Mossler could have been the victim of a homosexual companion on the night he met violent death in his apartment.

Walker testified on cross-examination that Mossler for a year previously had shared a one-bedroom apartment with Vincent T. Caltagirone, described by the witness as a "handsome young man." He is listed as a future state witness.

Handyman Roscoe Brown testified that Mrs. Mossler twice tried to get him to change his story of events preceding her husband's murder.

Brown, 47, an odd-jobs man with the Mosslers for 17 years, testified he cleaned a kitchen counter and drain-board eight hours before Mossler's slaying. The state says Powers' palm print was found there after the murder.

Brown also testified he had a 1960 company car serviced and turned it over to Mrs. Mossler the afternoon before her husband's murder.

The state contends she loaned the car to Powers, that he used it to get away after the slaying and that his fingerprints were found in it.

Brown said Mrs. Mossler in telephone calls after Powers' arrest asked him to change his story.

Accused Doctor Admits Affair With Housewife

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Dr. Robert Boehme, accused of trying to poison his wife, changed his testimony and admitted in court Thursday he had an affair with a 30-year-old housewife.

The Port Orchard, Wash., physician, 45, had denied Wednesday he ever had intimate relations with Mrs. Wanda Ostby of Bremerton, who previously testified they had.

The doctor is on trial on charges of first degree assault with intent to kill. He is accused of injecting a toxic substance into his wife, Mary, 33, while she was in a Tacoma hospital last June 30 under treatment for a head injury.

SHOWN LETTERS

Dr. Boehme changed part of his story Wednesday under cross examination when shown letters referring to Mrs. Ostby. Thursday, under questioning by his own lawyer, Frank Peters, this exchange occurred:

"You've seen what happens when you don't tell the truth. I'll ask you now . . . Did you have an affair with Wanda Ostby?"

"Yes, I did."

"How many times did you have relations with her?"

" . . . maybe a dozen times."

"Why did you lie about it on the stand—why did you lie to me about it?"

"Because I was ashamed to admit I'd had an affair . . . and to spare my family that indignity."

Plane Rams Houses, Three Dead

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — A flaming two-engine plane rammed a row of houses in the Mexican section of Phoenix Thursday, killing three persons, including a sleeping child, and injuring seven others.

Witnesses on the ground said the converted second world war aircraft was approaching Sky Harbor airport with its right engine aflame when it veered away suddenly.

It clipped a vacant frame house, then, rolling on its wheels, smashed into three other houses. The dead boy was sleeping in the rear of the first house. The plane made a direct hit on his bedroom.

PAIR RESCUED

Al Wood, a 19-year-old driver for a car rental firm, said he "could see a little bit of fire in the cockpit and suddenly I thought, 'My God, the people in the plane.'"

But Wood went first to the people in one of the houses. He and another passing citizen rescued two persons from the home of Reynaldo Gomez. Then he ran to the burning aircraft.

"I ran to the back door of the plane and could hear them screaming inside—the screaming—that was awful. I started pounding on the door trying to get in. But then the whole thing blew up and threw me back," he said.

Authorities identified the dead as Harold Haynes, the pilot, and his wife, Virginia, both of Phoenix, and Michael Muniz, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Muniz, occupants of one of the homes.

'Lonely' Man Jailed For Harboring Child

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver man admitted harboring a child under the age of 14 and was sentenced here this week to two years less a day in prison.

Donald McKay, 58, described by his defence counsel as a retarded and lonely man, was charged in the Dec. 6 disappearance of Lori Taylor, an eight-year-old epileptic and cerebral palsy victim.

She was found unharmed in a backyard near her home 24 hours after she went missing.

Defence counsel David Nuttall said McKay "simply wanted someone to talk to and made an unfortunate choice. He made no attempt to detain the girl."

Magistrate James Bartman rejected Nuttall's plea for leniency. He said it was his job to protect society.

McKay admitted in court to a 1952 conviction for indecent assault on a female.

TERRACE (CP)—John Chretien, 63, was killed Wednesday in a logging car accident nine miles south of Terrace.

Police said Chretien was killed when struck on the head by a snag while attempting to free a bulldozer that had become stuck.

Haney Man Killed

MAPLE RIDGE (CP)—Hans David Jensen, 25, of Haney, spent $1,000 to restore a 1936 Ford, but died in it Wednesday when it veered out of control and overturned in the path of an oncoming car.

Bats' Wavelength Bugs the Insects

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bat sonar—the means by which blind bats find their way around—may provide a key to new and safe methods of insect control, two government researchers reported this week.

Bats emit high-pitched chirps and use the echoes not only to navigate but also to locate insects for food.

It has been found by other scientists, the researchers said, that moths fly away from a given area when they hear a bat's ultrasonic chirping — or artificially produced sounds imitating it.

As a result, they told a national symposium on pest control sponsored by the National Academy of Sciences, field studies are under way in the United States and Canada to evaluate the method for use in protecting crops from certain insects.

Manitoba Sets Massive Education Aid Program

By ALLEN SACKMANN

WINNIPEG (CP)—The most ambitious education program ever proposed by the Roblin administration was forecast Thursday in the speech from the throne at the opening of the Manitoba legislature.

The 17-point program, reaching from kindergartens to management institutes, won qualified approval from leaders of the Liberal and New Democratic parties.

Although a white paper will be presented on the proposals, the speech forecast measures to hasten school consolidation, to start a pilot program in central Manitoba, to expand northern school facilities and integrate educational facilities for Indians and Metis, to provide new commercial, technical and university facilities and to increase grants at most levels.

Liberal Leader Gil Molgat said it was unfortunate the government waited until it was in the midst of an "education crisis" to introduce the measures.

New Democratic Party Leader Russ Paulley said: "At long last there will be some type of organization in our school system . . . but no accompanying reduction in the costs which have to be borne by the local taxpayer. This is a grave omission."

CREATE NEW AGENCY

Tied to education, the 3,000-word speech forecast creation of manpower and youth agency to design ways of making young people take a greater interest in their own future.

The speech, read by newly-appointed Lt.-Gov. Richard S. Bowles, also forecast greater government emphasis on northern development and improving the economic lot of Indians. It proposed that a commissioner of northern affairs be appointed to handle area problems and to aid in the expansion of municipal and provincial services.

Opposition leaders complained that the broad terms of the speech's proposals may be used as a tool to thwart introduction of their parties' resolutions. Resolutions are not accepted if the Speaker rules they anticipate legislation proposed in the throne speech.

The speech forecast some tax relief but did not spell out the measures. It added that measures would be also introduced to shift part of the tax burden to the province from the municipalities and that school boards will be given priority for borrowing at low interest rates from Manitoba's share of the Canada Pension Plan funds.

LACK SKILLED WORKMEN

The speech said Manitoba lacks skilled workmen and legislation will be proposed to appoint a director of immigration to recruit craftsmen. Some labor legislation, specifically dealing with strikes, mediation and vacations with pay, will also be introduced.

On agriculture, the speech forecast creation of an agricultural productivity council and a farm consulting service. It added 90 per cent of the province's farmers will be covered this year by crop insurance.

The speech said the province is negotiating with the federal government on the subject of medical care insurance proposal.

Mr. Molgat said: "I don't think that's good enough. We have to know where we stand right now."

Both Mr. Molgat and Mr. Paulley took issue with a statement in the speech that Manitoba is in the midst of a period of unprecedented growth. They said this is not borne out by information they have.

New Krebiozen Tests Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new head of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration strongly opposed Thursday any plan to renew testing in humans of the drug krebiozen, which has been used by some persons suffering from cancer.

Dr. James L. Goddard told a press conference he is concerned that acquittal of Dr. Stevan Durovic, the drug's developer, and three other persons in Chicago within the last week might be considered approval of the drug.

He noted the four men were freed on charges of fraud and conspiracy and "the chemical composition of krebiozen was not on trial."

Goddard said it was scientifically established in 1963 that krebiozen consisted mainly of mineral oil and at times also contained alcohol and a breakdown derivative of creatin, a substance found in the human body.

He added that he considers krebiozen dangerous because people with treatable cancer might delay proper treatment while taking krebiozen.

U.K. Rejects Demands

DROWNING ACCIDENTAL

CAMPBELL RIVER—Coroner Dr. N. Bathurst Hall found Thursday that cook Norman McLeod, 44, of Vancouver died of accidental drowning after the seiner Ocean Star capsized off the mouth of Oyster Bay Saturday.

Six other members of the crew are missing and presumed drowned.

Dr. Hall said the seiner was being towed to Vancouver and he has recommended that tests for seaworthiness be conducted there.

School Eyes Site In Duncan

DUNCAN — Student logging may take place in the municipality if there are no objections from the IWA.

North Cowichan council has agreed to students from Nanaimo vocational school logging class coming into the area.

Consulting forester Frank Rainsford said the plan depended on the co-operation of the IWA and woodlot lessees.

The municipality leases 10 woodlots, all of 1,500 acres.

Reeve Donald Morton said the plan to have the students clear the Fullers Lake site of the centennial ice arena would likely fall through.

"The timber there is not quite big enough for their purpose although they may do some work on the site."

John Brodie, principal of the school, said: "We wish to cut one million feet of lumber a year as part of the students' training.

"We want to clear, re-seed and plant a whole area."

'Silent' Protest Set Against Air Pollution

PORT ALBERNI—Residents on Sunday will stage a silent protest march past the giant pulp mill here.

The march is to bring attention to the pollution problem caused by the mill.

Unlike most protests, this one will feature no banners, no singing, no shouting, no sit-downs.

Instead, participants will march in orderly line along Stamp Avenue on the opposite side of the road to the mill.

Said march organizer Andy Bigg: "We are not asking for anything. We just want people to know about the air pollution problem.

"I've asked people to bring along any proof they have of damage caused by pollution—maybe a ragged piece of carpet or some chipped paintwork."

In the legislature this week John Squire (NDP—Alberni), described Port Alberni's pollution problem as "so bad that hundreds of thousands of dollars damage has been done to cars, roads, gardens, clothes and many other things."

He claimed the B.C. Research Council had come up with an answer to the problem but industry was not acting upon it.

Dr. F. E. Murray of the research council, said Thursday: "The truth is that we have come up with partial answers and we are continuing all the time to work towards complete answers."

ALL WANT FACILITIES

New Commission Sits, Listens

By DON DINGWALL
Times Duncan Bureau

DUNCAN—The city's recreation commission is more like a royal commission.

Each of its sessions so far in its short life has been spent listening to a long recital of requests.

Thursday night was no different.

It was the turn of the rugby, soccer and grass hockey enthusiasts.

They staked their claims for facilities in the city's 33-acre Wharncliffe-Rotary Park.

Ted Hearn, president of Cowichan Rugby Club, said Wharncliffe is ideal for rugby.

INSTALLED FACILITIES

He reminded the new commission it was the rugby club which installed the few facilities existing at the park now.

These include removation of the "shack" of a changing room, installing showers and a heating unit, and outside lights for night practice.

Mr. Hearn said facilities are still inadequate and the club will back city council plans for a $25,000 centennial field house.

Commissioner Mel Massey reported on a meeting with grass hockey officials.

HOCKEY CLUBS

Miss June Taylor told him the 10 grass hockey clubs were "shuffled about the district" in search of playing field accommodation.

The latest blow is the plan to build a vocational wing on their playing area at Cowichan Senior Secondary School.

Commision chairman Ronald Price said firm drawing up a master development plan for the park must bear in mind playing fields need to be rested periodically.

Suggestions made by Mr. Hearn and Vern Wilkinson for added park facilities included a lawn bowling green, and outdoor basketball court.

An expatriate New Zealander, Mr. Wilkinson noted that each elementary school there has its own swimming pool.

Duncan has no swimming pool.

Mr. Wilkinson said New Zealand recently set up a national lottery.

As a sop to the public conscience the money is used to provide recreational facilities.

Mr. Hearn said: "Duncan is growing up and coming to life in sports and the rugby club will back the commission 100 per cent."

GAME MUSHROOMING

Mike Woods, for senior soccer interests, said the game is mushrooming in the district and more playing pitches are urgently required.

Pioneer Park is a swamp of the best part of the soccer season, he said.

Minor-soccer executive Dave Williams said 240 boys registered for this season and some 30 more joined later.

Soccer is snowballing in interest among district youth in the 7-16 age group.

He said the school board was generous in allowing use of grounds—but more are required.

VICTORIA, B.C., FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1966—PAGE 17

Arthur Mayse

A pride of profs has been roaring thunderously from the University of Victoria escarpments in recent weeks, and down here on the veldt where the taxpayers frolic, I have been listening perk-eared to the refrain.

The voice that most interests me belongs to English department lecturer Joseph Schwartz, a clever, able and challenging emigre from California jungles.

Mr. Schwartz' message has to do with intellectual ferment. He finds this to be in short supply at Uvic, and feels it can best be encouraged by severing the umbilical cord that unites the university with mama Victoria.

"The most healthy situation for a university is for it to be in a cold war with the community," he declared last week to Times education reporter Des Bill.

"That's why the great medieval universities were surrounded by walls. They needed them."

As for the community, Mr. Schwartz feels that it should content itself with leaving Uvic's money on the doorstep, then getting the heck out of the way.

★

These rumblings have caused a certain amount of panic at the water-hole.

The venerable wildebeest that crops Victoria's journalistic grasses alongside us has showed the whites of its eyes, flung its tail in air, and emitted a gaseous editorial in which it maintains the university should be "part and parcel" of the community that helps finance it.

Well, that's a chummy notion, but I for one won't buy it.

I don't think a university should be part and parcel of anything, and I suggest that if it becomes such, it loses its reason for existing.

While I don't fully agree with Mr. Schwartz — whose cold war concept impresses me as a paper dragon—I suggest that we should love Uvic, feed it, and otherwise leave it alone.

If we insist that it shave its beard, shine its shoes and come sit in the living room, we hinder it from doing for our young what we simply aren't geared to accomplish.

This is to de-louse them of their illusions, melt the baby fat from their intellects, and send them into the world as mentally capable men and women.

Personally, I think we need more speakers-out of instructor Schwartz' calibre.

If we acquire enough of them, and if their words are heeded, we may find that our sons and daughters are being educated rather than merely job-trained or kept from under our feet for a few years.

One delightful result will be that we'll have more thinkers and fewer fatheads in community affairs, public office, management and government.

★

Where I would cross a buttoned foil with Mr. Schwartz and his bristling associates is over their insistence that our (sorry . . . I mean their) university is short of intellectual ferment.

I think they over-state the case, as eager young men are inclined to do.

The clash of ideas in fortress Uvic is, in fact, so forthright that I venture into its precincts no oftener than need be. Among the husband-hunters and the time-servers are altogether too many young people who insist on making me stretch my wits.

They are fermenting intellectually all over the place, and I run into the same thing at home, where two Uvic students are ready to rattle my ribs with an argument any time I care to stick my neck out.

I like what's been happening to them in the necessarily closed world of the university.

We don't see very much of them, but when we do, they're stimulating company.

They have acquired the capacity to get excited over ideas as well as things.

Part of this, of course, is natural growth, but it does seem to me that the university which they are so fierce to defend is teaching them to think.

Full Report Tuesday On Plumper Pollution

By JIM HUME

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health on Tuesday will hear a full report of the air pollution problem at Plumper Bay.

The health hazard, destined for elimination by Jan. 31, still exists but only because a specially designed wood-shaving processing machine isn't performing as it should.

Operators of the sawmill have informed the board of health that all sawdust from the mill is now being shipped to Port Angeles.

The manager of the mill has also informed the board that "some unforseen difficulties have arisen" with the operation of a British machine designed to process shavings and eliminate beehive burners.

An engineer from the factory where the machines are manufactured is expected to arrive in the city shortly.

"The procedure being used will in all probability be installed in many other lumber mills in this area," the manager wrote the board. "Beehive burners will then become a thing of the past."

The mill has been the cause of controversy for several years with residents of the surrounding district complaining of damage from sooty fly-ash.

Tuesday the health board will decide whether to wait for the British engineer to put the new equipment in proper working order or whether to take further action against the mill.

BENNETT PAYS 'BILL' OF $50,000 TO 'Y'

Premier W. A. C. Bennett paid his bill to the Y today.

When the premier officiated at the opening of the new Y building last year he promised an additional provincial grant of $50,000 towards the building fund.

A cheque was received today. The provincial contribution now totals $100,000.

New Truck Lane Being Surveyed

Provincial highways department is surveying a right-of-way for a third lane on the Thetis Park slope of the Trans-Canada Highway, an official said Thursday.

The survey is needed for estimating cost of a full-scale additional northbound lane for truck and slow traffic to replace the present makeshift surfaced shoulder between Thetis underpass and the limits of Thetis Park.

The survey is not connected to another completed some weeks ago which plotted the widening of the Trans-Canada Highway entrance to Victoria to four full lanes.

The official said cost estimates are still under preparation for the four-lane study of the stretch between the Thetis underpass and the highway junction with Douglas Street.

LOGGER 'POOR'

A young Colwood logger, pinned by a falling tree Thursday, is in poor condition in St. Joseph's Hospital.

It was some time before workmates found Eric Peterson, 24, 3098 Paisley, after the accident near Sooke.

The two-foot thick tree was lying across his body.

A faller for Butler Bros., Peterson suffered back, facial and internal injuries.

'CRITICAL SHORTAGE OF TYPE B'

Donors with type B negative blood are needed tonight at Red Cross House on Fort St. near Cook.

There is a critical shortage of this rare type at the B.C. blood bank. At least 75 pints are needed immediately.

Today is the last day of the February clinic. The clinic will be open from 6:30 to 9 p.m. for all donors.

A recent two-day clinic at the Universtiy of Victoria collected 757 pints of blood.

'MOST UNUSUAL PARTY'

Winnifred Martha Lamb, 551 Niagara had an unusual birthday party Jan. 9, but Magistrate William Ostler acquitted her of bootlegging.

He gave judgment today in central court dismissing a charge of keeping liquor for sale.

When police raided her home they found 17 mickeys of rye under a bedroom dresser and 12 cases of beer in a chesterfield storage compartment.

Other bottles of liquor were found throughout the home.

DELAYED PARTY

The woman testified at an earlier hearing the liquor was for a delayed birthday party.

She produced a birth certificate to show her birthday was Jan. 8.

She said several guests pooled $55 to buy the liquor.

"By ordinary standards it was a most unusual party," commented Magistrate Ostler.

'CURIOUS'

He noted the woman was not too familiar with some of her guests and the rye drinkers were in the kitchen and the beer drinkers in the living room.

He added it was "curious she bought mickeys instead of larger bottles."

He said the woman "may well be a 'bootlegger'" but her explanation created a doubt great enough to warrant a dismissal.

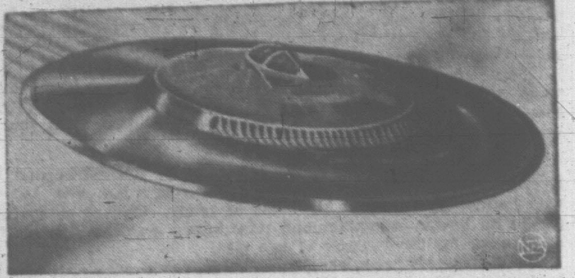
A. Most of the road is situated on a natural strip of land, but part of the roadbed is man-made, say highways department officials.

DR. MAX'S ADVICE

Watched by Aliens? Better Believe It!

By DESMOND BILL



Saucer Sighted on Vancouver Island?

A group of women had coffee cups in their hands and flying saucers on their minds after a meeting Thursday night at the University of Victoria.

They were members of the Faculty Women's Club and they had just heard a talk by Dr. Max Edwards on unidentified flying objects.

Most of them seemed willing to concede after that it is at least possible this world has been visited by strangers from another planet.

But to Dr. Edwards, a linguist who reads 15 languages and has made a hobby out of studying UFO, there is no doubt about it.

"I run the risk of ridicule, I know. Some people think you are a nut. But I believe otherwise after studying the evidence," he said.

★

To the Uvic professor, the evidence is "shattering and incontrovertible."

But when he first heard about flying saucers 15 years ago he scoffed at the idea.

Since then, he said, he has studied the matter in great detail both personally and by keeping up with the literature on the subject.

He told the Faculty Club what he has found out.

The best study on the subject is by a French physicist, Aime Michel. He plotted all the sightings of UFO over a number of years and discovered they followed a pattern.

Michel noted that most sightings occurred along two straight lines that circled the earth and intersected one another at about 50-degree angles.

On the basis of his theory, Michel predicted where future spottings would be reported and in the course of time his predictions were verified.

Another expert on the subject is Professor H. Oberth, a one-time German rocket scientist who worked for the U.S. government's space program for 10 years.

★

Oberth stated recently, "One must regard as real a phenomenon that has been definitely confirmed by 8,000 reports of sightings and landings and partially confirmed by at least 50,000 other reports."

Dr. Edwards also quoted the late General George C. Marshall, former U.S. defence secretary, as saying, "My government is aware we are being watched by alien beings who are trying to work out a way to breathe our atmosphere."

Dr. Edwards cited numerous examples of how descriptions of the sightings in widely different places and areas coincided. He gave examples of incidents involving hundreds of persons who confirmed strange events involving UFO.

He outlined the history of sightings, which in modern times started in 1891, although there are about 300 reports "back in time" of occurrences which could have been UFO. Dr. Edwards said the reports stopped almost entirely between 1916 and 1947 showing they did not result from a war psychosis or the influence of science-fiction comics.

He said too that when the reports began again in 1947 in North America the descriptions of what happened were exactly similar to reports in New Zealand in 1909.

Dr. Edwards said photographs have been made of UFO and of the burning that results when they land. He said plaster casts have been made of the footprints of the creatures that emerged from the crafts that landed.

The landings have taken place even on Vancouver Island, he said.

Dr. Edwards named a farmer near Mount Newton who in February last year saw a flying saucer land in one of his fields.

★

"He called the newspapers, the police and the airport and got laughed at for his trouble. But later he got a friend and they tested the ground with a geiger counter and found it was radioactive."

And one woman asked him, "What would you do if you actually saw one land?"

He replied, "I'd be scared stiff. I'd run away and watch from a safe distance."

PUNCHED OFFICER

Reckless Driver Jailed

A youth who drove recklessly around city streets and then punched a police officer was sentenced in central court today to eight months imprisonment.

Richard M. C. Jancowski, Albany Hotel, pleaded guilty Saturday to criminal negligence and assaulting police officer Brian Hayes Friday night.

He also received suspended sentences for being a minor without insurance and driving as a learner without an adult licence holder beside him.

PSYCHIATRIC PROBLEM

Counsel Digby Kier asked he not be sent to jail as the youth had a psychiatric problem but Magistrate J. A. Byers disagreed.

"Knowing something about your upbringing, your previous behavior and your difficulties, I would be the first to hesitate to send you to a penal institution," he told Jancowski.

ESCAPED CUSTODY

But he ordered the youth returned to the young offenders' unit because of previous convictions for theft and escaping custody.

Friday night Jancowski was chased by a police vehicle three times around Douglas, Discovery Government and Bay streets at speeds over 60 mph.

SPARK BEHIND last year's Dorion inquiry will speak tonight at 8 at Mount View High School on Carey Road. Yukon Conservative MP Erik Nielsen is sharp critic of Liberal government.

Adventist Service

Pastor A. M. Spenst will speak on Dyspeptic Religion at the Saturday morning service in Victoria Seventh-Day Adventist Church, Pandora and Vancouver at 11 a.m.

Driver In 'Shocking' State

Two motorists were fined and another two were remanded for sentence when they pleaded guilty in central court today to impaired driving.

James V. Slavin, 1701 Midgard, was fined $400 after court was told his blood contained .33 per cent alcohol.

Slavin was involved in a rear-end collision Thursday evening on Bay near Cook Street.

"You realize the shocking condition you were in, do you?" asked Magistrate William Ostler.

Steven Panchuk, 1256 Yates, was fined $300. He was involved in a head-on collision in the 800 block, Quadra Street, Sunday.

John David Humber, 18, of 2517 Graham, took money out of his wallet and tore it up, then ripped his shirt Tuesday night.

He had just collided with a fence when he tried to turn into a driveway on Richmond Road.

"You certainly ran the gamut of irrational conduct, didn't you?" said Magistrate Ostler remanding Humber to Feb. 15 for sentence.

Michael Nemec, 43, address unavailable, was remanded to Feb. 11 for sentence after he admitted impaired driving.

Historic B.C. Event Told in Diary

Dangerous Quest for River Gold

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A diary which throws new light on a gold rush which had Victorians wild with excitement in 1862 has been given to the Provincial Archives.

The diary of John Joseph Cowley, an English-born Victorian, deals with the search for gold along the Stikine River in Northern B.C.

The important find was discovered among the family papers of Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton of the B.C. Supreme Court, who turned it over to the archives.

●

"It's the only first-hand exciting event of the period," said archivist Willard Ireland. "For some time we have been looking for something like this."

The Stikine, which runs roughly halfway between Cassiar and Stewart high in the northwest, is one of the most treacherous rivers in the province. It is flanked by huge mountains, some more than 10,000 feet in height.

●

The B.C. government in 1964 listed the Stikine as a potential power site.

In 1861, a French-Canadian prospector, Alexander "Buck" Choquette, went up the river with some Indians and discovered gold in its sand-bars.

News of the discovery spread quickly and the following year 800 miners, mostly from Victoria, left for the Stikine territory in the hopes of making their fortunes.

Cowley's diary, which starts with his departure from London, and includes a stop-over in California, tells of his adventures in his search for gold.

The trip up the Stikine proved a back-breaking experience, frought with dangers. At one point they moved through a canyon where the waters tore at the mountains. So powerful was the current whole trees had been uprooted and were being tumbled down the river.

Cowley, like most of the miners, didn't do as well as he hoped.

●

He died in Victoria in 1909.

Lacking in the diary is Cowley's family background — which the archives would like to know because relatives in England may still have in their possession some of his letters which might give more historic information.

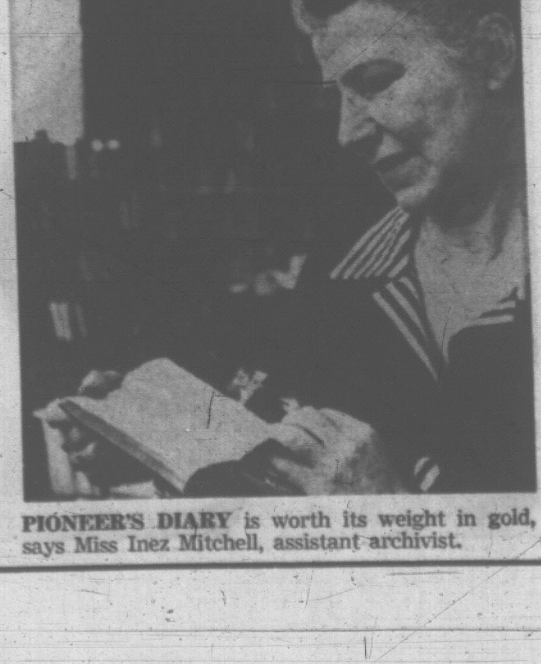
Mr. Justice Wootton recalls visits by Cowley to his home.

●

"I was only a young boy when he was living," he said. "I remember my parents saying he was a keen naturalist, a collector. He was also artistic."

He thinks Cowley may have come from Cornwall.

This is possible as a large number of the miners and prospectors in California, Nevada and Montana at the time were Cornish immigrants. Cowley may have meant to stay in California, but moved to B.C. when he heard of the gold discovery.



PIONEER'S DIARY is worth its weight in gold, says Miss Inez Mitchell, assistant archivist.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Pre-Dinner Panic? No More With These

By Penny Saver

Are you ever caught downtown in the five o'clock rush? It happens to all of us sooner or later. Nothing is more frustrating, especially if you have nothing planned for dinner. This means that when you get home, you must think of something to prepare, and have your dinner well under way by the time your family comes in. This is almost impossible. However, the impossible has to be achieved, as your family must be fed, and they are all going to be "as mad as hornets" if dinner isn't ready at the usual time.

On days like these, a freezer is a boon to the housewife. One item to have on hand in the case of an emergency is a package of beef steakettes. These little wonders are buttered, and all that you have to do is to fry or broil them. A bag of four steaks sells for 59 cents.

These must be prepared while still frozen, because they are made of very thin slices of beef, stacked to make one steak. If they are allowed to thaw, the slices begin to peel from the steak.

Meat pies are other items that should be stocked in your freezer. These just take about half an hour in a hot oven, and with hardly any effort at all dinner is ready. Chicken or beef pies, with tender vegetables and rich, brown gravy, are priced at 45 cents for the package of two pies.

In the line of frozen, complete dinners, try a chopped sirloin beef dinner. This contains hearty pieces of prime beef, French-fried potatoes, peas in a butter sauce, and a blueberry muffin for dessert. The complete dinner sells for 69 cents.

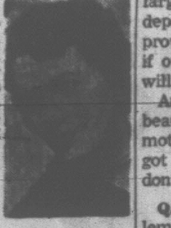
A quick dessert that's simple to prepare is sponge pudding. This is a self-saucing packaged mix. Different flavors, including apple, lemon, creamy chocolate, banana and caramel, sell for 29 cents. Delicious raisin pudding sells for 33 cents. For an added treat, add raisins to the other flavors. You need one-half cup of the fruit for each package.

Do you want to know where Penny found these quick dinner ideas? Give her a call at 382-3131.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

An Allergy or Eye Strain



Lowman

Q. I rub my eyes quite often because they itch. I am 15 and just started wearing mascara. It can't be the mascara because my eyes itched before I ever wore any. It can't be that I don't get enough sleep because school nights I get nine hours of sleep, and on weekends . . . more than that!

A. This could be due to a mild infection, eye strain or an allergy. See an eye doctor for his advice.

Q. I am the father of a six-month-old baby, and a two-year-old boy. The boy is the picture of me and we are very proud of him. If my daughter grows up to look like her mother, she will be a beautiful girl. However, it also appears that she will have her mother's legs. Her mother has had heavy legs since she was a young girl.

Is there any advice you can offer to prevent our daughter having the same shape legs? Are there any exercises she can do as a young girl to shape her legs for womanhood?

A. I do not think you can tell what shape legs a baby six months old will have when she grows up. They all look chubby and shapeless at that age. However, if you are right, there are several possibilities. If the heavy calves and thighs are due to bony structure and heavy muscles, exercise cannot help much. Weight distribution can also be inherited though. If the overly-large measurements are due to deposits of fat, exercise can improve the situation. Of course, if overweight is present, dieting will be in order.

Anyway you say she will be beautiful if she looks like her mother, and look what Mama got in the marriage lottery! So, don't worry too much.

Q. I have a very serious problem—my figure! I did weigh 142, but I reduced to 136. My bust measures 34, waist 27 and hips 42 inches. This hip measurement is a real problem and seems to get larger. What exercises should I take? I would also appreciate any exercises you have for round shoulders. Please send me exercises for these disasters.

You see, I have two lovely boys, ages one and two, and a wonderful, adorable husband. You can imagine how important it is for me to look my best. I wish I had been as determined a few months ago as I am now. MY MIND IS MADE UP!"

A. That's what it takes! This reader mentioned dieting so I judge that she is overweight and is counting calories. Do this exercise for round shoulders. Stand tall. Take the end of a wand or bath towel in each hand, behind your back. Hold on tightly as you raise your arms backwards-upward as far as you can, keeping the elbows straight. At the same time lower the head backward. Return arms and head to starting position and continue, slowly.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Oh, for Heaven's Sake

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: There are 365 days in the year, right? So will you please tell me why my sister had to pick the day of my wedding anniversary for her wedding date? Don't tell me she forgot, because she was my maid of honor and she knew perfectly well that that was my wedding date.

Now all of my future wedding anniversaries will have to be shared with her. That just burns me up!

BURNED UP

DEAR BURNED: Even though you are burned up, don't make an ash of yourself by voicing your disapproval.

DEAR ABBY: About four years ago my sister-in-law gave us an old beat-up baby bed that she'd had in her basement for ten years. My husband sanded it down, painted it and fixed it up like new, and we used it until our baby was four years old. Then we traded it along with a lot of other odds and ends on a new set of bedroom furniture for the child's room. My sister-in-law heard about it and demanded that we get the baby bed back for her. (She had no use for it, she just wanted to start trouble.) Of course, by then it was too late. Well, she has a very big mouth, so she spread it all over the family and different ones took sides, and now there are lots of hard feelings. I admit I should have asked her before getting rid of it, but honestly, Abby, I had no idea she wanted it back. How can I patch up this mess? FAMILY ROW

DEAR FAMILY: Ask her how much she thinks the bed was worth, and insist that she take the cash. Even if it's expensive, it will shut her big mouth, and that's worth something.

DEAR ABBY: One of my best friends has a heart as big as this world. She knows what it is like to be forsaken, so she has been attempting to provide a home for forsaken animals. How can I tell her tactfully that she cannot keep a house full of cats? Abby, the odor is indescribable. She works, the house is closed all day, the smell comes through the walls. The odor clings to her clothing. Whew! I am afraid she will lose her job. These cats have not been "doctored" and they are producing more cats, which in turn produce still more cats; cats which have never seen the outdoors! Her kindness to these poor creatures is misplaced. Her nose must be numb. What can be done? HER FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Both the Department of Public Health and the SPCA should be called to investigate the living quarters of your friend. And a mental examination is very much in order for her. She has a "good" heart, but I fear the trouble is in her head, poor soul.

Problems? Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send one dollar to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., for Abby's booklet, "HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS."

TODAY'S RECIPE

ONION AND BEEF CASSEROLE

Four cups (1½ pounds) sliced onions, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 pound minced beef, 1 cup soft, stale bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon oregano, 1 can (10-ounce) condensed tomato soup, ⅓ cup water, ¼ cup buttered bread crumbs.

Saute onions in melted butter until transparent, about 10 minutes. Arrange half of the onions in bottom of a greased 6-cup casserole. Brown meat, then add bread crumbs, salt, pepper and oregano.

Spread meat mixture over onions and cover with remaining half of sauted onions.

Combine tomato soup and water. Pour over onions and bake in a 350-degree Farenheit oven until onions are almost tender, about 30 minutes.

Sprinkle top of casserole with buttered bread crumbs, return to oven and continue baking until onions are tender and crumbs browned, about 10 minutes longer. Makes four to five servings.

Prince Charles May Visit Canada in 1967

LONDON (UPI) — Prince Charles, 17-year-old heir to the British throne, may well make his first visit to Canada next year, informed sources said Thursday.

He could make a trip alone except for an equerry or two because he becomes an adult under royal law on his 18th birthday Nov. 14, the sources said.

Or, depending on the dates, he might accompany his parents, Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip, if they take up an invitation announced by Canadian Prime Minister Lester Pearson to attend the 1967 centennial celebrations, the sources said.

The sources said the Queen is willing to go although she did not enjoy her last visit to Quebec province in 1964 when separatist movement threatened her life. They said her advisers did not want her exposed to that kind of "welcome" again.

Approaches have been made from Ottawa about asking Prince Charles to make the speech from the throne at the opening of a centennial youth parliament in July, 1967.

PRINCESS, TOO?

The sources said that if he went to this, his younger sister, Princess Anne, might also go as well because she would be on school vacation at the time and Prince Philip encourages his children to support youth movements.

Pressure for a Canadian trip by Prince Charles is being exerted because Canadians want him to visit them after his three months at school in Australia, the sources said.

They said that to avoid any possible unpleasantness as in Quebec last time, the Queen next year might well make only a short visit to Ottawa for a few events and then return directly home. If time permitted, she might take in a few cities in the prairie areas that she did not see last time.

The sources said all this has to be talked over privately in Buckingham Palace and by the prime ministers and officials on both sides.

They will advise the Queen on what they consider best in the circumstances, and she is always guided by them.

Prince Philip is expected to discuss the various plans when he is in Canada in March on his whistle-stop trip through North America after the current royal Caribbean tour.

GIVE $4,300 TO HELP HANDICAPPED CHILDREN

PRESENTATION AT CLINIC AUXILIARY'S MEETING

A cheque for the sum of $4,300 was presented by the Women's Auxiliary to the Handicapped Children's Clinic to R. F. Hassen, treasurer of the clinic board of directors at the auxiliary's annual meeting, Wednesday evening in the Pacific Club.

Auxiliary treasurer Mrs. A. Frankson made the presentation and suggested that $2,000 be earmarked for the building fund with the remainder being used for clinic maintenance.

S[illegible] reported that the balance for the year was $4,801.54. Receipts, including the balance of $5,954.53 from the previous year, totalled $11,201.69. Chief fund-raising projects she noted were a bazaar, which realized $1,456.16; monthly bingo games, $1,197.29, and a tag day, $1,657.45.

Disbursements were $6,400.65, with main expenditure being the sum of $5,450 donated to the clinic.

Chairman of the volunteers, Mrs. W. M. Martin announced that a total of 5,512 hours had been spent by the auxiliary volunteers at the clinic, working directly with the children. There were 84 volunteers, she said, who spent an average of two to six hours a week, assisting with classes or in the lunchroom.

During her report, retiring president Mrs. G. A. Spring announced that a showcase displaying handicrafts was now at the clinic and one shelf is for the sale of the children's ceramics. She asked that anyone with contributions for this project contact Mrs. Martin. She also announced that a luncheon would be held on March 9 in the Britannia legion hall.

Representing the clinic board of directors, vice-president Charles Carter noted that the most important contribution of the auxiliary and the volunteers was the respect and knowledge the handicapped children gained from them. "The time and care spent on them," he said, "gives them a sense of belonging and security that no one else but their mothers can give them."

Mrs. Spring conducted the installation of officers which followed. Mrs. A. R. Guy was installed as president; Mrs. T. Graham, vice-president; Mrs. D. Bavington, treasurer; Mrs. K. W. Murray, recording secretary, and Miss Linda Beadle, corresponding. Re-elected chairman of volunteers was Mrs. Martin.

AGAINST RHODESIA

Tory Challenges Trade Embargoes

PM Reviews Alleged Spy Evidence

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Thursday he is reviewing the complete record of the case of alleged spy George Victor Spencer of Vancouver

He was replying in the Commons to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker who asked whether any decision had yet been reached on establishment of a judicial inquiry into the case.

Mr. Diefenbaker asked earlier this week for such an inquiry by two or three judges of the Supreme Court of Canada. Spencer was dismissed from his post office job but has not been prosecuted. Justice Minister Cardin has said Spencer will be kept under surveillance as long as necessary.

Mr. Diefenbaker also asked whether the RCMP is investigating Spencer's "potential threat" that "heads would roll" if he were prosecuted.

Mr. Cardin said this point would be included in Mr. Pearson's statement on the case when a decision is reached concerning an inquiry.

Uvic Stadium Grant Approved

The Canadian Confederation Centennial Committee of B.C. has approved a grant of $223,982 towards the building of a sports stadium at the University of Victoria.

The announcement Thursday clears the way for construction to commence once the municipalities involved agree on how the stadium should be used.

Four municipalities, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Saanich and Victoria have already agreed to contribute $295,984 towards construction.

The university is donating the land.

Alderman Michael Griffin says approval of the grants clears the way for an early start on the $519,967 project.

"If we can get unanimity on the way the stadium should be used we're ready to roll," he said.

A special committee of the Intermunicipal Committee is expected to submit a report on stadium use some time next week.

The matter has been touchy with several local sports groups expressing the fear that a stadium on the university campus would eventually become a sports centre for students to the exclusion of other groups.

Designed to seat 5,000 fans the stadium is scheduled for completion in the summer of 1967.

Sanctions Claimed Illegal But Minister Disagrees

OTTAWA (CP)—A new issue popped up in the Commons Thursday: Are Canada's economic sanctions against Rhodesia illegal?

Wallace Nesbitt, Conservative party spokesman on external affairs, charged that many of the sanctions imposed by the cabinet in November and December required parliamentary approval to be legal.

Later, Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) went further and asked whether it was "a kind Christian act" for Canada to help cast the people of Rhodesia, black and white, into economic distress.

It was the first time the Opposition has challenged the trade embargoes against Rhodesia and External Affairs Minister Martin said he was surprised. Lawyers in the justice department had assured him the sanctions are legal.

The Conservatives were expected to press their attack today as the Commons continues its study of external affairs spending estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31. The trade and transport departments are next in line for debate.

Is Sugar, Tobacco Strategic Goods?

Mr. Nesbitt, a lawyer and MP for Oxford, said some of the cabinet orders cutting off trade with Rhodesia were based on a statute controlling trade in strategic goods. But what did Rhodesian tobacco and sugar have to do with Canada's security?

He said the government should introduce legislation to cover the sanctions. Parliament should have been called into special session shortly after the Nov. 8 election to debate the subject.

Canada had set a precedent in foreign policy by waging economic war on a de facto state because it didn't approve of the policies of Ian Smith's white-supremacy regime or of the way in which Smith had seized independence Nov. 11.

Mr. Nesbitt said Parliament cannot evaluate the merit of the sanctions because the government has withheld details about the constitutional dispute between Britain and the Rhodesian government.

Mr. Martin replied that the unity of the Commonwealth was threatened shortly after Smith illegally broke away from British rule. Canada had to act quickly to demonstrate its opposition to an unconstitutional government that practised racial discrimination.

Stinging Attack on Smith Regime

In one of his strongest attacks on the Smith regime, he accused it of defying the rule of law, denying the franchise and land ownership to the Negro majority, outlawing political parties, detaining opposition leaders without trial and isolating Rhodesians from world opinion through press and radio censorship.

The minister said the legal authority for Canada's trade sanctions are a resolution passed by the United Nations Security Council Nov. 20 and an agreement with Britain six days later to co-operate closely in imposing sanctions.

He tabled an exchange of letters between himself and the British high commission here confirming the agreement and said this constitutes an intergovernmental arrangement or commitment under terms of the Export and Import Permits Act.

In reply to Mr. Churchill, the minister said economic reprisals against a whole country are regrettable but in this case they are morally justifiable.

New Democratic MPs applauded Mr. Martin but did not take part in the exchange.

The minister said economic sanctions are a recent departure for Canada, but there were several precedents.

Canada had cut off exports of military equipment and vehicles to South Africa and Portugal since 1963 pursuant to a UN resolution and to protest the racial policies of those countries. It had long been government policy to ban the shipment of arms to troubled areas.

Inconsistent With Tory Chief

He said Mr. Nesbitt's position was inconsistent with the stand taken by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker against South Africa's apartheid policies when he was prime minister. Mr. Diefenbaker was absent from the House during the exchange.

Most other speakers Thursday discussed the war in Viet Nam. Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) challenged Mr. Martin to state publicly how Canada's Viet Nam policy differs from that of the United States. The minister said Tuesday there are "fundamental" policy differences between the two countries.

Mr. Brewin quoted a letter signed by Pierre Elliott Trudeau (L — Montreal Mount Royal) and other university professors in Montreal urging Canada to oppose flatly the U.S. bombing raids on North Viet Nam.

Creditiste Leader Caouette and A. B. Patterson (SC—Fraser Valley) defended U.S. intervention in Viet Nam, saying it is intended only to halt the spread of communism.

Two Liberal MPs, Jean-Charles Cantin (Quebec South) and Warren Allman (Montreal Notre - Dame - de - Grace), said chances for peace would be increased if Communist China was admitted to the United Nations.

Ottawa Studies Pension Coverage For Services

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer said Thursday the cabinet soon will consider whether to apply the Canada Pension Plan to members of the armed forces.

However, he told the Commons in reply to Max Saltsman (NDP — Waterloo South), any changes to the Armed Forces Superannuation Act will not adversely affect servicemen but in most cases provide them with additional benefits.

POSTAL WORKERS

Strike Right Demanded By Leaders

OTTAWA (CP) — The 11,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers will call a strike vote if proposed collective bargaining legislation does not give them the right to strike, President Bill Kay announced Thursday.

He spoke at a press conference following an 11-day meeting of the union's executive.

Mr. Kay said the strike position is not new to his union—comprised of postal clerks, mainly engaged in sorting mail.

"We've been after the right to strike for 16 years but now, with a new executive and collective bargaining legislation just around the corner, we felt we must make our position official."

INSISTANT

The union will inform the government of its insistence that any bargaining legislation concerning its members "must place us under the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigations Act"—the act that most trade unions come under, with full provision for strikes if certain procedures are followed.

The union also will "urge the government . . to establish the post office as a Crown corporation, thereby placing us under provisions of that act."

If the bargaining legislation presented to Parliament "is not acceptable under the terms of our mandate on collective bargaining and the government rejects the proposal to make the post office a Crown corporation, then a referendum vote of our membership will be taken with our executive's recommendation that strike action be instituted immediately to resolve the dispute."

Mr. Kay predicted that, should such a referendum be held, "the vote in large centres would be overwhelmingly in favor of a strike."

Montreal Police Said Indifferent

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police Chief Ralph Booth said Thursday that Montreal police are condoning organized crime through indifference.

He said Vancouver police have uncovered a nationwide stolen car ring with its roots in Montreal. Police there had been given the names of three suspects, but had shown interest only in return of the cars, the chief said.

"I don't know who sets the policy in Quebec, but they have no intention of returning the three accused in this case unless those persons are caught in the province of Quebec."

"This is entirely wrong. This is not protecting the public.

Detectives here described the racket as a theft-by-order scheme. Late model cars are taken from the Montreal area, equipped with new serial numbers and then sold throughout Canada.

Four convertibles, including a sports car owned by Montreal Alouette football star Bob Minihane, have been recovered in Vancouver.

MISSING CLUE IN CUBAN MISSILE CRISIS REVEALED

No-Invasion Pledge Asked of U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the last missing clues in the Cuban missile crisis has been disclosed with the publication of an emotional, rambling letter from Soviet Premier Khrushchev offering a solution.

The letter to the late president John F. Kennedy had been left out of previous accounts of the 1962 missile confrontation.

In it Khrushchev implies that Fidel Castro would demobilize the missile force in exchange for a no-invasion pledge.

The letter, which led to ending the U.S.-Russian confrontation, is contained in The Missile Crisis, by Elie Abel, chief of the London bureau of the National Broadcasting Company. At that time he was NBC's diplomatic correspondent.

The book is published by J. B. Lippincott Company of Philadelphia.

WANTED PLEDGE

Abel said that Khrushchev suggests that Kennedy issue a no-invasion pledge and recall the American fleet guarding the seas around Cuba. With such a pledge there would be no further need to keep Russian military specialists in Cuba, the former Soviet leader said.

The letter, quoted by Abel, concludes:

"If you have not lost your self-control, and sensibly conceive what this might lead to, then, Mr. President, we and you ought not now to pull on the ends of the rope in which you have tied the knot of war, because the more we pull, the tighter the knot will be tied. And a moment may come when the knot will be tied so tight that even he who tied it will not have the strength to untie it, and then it will be necessary to cut that knot? And what that would mean is not for me to explain to you, because you yourself understand perfectly of what terrible forces our countries dispose.

"Consequently, if there is no intention to tighten that knot and thereby doom the world to catastrophe of thermonuclear war, then let us not only relax the forces pulling on the ends of the rope, let us take measures to untie that knot. We (the leaders of the Soviet Union) are ready for this."

Abel said state department experts agreed that Khrushchev had probably dictated the letter to a secretary, then hurriedly dispatched it without editing or discussing it with other Soviet leaders. It was received in Washington Oct. 26, 1962.

Former state secretary Dean Acheson is quoted as saying that Khrushchev appeared to be "either tight or scared" when he wrote the letter.

The letter was acted upon in good faith by the United States and led to subsequent withdrawal of Soviet missiles from Cuba and the lessening of tensions.

BRIDGE LESSON

By JACOBY AND SON

One of the great advantages of the weak two bid is that it gives you a chance to tell your partner what to lead when otherwise you would be shut out of the bidding.

Neither vulnerable
For bidding and opening lead see article.

This is a strong reason why we only open weak two bids with a good suit. There is little point in telling your partner to open a suit when you really don't want it led.

Suppose that East is not playing weak two bids and passes his hand. South has a perfect opening no-trump bid and makes it, whereupon North takes him right to three no-trump. West is on lead and will almost surely open a heart, whereupon South will have no trouble making at least ten tricks.

Now see what happens if East opens a weak two bid. South will have a terrific problem. If he passes East will simply play at two spades and go down one trick. If he bids two no-trump, it is a cinch that North will take him to three and, after West opens a spade, South will find himself going down two tricks.

Things will work out better if South elects to double the two-spade bid for takeout. North will bid some number of clubs. If he bids only three clubs, he will play the hand there and wind up making his part score. If he bids four clubs, he will be taken to five.

North can make five clubs on a squeeze if East makes the normal opening of a spade, and North plays West for the queen, ten and nine of diamonds.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

Eleven Canadian television stations have received the nod from the Board of Broadcast Governors to move into the color field.

The BBG approved the color applications at a board meeting Jan. 11. It had announced earlier that it would accept such applications without holding public hearings to allow broadcasters to get set for the start of experimental color transmissions next July 1.

Stephen

Starting on that date, stations will be able to broadcast in color experimentally during the overnight period when they normally would be off the air. A shakedown period starts Oct. 1 for color transmissions during regular hours to iron out equipment faults and train staff.

The formal debut of color TV comes next Jan. 1.

Stations in Kitchener and Toronto applied for transmission of all forms of color TV, the only two stations to do so. Both propose to get cameras that will permit live color transmissions.

Eight stations, including CHEK-TV Victoria and CHAN-TV Vancouver, applied for permission to transmit network programs or those on film or video-tape in color.

A Lethbridge station sought approval only for permission to install equipment to transmit color programs originating with a network, without provision for color film or video-tape.

The BBG recommended approval in all cases and the applications were sent to the government where it is expected they will get formal approval soon.

* * *

It's difficult to believe the Americans chopped a total of 15 series last month. ABC-TV led the losers' parade with seven, CBS-TV axed six, while NBC-TV lopped off two so far.

Of the lot, four were dramatic series, three were comedy shows, two westerns and two variety shows.

Shindig, Ben Casey, The Jimmy Dean Show, Amos Burke: Secret Agent, Nightlife, O.K. Crackerby and The King Family were given the pink slip by ABC-TV.

CBS-TV knocked off Slattery's People, Rawhide, The Steve Lawrence Show, The Loner, Trials of O'Brien and Mr. Ed.

Convoy and Mona McCluskey were cut by NBC-TV.

Human Chain Threatened By Mothers

VANCOUVER (CP)—A group of 25 Vancouver mothers Thursday threatened to form a human chain across a city intersection unless a school crosswalk is repainted by Monday morning.

The women were among the 167 mothers who signed a petition insisting on improved crosswalk observance by motorists where a six-year-old boy was struck by a car Jan. 18.

Johnny Bolger Beaton was thrown 80 feet when struck by the car, and is still in a coma in hospital.

R. Boyes, assistant city traffic director, has promised to have the crosswalk markings retouched as soon as weather permits and to increase supervision at the crosswalk during school hours.

Searchers Thanked By Parents

Parents of three youths believed drowned off Oak Bay have issued a statement thanking searchers.

Missing since mid-January when they went on a brant-hunting trip in a 12-foot boat are Dennis Powell, 18, of 1240 Newport; Ronald Hynds, 18, of 2428 Dalhousie, and Wade Squire, 17, of 2741 Dewdney.

"We would like to express our heartfelt thanks and deepest gratitude to all the wonderful people who helped in the search for our sons," said Mrs. Joyce Powell, "and also to those who prayed for their survival."

She said she was also speaking for Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hynds and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Squire.

"Words seem inadequate at this time but we are eternally grateful to everyone."

Among those in the search were Air-Sea Search and Rescue aircraft, coast guard cutters, private launches and RCMP patrol boats.

Carelessness Major Cause Of Car Crashes

Carelessness—including speeding—was the major cause of fatal traffic accidents last year, Attorney-general Robert Bonner reported to the legislature Thursday.

He submitted answers to questions by Liberal Leader Ray Perrault which showed that for the first 11 months of 1965:

Carelessness was blamed for 107 fatal accidents; alcohol caused 54; defective steering or brakes accounted for nine; roads under repair resulted in six; obstructions in the road were responsible for four; and tire blowouts produced four.

Total number of accidents during the same period included 5,926 blamed on carelessness; 1,267 on defective brakes or steering; 1,062 on driver impairment; 275 on obstructions; 468 on road repairs; and 467 on blowouts.

'Evervbody Get Out Quickly'

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Commons Thursday took passing notice of the fact that the parliament building burned down 50 years ago on that date with a loss of seven lives.

Speader Lucien Lamoureux mentioned the anniversary and read from The Hansard, the verbatim report, of the day.

Lamoureux said the fire broke out in the evening while the Commons was discussing fisheries.

"At this point," read the speaker, "Mr. C. R. Stewart, chief doorkeeper of the House of Commons, came hurriedly into the chamber and called out:

"There is a big fire in the reading room; everybody get out quickly."

The Hansard of 50 years ago calmly continued:

"The sitting was immediately suspended without formality, and members, officials and visitors in the galleries, fled from the chamber.

"Some of them were almost overcome by the rapidly-advancing smoke and flames before reaching a place of safety."

Forty-six years ago Wednesday Parliament sat for the first time in the present parliament building erected following the blaze.

'We Both Were Embarrassed'

William Arthur Brown, 1429 Vining, in central court Thursday was placed on a $250 bond for six months when convicted of assault.

Court was told he ripped open the front of the dress of Mrs. Phyllis Upton, 4372 Parkside, while she was on duty a the Melrose Cafe, 622 Yates.

The incident happened about 1 a.m. Jan. 21 and Mrs. Upton was left standing on Yates St. in a state of undress, she testified.

She said she had asked the accused to leave and began guiding him toward the door.

"Then he swung around and he got hold of my uniform."

After Brown pulled the woman into the street, he made a hurried exit.

Brown explained "she tried to claw me. She was embarrassed and I was too, so I left rather hurriedly."

Magistrate William Ostler ruled the principle assault was on the woman's dignity and there was a "distinct lack of mutual admiration" between them.

He ordered Brown to stay away from the Melrose Cafe when Mrs. Upton is on duty.

Police Dog Finds Missing Girl

A nine-year-old Saanich girl was lost for three and a half hours Thursday night before being found by a police dog.

Found huddled in bushes and soaking wet was Helen Dobbyn, 3346 Doncaster.

Credit for the discovery went to Rex, Saanich police department's patrol dog.

He was called on the job at 9 p.m. after Helen's parents had been searching in the rain for two hours.

The girl had failed to return home from visiting friends.

"Rex picked up the scent almost immediately and took off," said Saanich police constable James White.

A few minutes later he was standing beside the crying tot licking her hand.

The youngster was found on Cedar Hill golf course about five blocks from her home.

SAANICH TO CHOOSE A QUEEN

The Saanich Diamond Jubilee queen and two princesses will be chosen Wednesday, Feb. 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the municipal hall.

The girls will be picked from selected students from seven high schools in Saanich. Candidates will be chosen by principals, teaching staffs and student councils at Royal Oak, Claremont, Mount View, Mount Douglas, Colquitz, Gordon Head and Lansdowne.

The contestants will be chosen for academic ability, personality, neatness and ability to meet the public.

Judges will be the social editors of the Victoria Daily Times and The Daily Colonist along with the publisher of the weekly Dogwood News. Contest won't be open to the public.

Saanich marks its 60th anniversary of incorporation starting March 1.

Placement Service Planned

The provincial government is planning to institute a placement service for job-training candidates, Labor Minister Peterson said in the Legislature Thursday.

"We don't want to usurp the duties of the National Employment Service," he said. "Our proposal is to supplement it.

"It is recognized that there are many persons who are seeking better employment opportunities, but are unable to qualify because they require additional training.

"In order to assist these persons a register will be maintained of all who are desirous of receiving further training and every effort will be made to place them in appropriate courses of instruction."

Mr. Peterson said: "This is something that must be done on a national scale. We should be able to find pools of labor available in every province.

"Basic to our plan is an extensive research program to develop short and long-term forecasts of our changing manpower requirements," he said.

Placed Ahead Of Canadians'

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West) criticized the government in the Commons today for allowing a unit of the West German army to train in Canada.

He said in a debate on external affairs estimates that the government placed the requirements of "the German military machine" ahead of the aroused feelings of many Canadians.

The winter training by German troops at Camp Shilo, Man. had been protested by veterans' organizations, ethnic groups that had been persecuted by Nazi Germany, survivors of German concentration camps, parents who had lost sons in the Second World War and many others.

Put Cards on Table, Victoria Tells Government

Victoria's finance committee doesn't want to discuss the new school district budget until the provincial government puts all its cards on the table.

Thursday finance committee chairman Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow said he thought it unreasonable for the government to set a deadline for the passing of the budget when they withheld information on government grants to offset salary costs.

"I don't see how we can approve a budget when we don't know how much money we have," Ald. Edgelow said. "I understand the government still bases its wage grants on 1961 salary figures and there have been many increases since then. How can we sit down and discuss a budget when the biggest item is missing?"

He urged that the city take a stand on the matter after consultation with the city solicitor. "It is time to stand up and be counted," he said.

Council will meet other municipal representatives and the school board but it will also ask the government to release its grant before the budget is completed.

A request to operate a "Pink Panther" dance hall at 1037 View Street (home of the old Club Sirocco) was tabled by the finance committee Thursday.

Committee members want a few more details on the operation before giving the stamp of approval.

Members of the committee want executive members of the YM-YWCA to meet the Intermunicipal committee to decide what to do about annual municipal grants to the organization.

In the past Victoria has picked up the tax tab for the organization but this year, with taxes on the new building set at $30,000, it is felt that a new system must be worked out.

The YM-YWCA will be asked to prepare a breakdown of all people, young and old, using the facilities so that the Intermunicipal Committee can decide what to do.

* * *

The committee has approved the moving bill of the new city prosecutor J. W. Anderson.

Mr. Anderson's moving cost came to $1,144.

Two Oak trees on Terrace Avenue are preventing the Victoria fire department from using the street when their big hook and ladder equipment is required.

In a letter to council the fire department asked city council to approve the removal of two trees in the 1001 block and the trimming of branches off other trees.

The city's lands and fire wardens committee decided to ask the parks branch to look at the trees before signing the removal order.

* * *

The committee has rejected a petition from Mount View Secondary School to name the third Monday in Febuary as Flag Day and list it as a statutory holiday.

"We have enough holidays now," said city manager Dennis Young.

"And we already have a flag day, July 1," said Ald. Wilson. "If we name a day in February as flag day we shall just touch of the old controversy."

* * *

Victoria health and personnel committee will ask the Metropolitan Board of Health to stop dickering with the provincial government on a new agreement now being drawn.

Committee members said the board should deal directly with the municipalities who share the costs of maintaining the board and that it was exceeding its authority when it went directly to the government.

The Peace Action League has asked city council to approve the holding of a peace rally in Centennial Square on March 25.

In a letter signed by Bob Munro the league says the rally is expected to draw a crowd of 100 who would treat the square with care.

HONORS NEXT YEAR FOR MUSEUM MAN

Fannin's Name to Fore Again

The man who started the provincial museum and one of the founders of the Natural History Society of British Columbia will be honored in 1967.

Museum officials said today John Fannin, first curator of the government museum, will be commemorated when the new museum-archive buildings are completed in centennial year.

Fannin ranks high among outstanding British Columbians in the 19th century.

He was born in Kempville, Upper Canada (now Ontario), in 1837—the year of the rebellion—and grew up to be an authority on birds and animals.

He came west with the famous Overlanders, arriving in Kamloops in October, 1862. After trying his hand at mining in the Cariboo, he settled in New Westminster as a shoemaker for a few years.

He took an exploring trip up the Stikine River for the government between 1872 and 1875, later settling at Hastings on Burrard Inlet where he carried on taxidermy and the study of natural history.

In 1886 he was appointed curator of the government museum in process of being established in Victoria. His own collection of birds and animals became the nucleus of the museum, which was officially opened in 1887.

The museum then was located in a small room in the Administration Building of the old "Birdcages," formerly situated just behind the Legislative Buildings.

Later it was moved to its present quarters.

Fannin retired on Feb. 25, 1904, and died in June of that year. He was unmarried.

SOLUTION MONDAY

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Margaret Dudley Alford, age 11, of Charlottesville, Va., for her question:

How does Spanish moss hang from trees?

First, we learn that Spanish moss is not true to its name. It is not Spanish nor is it moss. It is a native plant of the West Indies and of tropical and semi-tropical America. It is a relative of the ground-hugging pineapple family and no kin to any of the true mosses.

After we have admired its green-grey tresses hanging from the boughs, we wonder how and why it fixes itself high in the tree tops. Perhaps it is a parasite that cannot make its own living and must feed upon nourishment from another plant. No, the Spanish moss is not a helpless parasite plant like the mistletoe. It takes no food from the tree on which it perches.

The strange, feather plant is classed as an epiphyte. It merely borrows a tree to get a place high in the air and the sunshine. Its seed begins by growing clamps that fix themselves securely into the rough bark of a trunk or branch. It does not, like the parasitic mistletoe, dig down roots to suck up sap from the tree, for the Spanish moss has no true roots.

Moss Not Harmful to Trees

When the strong little clamps are secure, the seed grows a long hairy stem that soon branches with fragile leaves. The plant grows longer, branches and re-branches and this feathery foliage is all that there is to it. It is dashed by rains and tossed by winds, but its basic clamps keep it fixed firmly to its lofty tree-house.

In order to make a living, a plant must be able to create sugar from air, water and sunlight. And to do this magic job, it must contain green chlorophyll. Spanish moss has chlorophyll in every stem and in every feathery leaf. High on its perch, it also has plenty of air and sunlight. All it needs is water. But unlike most plants, it has no roots to take water from the soil. However, the problem is solved by scaly little hairs all over its fine leaves and trailing stems. They trap moisture from the rain and the misty air like millions of miniature reservoirs. The airy epiphyte uses this moisture to make its own plant food.

Spanish moss does not harm a tree by stealing its juices, but sometimes it becomes so thick that its trailing festoons shut off air and sunlight. This may prevent a tree from making enough plant food for itself. The growth of some of its branches may be gnarled and stunted. The airy festoons do not kill the tree, but they do nothing to help it.

GUIDES TO HOLD SERVICE

A red-letter day for Victoria Girl Guides comes this month, when they hold a special service and flag dedication ceremony at Christ Church Cathedral.

To be held Feb. 27 at 2:30 p.m. the church parade and ceremony will wind up a week of Guide activities in the city, marking the worldwide Scout-Guide Thinking Week, Feb 20 to 27.

The international aspects of Guiding will be stressed during this time.

Youngsters from Guide companies throughout the area, who number 1,794, will take part in the parade and the interdenominational church service which follows.

Highlight will be the "laying up" of the flag, used for several years at local Guide headquarters, in the children's corner of the Cathedral.

A World Guide flag, dedicated in the cathedral six years ago, already rests in the Corner.

The church service and "laying up" ceremony will be followed by a tea in the Memorial Hall, 912 Vancouver.

YOUR HEALTH

Great Care Needed In Handling Food

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Many people fear food poisoning, and wonder how it comes about. There are some foods which are so poorly cooked or poorly refrigerated, or poorly handled—as to end up on a restaurant table containing disease-producing bacteria or some poisons produced by bacteria.

Among the most dangerous foods is hamburger—when it is not made from fresh meat which was kept very cold until it was ground, and after it was ground. It is dangerous when in summer it is made from scraps of meat that during the day were thrown into a basket. If not well refrigerated, such meat can harbor bad germs, which can cause a dysentery.

* * *

Another type of food which many a time has caused a number of people to be ill is the filling of custard pies and French pastries. When such a filling is made, it should immediately be put into a very cold refrigerator, in which it can be cooled quickly before bad germs can start growing in it. Occasionally, severe epidemics of food poisoning result when a woman who is carrying in her bowel and on her hands dangerous typhoid-like bacteria, one evening cooks a big dishpan full of macaroni or pudding which is to be used next day for a big church picnic.

If accidentally she gets some of her bad germs into the food, and then does not cool it quickly, these germs will reproduce so rapidly that by the next noon, everyone who eats the food will come down with an acute cholera-like disease which can cause much prostration. Fortunately, in most cases the people soon recover.

Sixty years ago when I was an intern, almost all patients operated on were kept in bed for at least two weeks. Today, many surgeons like to get the patients up and about in a few days. When, five years ago, I had a big abdominal operation, I was walking around the hospital on the third day.

Now I read an article by Dr. C. J. Bellis of Long Beach, California, who says that he has studied 5,903 patients who had their inguinal hernia (rupture) repaired under local anesthesia. They did not miss a meal, and they went back to work that afternoon! Practically all of the patients recovered well in spite of their getting out of bed so early.

* * *

I remember my surprise when one afternoon I dropped in at a hospital to see a friend of mine who that morning had his prostate gland "reamed out" through a tube that was passed down his urethra (the tube that carries urine from the bladder to the outside). I expected to find my friend groaning in bed, but I found him up and walking around his room dictating letters to his secretary, discussing business with his partner, and telephoning his broker in New York to buy certain stocks. He was none the worse for his early getting up.

BOSTON BAR (CP) — The Trans-Canada Highway through the Fraser Canyon was blocked Thursday night by a snowslide which highways department officials said would take about eight hours to clear.

A department spokesman said the slide covered the highway to a depth of 40 feet and was about 400 feet long.

INTERPRETING THE SCORE

Many and Subtle Are Differences In Symphony Orchestra Conductors

By AUDREY JOHNSON

What elements make one conductor's interpretation of a score differ from another's? And how far can the difference go and still provide a valid reading of the score?

The question was set down along with the coffee cups between two conductors at Victoria School of Music this week.

●

"Pretty much the same things that make each man different in looks, character, personality," said Victoria symphony conductor Otto-Werner Mueller. "National background, ethnic influences, the folk art of his environment.

His Hungarian-born guest, Frederic Balazs, took up the second part of the question.

"There are basic rules," he said. "Generalizations that should hold true for any performance."

His dark, introspective eyes sought the desk and he touched it.

"We think of this desk as solid—static. But then the physicist will tell you that is not so; that there are suble changes constantly taking place in its molecular structure."

Mr. Balazs is resident conductor of the Tucson (Arizona) Symphony Orchestra, is in Victoria to conduct the symphony concerts this weekend at Sidney (tonight) and the Royal Theatre Sunday and Monday.

He turned to another metaphor. "We say the grass is green and as a generalization that will do well enough. But the scientist tells us that it is green in effect because of clorophyl—and sunlight— and our eye structure.

"It is not precisely the same green for everyone—for the bee perhaps, not at all."

Mr. Mueller nodded in agreement. "Art is a thing of life and so subject to constant change. The composers themselves change in their ideas and feelings.

●

"Take the Shostakovitch First Symphony—which we play in March—it was written when the composer was very young. Many of his feelings about it have changed; his score markings would differ considerably today."

(On this point Mr. Mueller has first-hand knowledge for Shostakovitch's son was in his student conductor's class when he taught at the Moscow Conservatory.)

Difference in conductors? They are many and frequently quite subtle; individual idiosyncracies in communicating with the orchestra and obtaining the desired effect, points out the visitor; variations in dynamic scale and choice of tempi, observes the resident conductor.

And all without mutilating the composer's intention?

Certainly, they agree.

Sometimes there are striking similarities, though. When comparing notes for the first rehearsal taken by Mr. Barlazs, this week the two conductors discovered that their markings for crescendoes in the Beethoven Seventh were exactly similar.

●

They are unanimous in feeling that many musicians make crescendoes, especially in Beethoven, too sudden.

"When Beethoven marked a passage for crescendo," Mr. Mueller observed, "he intended it to be a long, gradual development of tonal dynamics."

"As a conductor," he continued, "one is constantly striving to understand and recreate the composer's spirit.

"Every re-creative artist—and that is essentially what we are—must understand and respect the composer's aesthetic design but it is inevitable that he puts something of himself into the ultimate product as well."

Mr. Balazs, with poetic consistency, returned to his nature metaphor: "A pine tree seed is a pine tree seed, but the tree that grows from it is capable of infinite variation . . ."

"Of course, and without altering its pre-ordinated character," Mr. Mueller chimed in.

The Hungarian-American conductor commented that a lot is said about "inspiration" but that "it is a very broad term."

●

"For the conductor it means that his imagination is stimulated to the point where he discovers a closer affinity with the composer," mused Otto Mueller. "His understanding deepens and he finds many more ways to communicate what the composer wants to say."

All sorts of music — but no particular composer — inspires Balazs, who is himself a composer of considerable accomplishment. His numerous works include Pageant Music, a suite; An American Symphony After Walt Whitman; a ballet, Pueblo Bonito, and his music for the United Nations, A Statement of Faith, which he will conduct here.

He expresses his catholicity of taste in music by turning once more to a favorite theme: "Who is to say a tiger is more beautiful than a worm . . . A tiny pond can be as lovely as the Pacific Ocean."

What are the principal problems a guest conductor has to cope with?

"Evaluating the orchestra's capabilities within the first hour or so of rehearsal," Mr. Mueller said promptly.

"Yes, and establishing communication with the players as quickly as possible," his guest contributed.

It was at this point that the Victoria Symphony conductor had to leave for another meeting. After he had gone Mr. Balazs had something to say about his first contact with our orchestra.

Without prompting, he commented: "In all sincerity I can tell you that I found this to be an exceptionally well trained ensemble. I was most impressed with their quickness to adjust and their responsiveness."

Frederic Balazs is a concert violinist who, in addition to conducting the Tucson Orchestra, frequently undertakes recital tours, often with his pianist wife, Ann.

His guest conducting assignments have included the New York Philharmonic at Lewisohn Stadium, and the Los Angeles and Dallas Symphonies.

His Tucson Orchestra is a large one — approximately 90 players — and like our own, they work at daytime jobs of various kinds.

Population of Tucson is about twice that of Victoria — over 300,000.

The orchestra plays in a 2,600-seat auditorium which Mr. Balazs indicates is seldom filled to capacity except when a guest artist of stature appears with the orchestra.

●

By comparison, it appears Victoria does very well, with an average of 2,000 persons out of 150,000 population attending each pair of concerts.

Told of thus, Mr. Balazs commented: "It looks very much to me as though your citizens deeply appreciate your symphony and that being the case I would say 'Let's go!' "

Agents Deny Blackmail Charge

People can't be blackmailed into taking out unwanted insurance, McLeod C. Stewart, president of Victoria branch of the Insurance Association of B.C. said Wednesday.

The newly elected president was replying to an attack on insurance companies by NDP leader Robert Strachan in the Legislature Monday.

Mr. Strachan quoted a case of a youth who had been refused automobile insurance unless he took out a life insurance policy.

Said Mr. Stewart: "I've spoken to several agents today and can't find any evidence of this.

"People can't be blackmailed when there are so many companies to choose from.

"If there was only government insurance you might be intimidated."

Mr. Strachan is a long-time advocate of government car insurance similar to the scheme run by the Saskatchewan government.

Said Mr. Stewart: "It is advisable for a family to take out all its insurance with one company. That way they can get extra benefits.

"But no agent would try and blackmail a person into it."

'Cough Up' Campaign Under Way

COF spells "cough" as in "cough up" and that is exactly what COF wants people to do with their money.

COF are the initials of the Committee of Fifty-Six that is trying to raise $7,000 to pay the penalties of the 700 University of Victoria students who were late this year in paying fees.

The students deliberately withheld $56, the amount of last year's fee increase, to protest rising costs of higher education Each was fined $10.

The Students' Council at Uvic promised to pay the penalties but were stopped by a legal technicality. Now a separate committee has been established to try to keep the promise.

AT UBC

Paul Williamson, president of Students' Council and member of COF, returned Thursday to the campus after talking to students at University of British Columbia and Simon Fraser University.

He said SFU Students' Council has established a committee to help raise money for COF and a similar move is likely at UBC.

Mr. Williamson said COF has raised $50 so far, including a $10 donation from a faculty members at Uvic.

Mr. Williamson said that if the $7,000 target is not fully realized, the money will be distributed evenly to all students who incurred the penalty.

Said he, "I'm optimistic about raising the money with a lot of work."

Four Island Youngsters Going To Summer Village In Europe

Four Vancouver Island 11-year-olds will have an experience in international living next summer.

And the youngsters will go far afield for it.

The four, two boys and two girls not yet chosen from Island schoolchildren, will take part in a Children's International Summer Village.

Although not yet certain, it is expected they will attend one of the villages in Europe.

Children from eight countries attended a similar village, held at Strathcona Lodge, Shawnigan Lake, last summer.

With a program of handicrafts, sports and other activities they set up an atmosphere of warmth and friendliness with an international flavor.

Language barriers acted as a challenge rather than a discouragement.

Youngsters for the Villages are chosen through their schools, and, to be eligible this year, must have their 11th birthday between Aug. 1, 1965, and July 31, 1966.

Friendliness, sincerity, scholastic ability, group participation at school, and other abilities are used as standards in choosing the children.

Because of their age, the children make friends quicker at the Villages, it is thought, and are more willing to ignore cultural and racial differences in their companions.

Each delegation of four youngsters is accompanied by an adult counsellor.

EXPENSES COVERED

Travel expenses of the children and their chaperone are covered by contributions and funds from the local chapter of the Children's International Summer Village.

Schools on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands, including private schools and Indian schools, have already recieved information and application forms for youngsters.

Further information may be obtained through the schools or from Children's International Summer Village, Box 882, Victoria. Closing date for applications is March 4.

AT ESQUIMALT HOME-COMING DANCE

Renew Those Old Friendships

Nearly 40 years of a school's history may be brought back at an event at Esquimalt Sr. Secondary next month.

Students from as far back as 1927, when the school was located on the old Island Weavers premises on Esquimalt Rd., are expected to attend a homecoming dance March 3.

The school, which began life as a one-room annex to Lampson St. Elementary, now houses over 600 students in a building constructed six years ago on Colville Road.

Former students, teachers, parents and others associated with Esquimalt Secondary school through the years are invited to renew old friendships.

Proceeds from the dance, organised by students and staff of the school, go to help graduates who are continuing their education.

The dance will be held in the school auditorium from 8 to 12 p.m., and tickets are available from students or at the door.

Everything from tongue depressors to drugs and complex medical apparatus is needed, the Jaycees say. The pressing need was revealed at the recent Jaycee International Conference in Sydney, Australia. The project has now been undertaken by clubs throughout the world.

"We have commitments from local physicians and we hope all 300 doctors in the area will be able to make some contribution," Jaycees say. Equipment from non-medical concerns is also welcome. Donors should contact the Jaycee office for pick-ups, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 383-4521.

AT ST. ANN'S

New Lab To Be Ready In August

St. Ann's Academy — one of Victoria's oldest schools — will have a spacious new science laboratory this year.

The laboratory, measuring 50 by 30 feet, will be part of a $140,470 annex on Heywood Avenue, which is scheduled for completion by next August.

The two-storey concrete building — to be known as St. Ann's Centennial Annex — will also contain three classrooms, several offices and a staff room for teachers.

Excavations are now in progress and construction will begin early next month. The new building will ease overcrowding at the academy, which now has more than 700 students.

THREE BIDS

Three Victoria firms bid for the contract, which was awarded recently to W. Campbell Ltd., 4093 Glanford Avenue. The architect is John Di Castri.

Mr. Di Castri has also called for tenders for the construction of a house of studies for 50 novitiates of the Order of St. Ann, to be built at the corner of Queenswood and Arbutus, Gordon Head.

Tenders will be opened on Feb. 23.

The order of St. Ann was established here in 1858 when four sisters, dedicated to nursing and teaching, came out to Victoria from Vaudreuil, Quebec.

The sisters began their work in a small log cabin. By 1871 they had built the solid, four-storey structure which is still the central portion of St. Ann's Academy.

In 1958 a three-storey annex was erected on the east side of the primary school on Heywood Avenue.

Indian Artistry Subject of Talk

The British Columbia Indian as an artist and his way of life will be the subject of a lecture next Tuesday by J. Corner, noted scholar on the subject.

Mr. Corner who is on the provincial government staff at Vernon, B.C., has made studies in depth of the Western Indian.

His illustrated lecture, sponsored by the Victoria Natural History Society, will be presented at 8 p.m. in the Douglas Building Cafeteria.

In his presentation, Mr. Corner will show original pictographs (paintings) and petrographs (carvings) executed by Indian artists and tracing the Indians' history.

Verdict on Moon Pictures:

'THEY'RE SENSATIONAL!'

JODRELL BANK, England (AP — The radiotelescopic observatory here announced today it is receiving sensational pictures of the moon from the Soviet Luna IX satellite. They show individual rocks on the moon's surface, a spokesman said.

Signals from the moon rocket, which made history's first soft landing on the moon Thursday, were fed into a facsimile machine. After technicians worked out the focus, they got a picture showing rocks, a flat surface and the shadow of the spaceship itself.

Sir Bernard Lovell, director of the observatory and a veteran of tracking space vehicles, called them "the most sensational pictures we have ever had at Jodrell Bank."

Landing Feat Gives Russia Lead to Moon

From AP-Reuters

MOSCOW (CP)—Luna IX, the Soviet mechanical moon pioneer, has transmitted to earth pictures of the lunar landscape, Tass reported today.

An announcement distributed by the official Soviet news agency gave no indication when the pictures would be made public. It would be the first ever transmitted directly from the moon's surface to earth, after earlier Soviet and American pictures sent from spacecraft above the moon.

Luna IX "has begun scanning the lunar landscape and transmitting it to the earth's surface," the announcement said.

The space vehicle landed Thursday in an area of the moon that will be in direct sunlight for almost two weeks. This would permit a number of pictures to be sent, if Luna IX continues working properly and sunlight can power its batteries.

The announcement, made 20 hours after Luna IX's landing, said four radio communications sessions had been held with it today, totalling three hours 20 minutes.

RECEIVE DATA

"Telemetric information was received during these radio links from the station," it added. "It confirmed the normal functioning of the flight system. Transmission of the lunar landscape was carried out on command from earth."

Before this announcement, the Russians had been characteristically silent about information received from the mechanical pioneer sitting on the plain named Ocean of Storms, though the British radio observatory at Jodrell Bank said Luna IX had transmitted radio information and pictures.

The official Thursday announcement said the landing was in the area of the Ocean of Storms to the west of he craters Reiner and Maria. Yuri Pakovsky, a scienist, described the site for Tass.

"This area is an easily observable plain," he said, "although in the zone of landing there are hills and craters. The large light spot of Reiner Gamma lies to the south. Scientists still do not know what it is."

Pakovsky said the land site can be seen from earth with ordinary field glasses.

But triumphant space program chiefs cautiously held back detailed information until experts thoroughly examine pictures and technical data said to be streaming back to earth.

Informed sources said ground control planned several radio links a day with the Luna IX unmanned station which Thursday night gave the Soviet Union a dramatic space victory in landing — apparently undamaged—on the moon's dust-covered surface after a 3½ day flight from earth.

The heavy instrument filled capsule glided gently into the surface of earth's nearest neighbor at 9:45 p.m. (10:45 a.m. PST), after scientists slowed Luna IX's speed from about one mile a second to almost zero by firing retro-rockets.

Russia's feat was likened to its success as the first nation to put a man into orbit, and the first to send a human being to walk in outer space.

But Russians were cautious in talking about how soon it may be before they can cap their victory by sending a cosmonaut to touch down on the moon.

Experts believe the split-second timing achieve in landing Luna IX after a flight of more than 240,000 miles shows Russia

How Moon Looks From 10 Feet Away

One of the first pictures of the moon's surface taken by the Soviet Union's Luna 9 was released today by a British observatory.

The Luna 9 equipped with cameras and other equipment made a successful soft landing Thursday.

The craft's camera appeared to be shooting pictures from about six to 10 feet above the moon's surface, according to Sir Bernard Lovell, director of Jodrell Bank observatory where the pictures were being received.

Craters, rocks and pebbles could be distinguished and one crater was about 12 inches across, he said.

The pictures were being picked up in the United Kingdom by a big-dish radio telescope 250 inches across, fed into special receiving equipment and printed.

Lovell said Luna 9 began transmitting television pictures from the moon a few minutes after touching down Thursday which, he said, "would indicate the Luna had landed on a hard surface without encountering any great depths of dust."

The picture above was transmitted from Manchester, England, through the facilities of the Manchester Guardian simultaneously into the Associated Press wirephoto service in London and New York. The pictures were released by the observatory.

Lovell said:

"One thing is certain, these are photographs of the lunar surface in considerable detail. When we get a group of them we will be able to interpret them in more detail. We don't know yet the scale of the rocks shown in one of the photographs. There is a dark mark on one of them which is a shadow of the spaceship itself."

At first there had been problems in working out the focal length of the satellite's TV camera and the facsimile pictures showed a series of dark lines about one-quarter of an inch in width.

Then another shot showed light lines. But finally the focus was worked out and the pictures were translated from radio signals into visual images which technicians described as exceedingly clear.

UN Delegates Meet With No Success In Viet Nam Talks

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters)—Delegates to the United Nations Security Council resume their private efforts today to deal with the Viet Nam war without any immediate prospect of agreement.

(See Page 3, Viet Nam War Today.)

Talks were agreed on Wednesday when the Viet Nam crisis was placed on the council agenda at the request of the United States and over strong Russian objections.

Debate was suspended shortly after a close vote on the agenda because delegates wanted to avoid an acrimonious public debate which could only make the situation worse.

There was considerable speculation that Sori Coulibaly, chief delegate of Mali, might have a key role to play in the private negotiations.

Mali, one of the non-permanent Council members, has diplomatic relations with Peking. Coulibaly, chairman of the "committee of 24" on colonialism, has a reputation as a militant African delegate.

He conferred Thursday with Halim Budo, chief delegate of Albania, Charles Yost, deputy chief U.S. delegate, and Roger Seydoux, chief delegate of France.

DECLINES ANY COMMENT

Coulibaly declined any comment except to say that any initiative for another meeting would have to come from the U.S., which made the original request.

Nikolai T. Fedorenko, the chief Soviet delegate, was expected to continue his stiff opposition to any Council debate on Viet Nam, which he said would be a "propaganda farce" aimed at giving Washington a blank cheque for further aggression in Viet Nam.

Many delegates indicated they thought the best forum for dealing with the Viet Nam war was at a Geneva conference.

Arthur J. Goldberg, chief U.S. delegate, has circulated a draft council resolution calling for talks between the appropriate interested governments — apparently excluding the Viet Cong.

Fedorenko said the Viet Cong were the "sole genuine representatives of the South Vietnamese people" and reaffirmed his support of Hanoi's four points, which include a demand for withdrawal of all American troops.

McNAMARA WON'T TALK

Four Killed In 3-Alarm Quebec Fire

MONTREAL (CP)—Four persons were killed and an estimated eight persons injured today in a three-alarm fire which struck a department store and second-floor apartments.

Patrolling policemen spotted the blaze at 7:30 a.m. on Ontario Street East near Papineau Ave. They heard the screams of trapped victims and called firemen and ambulances.

The building, which was up for sale, housed a small department store on the first floor.

'Time Come for Queen To Visit Every Year'

OTTAWA — A Conservative MP suggested Thursday that Queen Elizabeth should spend a few weeks in Canada every year.

Wallace Nesbitt, Oxford, said the government could build permanent quarters for her at Government House in Ottawa.

"I think it would be a splendid thing to be able to announce in our centenary year —1967—that Her Majesty would be Queen of Canada not just by representation but by her presence for a few weeks of each year," he stated.

Nesbitt said it is possible now for the Queen to get from London to Ottawa by air in a few hours.

If Canada is to continue as a constitutional monarchy, it has to be brought up to date, said Nesbitt.

The member said he thought royal tours are exhausting and an imposition on the Queen, and do not satisfy the requirements of a constitutional monarchy.

IN HAWAII

Johnson Sets Up War Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson announced today that he will fly to Hawaii late Saturday for three days of meetings with South Vietnamese leaders and the U.S. high command.

Johnson told a news conference in his office that South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky and the Vietnamese chief of state, Nguyen Van Thieu, had accepted his invitation to meet him in Honolulu Sunday.

Also coming from Saigon for the conference are Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in Southeast Asia, and the U.S. Ambassador to Saigon, Henry Cabot Lodge.

Johnson will be accompanied by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara, Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman and John W. Gardner, secretary of health, education and welfare.

NO SHIFT SEEN

The president said he anticipated no shift in this country's policies in Viet Nam, but that the meeting was arranged because he wanted for some time to meet Ky and Thieu. He said he also had wanted to see Westmoreland and Lodge in person.

Johnson and his party planned to leave Washington for Hawaii in air force jet transports late Saturday. The president expected the Honolulu talks to run through next Tuesday and thought he would be back in the White House by Wednesday morning.

Jetliner Plunges Into Tokyo Bay

TOKYO (UPI)—An All Nippon Airways Boeing 727 jet airliner with 133 persons aboard crashed into Tokyo Bay tonight only four minutes from a landing in perfect weather. All aboard were apparently dead in the worst single airplane disaster in history.

The plane carrying 126 passengers from a northern Japan snow festival and a crew of seven fell into the bay seven miles from Tokyo as the pilot was circling for a routine landing.

A search boat of the Maritime Safety Agency sighted several chairs and articles of clothing floating in the water at 11:40 p.m. (6:40 a.m. PST) and they were identified as coming from the missing plane.

Wing Found Floating in Water

Search ships operating with spotlights and an occasional flare from U.S. planes overhead converged on the scene southeast of Tokyo and found the wing of the plane floating in the water where a light mist hovered just above the surface.

At 11:50 p.m., the agency said its search boat spotted the floating body of a man and a book explaining how to use life-saving equipment aboard the plane.

Six hours after the crash 21 bodies had been recovered.

A spokesman for the airways denied at 1 a.m. that there was any report by the pilot of instrument trouble and said the only word was that he was shifting over from instrument to visual flight for the final approach.

An official of the transportation ministry aviation bureau said, "Judging from the fact the plane lost contact immediately after it last made contact with the airport it is strongly suspected something—maybe some kind of trouble—happened to some mechanism in the plane."

The airways said the plane was almost new. It had been in service only since late last year and had a total of 1,600 flying hours. One of its three jet engines was replaced early this year and an airways spokesman said there was no foundation to reports of any faulty mechanism.

He said it was perfectly normal for a pilot to shift from instruments to visual landing under conditions of clear weather and long visibility such as existed.

The airline later led the weeping relatives from the terminal building and took them to the airport hotel to await recovery of the bodies. After serving them tea the company said it would take them to the morgue as soon as it could hire buses.

Fourth Fatal Crash of 727

It was the fourth fatal crash of the Boeing 727 three-jet airliner within a year and already Japanese officials were reported raising questions about the safety of the sleek craft in widespread use of airlines in the U.S.

Fishermen had reported seeing a plane trailing dense clouds of smoke and then a ball of fire as the plane apparently hit the waters of the bay. But the pilot had given no indication of possible trouble.

Capt. Masaki Takahashi, 39, trained as a pilot during the Second World War and cited only recently for his safety record, radioed the Haneda international airport control tower four minutes before his scheduled landing he was on the final, circling approach. Then disaster.

There were scenes of grief and despair at the Haneda airport serving the Tokyo - Yokohama area and at Chitose in the northernmost Island of Hokkaido where millions of Japanese were attending an annual snow festival to see the spectacular snow and ice carvings. The plane left Chitose earlier.

The passengers were said to be mostly Japanese from three Tokyo firms which sent its employees to Chitose on an outing.

About 50 relatives and friends were waiting at the airport when word of the missing plane was flashed on 9 p.m. television news broadcasts. Hundreds of Japanese poured into the terminal building.

Hysterical Scene at Airport

They jammed against the airlines' counter and simply stood. Most were stony-faced with the stoicism of the Orient. A few wept openly.

Among them were two small children, Emiko Yokoshima and her brother Yutaka whose parents had gone to Hokkaido. They wept with grief as a reporter tried to interview them before a television camera.

Airlines officials announced stonily every half hour there was no trace of the plane. There were shouts "were there enough life boats?" and "did the plane carry rescue rafts at all?" The questions were screamed in hysterical voices.

One man, clad in padded clothes and a hat with heavy earflaps, let the tears stream down his seamed and burdened face as he waited for word that did not come.

Shortly after midnight Saturday the Japanese government announced it had asked the U.S. embassy for assistance. It was assumed help was wanted from the military in rescue operations.

. . . LANDING

already has the technical capacity to land a human being.

But the hazards he may face on the mysterious moon surface are still unknown. Delicate instruments aboard the space station will help scientists determine how a cosmonaut can survive, testing such factors as temperatures and pressures.

There is a widespread optimism in Moscow that Russia will solve the problem before 1970. The next few years may see a spectacular race between the Soviet Union and the United States to get there first.

Although U.S. probes have sent back detailed pictures of the moon's surface just before crashing, the U.S. has not attempted a soft landing. Its first try is scheduled for May.

The Soviet success came on its fifth attempt.

Soviet Cosmonaut Andrian Nikolayev, said in a Pravda article the landing "could be said to be already a step on the lunar surface . . . wait for us, moon."

In another Pravda article, Prof. N. Barabashov of the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences said investigations on the moon would have a great effect on "earth - bound" science and would "enrich mankind with new knowledge about the basic laws of nature."

The Soviet news agency Tass said: "Radio contact with the station on the surface of the moon is reliable. Transmissions are on 183.538 megacycles. The instruments on board the station are functioning normally."

Scientists at the Jodrell Bank Radio Observatory in England said Luna IX transmitted facsimile pictures from its landing at 9:45 p.m. until 10:50 p.m., went off the air, and resumed signals shortly after midnight (6 p.m. PST).

Congratulations from heads of states around the world have poured into Moscow.

"Your accomplishment is one that can benefit all mankind and all mankind applauds it," said President Johnson in a message to President Nikolai Podgorny.

U.S. space officials at Cape Kennedy, Fla., conceded the Soviet success gave the Russians a lead in this phase of the race to put a man on the moon.

SCORE OTHER 'FIRSTS'

The Soviets were the first to crash-land a rocket on the moon in September, 1959. The following month they sent a space station around the moon that sent back photographs of its far side, never before seen by man.

The United States also crash-landed a picture-taking satellite on the moon, but not until July 31, 1964. This was Ranger 7 which sent back the most complete series of pictures taken of the moon.

An earlier U.S. attempt, Ranger 6, hit the moon Feb. 2, 1964, but its cameras did not work.

At Jodrell Bank, Lovell said the spacecraft landed in a region that will be in full sunlight for 14 days, permitting solar power to replenish Luna IX's batteries.

Cosmonaut Gherman Titov, the Soviet Union's second man in space, told Tass today he believes dogs or other animals will precede man to the moon, just as dogs preceded men in orbiting the earth in Soviet space shots.

He said the chief problem in preparing for manned flight to the moon is the return of the men to the earth.

Russian Moon Landing Hailed Around the World

LONDON CP) — Political leaders and scientists around the world joined today in congratulating the Soviet Union on its successful moon landing.

Newspapers and radio and television stations in most countries gave the soft landing of Luna IX top attention. President Johnson was one of the first to hail the Soviet feat.

"You and the people of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics are to be congratulated for the great success of Luna IX," he said in a message to Soviet President Nikolai Podgorney.

"Your accomplishment is one that can benefit all mankind and all mankind applauds it. Your scientists have made a major contribution to man's knowledge of the moon and space."

President de Gaulle of France said in a telegram to Soviet leaders: "Soviet science has, in the interest of all humanity, added a new chapter to the history of great discoveries."

PRAISE FROM INDIA

Indian President Sarvapallo Radhakrishnan hailed "yet another triumph for Soviet scientists." Indian Premier Mrs. Indira Gandhi said the landing "comes like a sudden reassurance of man's continuous quest to transform the unattainable into the attainable."

"A great feat of science and technology," said Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake of New Zealand.

Scientists could not agree whether the landing put the Soviet Union ahead of the United States in the race to put a man on the moon or only in one phase of it.

The race to put a man on the moon is "still fairly even now," said Sir Bernard Lovell, director of the Jodrell Bank Radio Observatory in England.

"The Soviet Union has gone ahead in the techniques of soft landing," he said. "The Americans already achieved the other essential feature of rendezvous in space. Both countries now have one each to their credit."

LUNA TICKS OFF MOON SECRETS

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — With the successful soft landing of Luna IX, the Russians apparently have proved that man can safely explore the moon. They also put added pressure on the troubled United States Surveyor program, which hopes to make a similar landing in May.

Until Luna IX settled gently onto the dry, relatively flat Ocean of Storms Thursday, scientists were divided on whether the moon's surface could support a landing.

Some felt the surface might be a thick layer of dust or a fragile honeycomb structure that would swallow a heavy spacecraft.

But Luna IX touched down, established firm radio contact with Russian ground stations, and started sending photographs and information which will help in developing a manned lunar landing vehicle.

Other goals must be achieved before men venture to the moon. A key one is the joining of two vehicles in space, which the U.S. hopes to do with the Gemini 8 flight in March.

It's been nearly a year since the last Russian cosmonaut went aloft. In that period 10 American astronauts have rocketed into space.

But, as one rocket expert noted about Russian secrecy: "They could have a 20-man spacecraft on the pad right now and we wouldn't know about it until after it was launched."

NEAR-EPIDEMIC OUTBREAK OF RABIES IN ONTARIO

TORONTO (UPI)—An outbreak of rabies in southern Ontario has spread to near-epidemic proportions, the Ontario Lands and Forests Department warned today.

The department issued warnings to parents, pet owners and farmers.

During November last year, the department said 110 cases of rabies were reported in southern Ontario—the largest number from a large area north of Lake Huron.

INDIAN PEOPLE WILL BE PAID . . . . . . NATIVE MLA TELLS LEGISLATURE

'I Congratulate You on 100th Birthday, But . . .'

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Choking with emotion, British Columbia's only Indian MLA Thursday predicted that the white man will never get away with his land grab—that the account will be paid in full some day.

"I'm going to predict in this Centennial year that some day we're going to be paid for the land in this province," said Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin).

"I tell you—whether you believe it now or not — that one day a government will sit on that side of the fence and it's going to damn well pay for the province of British Columbia," he said waving at the government benches.

FRANK CALDER
. . . they listened

INTENSE DELIVERY

Mr. Calder, visibly struggling with himself to keep his control, punched the air with his finger and slapped his desk to emphasize his points many times. He repeated himself over and over to underline his message.

An intent silence settled on both sides of the house during his remarks about the land question.

Mr. Calder said he wanted to congratulate the province on the current centennial celebrating the union of the colonies of Vancouver Island and B.C. mainland.

"As a member of the people who witnessed — I hate to say the word — the advent of the white man, I congratulate you on this 100th birthday of the province," he began.

"In that 100 years my people have had a rough go of it, but there have been some of our goals achieved and I'm sure that in the next 100 years, through good, constructive negotiations there will be more.

NOT LONG TIME

"Being here 100 years may seem like a long time for some people but for my people, who were here first, it is not a long time."

Applause from all sides, the only interruption to his remarks, greeted his statement:

"Some of our achievements in the past 100 years are the vote and the fact that I am standing here and I predict that in the next 100 there will be more of my people sitting in this house."

Mr. Calder said he conscientiously tried to speak for all his constituents but occasionally, because he was Indian, he had to give voice to Indian causes.

"We are gaining many legislative goals — but we have one thing in this province which is foremost in the minds of the Indians and that is known as the British Columbia land question."

Mr. Calder noted that the question was part of the Supreme Court case involved in the recent series of actions dealing with the question of Indian hunting and fishing rights outside of game regulations.

He said he did not want to discuss the case or the issue except to remind everyone again that British Columbia is the only province in which there has not been a treaty signed by the Indians.

NO SETTLEMENT

"There has been no settlement as far as the land is concerned — no treaty and no payment.

"In this Centennial year, if the premier doesn't see fit to recognize the rights of the Indians to a settlement, then I'm telling you that one day — even after all of us here are gone — there is going to be a settlement.

"It is going to be settled — it is going to be settled. You may not believe it now, but I tell you it is going to be settled."

First waving at the Socred benches, then at the NDP benches, he continued with emotion:

"If not by this government . . . if not by that government . . . I still say to you — it is going to be settled some day!

"This is the only place in the world where the people have not been paid for their land — we've never been paid for it!

"But one day we are going to be paid for this province."

Protect Consumer, Curb Sharp Dealers NDPer Urges House

The legislature was urged Thursday to get tough with shoddy goods and sharp dealers by enacting consumer protection laws.

Tony Gargrave (NDP—Mackenzie) suggested a publicly-supported consumers' council, controls on pedlars, an interest rate disclosure act, revision of conditional sales legislation, subsidized consumer report organizations and Better Business Bureau, and safety certification of used cars.

Stressing the need for quality in daily life, Mr. Gargrave said it is important that the consumer be protected "and informed to enable him to avoid faudulent practices and make wise selections in the market place so that businessmen and consumers may benefit.

"Shoddy goods and sharp dealers should be driven from the market place so that men can improve quality of their goods and services, the person of small means stretch his income and the busy man of affluence obtain good quality," he said.

Common law's rule, "let the buyer beware," is not broad enough to cover business dealings in one of the world's most affluent societies, Mr. Gargrave said.

Quality, not quantity, should be the aim of the market place.

He said a small minority of high-pressure door-to-door salesmen "should be swept aside."

A short contract cooling-off period to allow for cancellation of contracts should be allowed.

Off-premises salesmen should be licensed centrally; bonds should be required, and false advertising should mean offence in law.

A prospective buyer should be helped to decide whether to pay cash, obtain credit or wait and not purchase, which could be done through an interest rate disclosure act, he said.

The cash price of goods, total lump sum cost of carrying charges and rate of simple interest per year should be outlined, the speaker said.

Conditional sales legislation should be standardized, as with insurance policies, he argued.

When a contract is terminated early, the buyer should get an interest rebate, and when a certain percentage has been paid off, the chattel should not be repossessed. He cited several British practices which he found commendable.

Mr. Gargrave said existing legislation needs to be more aggressively applied through police to deal with faudulent pedlars and confidence men.

There should be insistence on accurate, informative package labelling, so that a housewife need not compare grams with ounces to decide whether the "giant economy size" really costs less, he said.

BEER PARLORS

'Pour It Down Your Throat Plan'

Any British Columbian disgusted with American commercialism should take a hard look at his own beer parlors, Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) told the legislature Thursday.

He said the sight should convert everyone to his view that legislation should be enacted to eliminate beer parlors and allow grocery stores to sell beer.

"I watch these people who sling beer," he said. "They have a trayful ready right there so you don't even get a chance to ask for a glass—it's a sort of 'pour it down your throat' plan.

COMMERCIALISM

"I've heard about commercialism in the United States but at least they don't pour it down your throat. When you go into a bar there, they wait for you to order before they bring anything."

He said people want the liquor act amended — particularly in outlying areas where liquor stores are rare—"not so we can drink more but so that we can be moderate drinkers, buy a few cans at the grocery store and take them home to drink."

Stop Moonlighting

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—The man who wrote the lyrics for the Bossa Nova hit, The Girl from Ipanema, has been told by his superiors at the foreign ministry to quit moonlighting. Vinicius de Morais, 53, a consul who also is a poet and journalist, was ordered to stop making public appearances under a rule that prohibits Brazilian diplomats from outside activities.

MLA Opposes Free Tuition For Students

Free university education was opposed Thursday by Herb Bruch (SC—Esquimalt).

He said university graduates make much more money in a lifetime than other workers "and the university students should have the responsibility to take this into account when they advocate free education."

Mr. Bruch said if undergraduates were to be given grants to cover tuition on the ground that they enrich the country later, "then are we going to say to the young man who wants to go into logging that he can have so many acres of crown forest for free?

"After all, he will be creating wealth and jobs too, yet that's the argument these professions use for university fees," he said.

SKI TRIP

Mr. Bruch also said he heard of some undergraduates working as security guards at a mainland dock area during their vacation who left four freighters at anchor unable to offload cargoes "because the security guards had gone off on a six-day ski trip."

"You can't have the parents of children who can't afford a university education or a six-day ski trip to pay the shot for a free education for university students," he said.

Mr. Bruch had some harsh words for vocational students too.

"In some of the machine shops, it's almost intolerable when a young man comes in with a diploma and thinks he knows it all," he said.

He said the education department should obtain closer cooperation from industry to inject more practical teaching into vocational school and apprenticeship programs to balance the theoretical training.

Dutch Donate Bell Instrument To B.C. Museum

A 37-bell carillon worth between $25,000 and $30,000 will be installed in the Centennial museum-archives now under construction beside the Legislative Buildings.

The instrument will be donated by the Dutch community of the province as a centennial gift, B.C. centennial chairman L. J. Wallace said Thursday.

L. R. Doorman, Vancouver, chairman of the Netherlands Community Centennial Committee, explained reasons for the choice in a letter to Dutch residents in the province.

"By presenting this gift your committee had thought this would express the feelings of all Dutch people in B.C. and show our gratitude toward Canada for everything we have received."

Industrial Harmony Aim of New Committee

A labor-management committee to promote industrial harmony in the province will be formed, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson announced in the Legislature Thursday.

Mr. Peterson made no mention of the fact but the committee had an additional significance because it placed one of the labor movement's "black sheep" in a joint committee for the first time.

'PROMINENT ROLE'

He is E. M. Lawson, president of the Teamster's Joint Council No. 36, who criticized the proposed general strike last fall and played a prominent role in fashioning the settlement formula of the oil industry dispute which prevented the B.C.-wide strike.

The significant factor is the the Teamsters were drummed out of the Canadian Labor Congress and B.C. Federation of Labor and [illegible] are considered beyond [illegible] by most unionists.

GOODW[illegible]

The [illegible] headed by deputy labo[illegible]inister William Sands, will also include the fiery secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, Pat O'Neal, who helped fashion the general strike ultimatum.

"Needless to say, a great amount of goodwill will be required if this new project is to be successful," said Mr. Peterson.

"The new committee will be asked to accept a much greater responsibility and undertake duties which will be much wider in scope than those performed by the Conference Planning Committee.

"I believe it is reasonable to expect representatives of labor and management to consider more controversial matters than has been the case in the past."

Mr. Peterson said although the exact functions of the committee have not been clearly defined one of its first jobs would be to examine the findings of Dr. J. T. Montague, director of the Institute of Industrial Relations at the University of B.C., who has been appointed to make a study of the manpower needs of the province.

Dr. Montague is named as vice-chairman of the new committee.

Other members are: John Billings, president of Forest Industrial Relation Ltd.; R. K. Gervin, secretary-manager of the B.C. Federation of Construction Associations; F. Fieber, secretary-treasurer, Western Canadian Regional Council No. 1, International Woodworkers of America; R. S. Wilson, works manager, Vancouver Plant, Aluminum Company of Canada.

J. R. St. Eloi, president, Vancouver, New Westminster and District Building Construction Trades Council; D. R. Blair, president, Pulp and Paper, Industrial Relations Bureau; S. G. Green, Canadian vice-president, International Brotherhood of Pulp and Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers Union; C. H. Mitchell, secretary, Mining Association of B.C.

Victoria Daily Times
VICTORIA, B.C., FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1966—PAGE 17

Arthur Mayse

A pride of profs has been roaring thunderously from the University of Victoria escarpments in recent weeks, and down here on the veldt where the taxpayers frolic, I have been listening perk-eared to the refrain.

The voice that most interests me belongs to English department lecturer Joseph Schwartz, a clever, able and challenging emigre from California jungles.

Mr. Schwartz' message has to do with intellectual ferment. He finds this to be in short supply at Uvic, and feels it can best be encouraged by severing the umbilical cord that unites the university with mama Victoria.

"The most healthy situation for a university is for it to be in a cold war with the community," he declared last week to Times education reporter Des Bill.

"That's why the great medieval universities were surrounded by walls. They needed them."

As for the community, Mr. Schwartz feels that it should content itself with leaving Uvic's money on the doorstep, then getting the heck out of the way.

★

These rumblings have caused a certain amount of panic at the water-hole.

The venerable wildebeest that crops Victoria's journalistic grasses alongside us has showed the whites of its eyes, flung its tail in air, and emitted a gaseous editorial in which it maintains the university should be "part and parcel" of the community that helps finance it.

Well, that's a chummy notion, but I for one won't buy it.

I don't think a university should be part and parcel of anything, and I suggest that if it becomes such, it loses its reason for existing.

While I don't fully agree with Mr. Schwartz — whose cold war concept impresses me as a paper dragon—I suggest that we should love Uvic, feed it, and otherwise leave it alone.

If we insist that it shave its beard, shine its shoes and come sit in the living room, we hinder it from doing for our young what we simply aren't geared to accomplish.

This is to de-louse them of their illusions, melt the baby fat from their intellects, and send them into the world as mentally capable men and women.

Personally, I think we need more speakers-out of instructor Schwartz' calibre.

If we acquire enough of them, and if their words are heeded, we may find that our sons and daughters are being educated rather than merely job-trained or kept from under our feet for a few years.

One delightful result will be that we'll have more thinkers and fewer fatheads in community affairs, public office, management and government.

★

Whre I would cross a buttoned foil with Mr. Schwartz and his bristling associates is over their insistence that (sorry . . . I mean their) versity is short of intellec ferment.

I think they over-state the case, as eager young men are inclined to do.

The clash of ideas in fortress Uvic is, in fact, so forthright that I venture into its precincts no oftener than need be. Among the husband-hunters and the time-servers are altogether too many young people who insist on making me stretch my wits.

They are fermenting intellectually all over the place, and I run into the same thing at home, where two Uvic students are ready to rattle my ribs with an argument any time I care to stick my neck out.

I like what's been happening to them in the necessarily closed world of the university.

We don't see very much of them, but when we do, they're stimulating company.

They have acquired the capacity to get excited over ideas as well as things.

Part of this, of course, is natural growth, but it does seem to me that the university which they are so fierce to defend is teaching them to think.

In case anyone's interested in the suit, it's just arrived in local department stores. Designers say its the successor to the scandal suit—sort of more scandal, less suit.

Full Report Tuesday On Plumper Pollution

By JIM HUME

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health on Tuesday will hear a full report of the air pollution problem at Plumper Bay.

The health hazard, destined for elimination by Jan. 31, still exists but only because a specially designed wood-shaving processing machine isn't performing as it should.

Operators of the sawmill have informed the board of health that all sawdust from the mill is now being shipped to Port Angeles.

The manager of the mill has also informed the board that "some unforseen difficulties have arisen" with the operation of a British machine designed to process shavings and eliminate beehive burners.

An engineer from the factory where the machines are manufactured is expected to arrive in the city shortly.

"The procedure being used will in all probability be installed in many other lumber mills in this area," the manager wrote the board. "Beehive burners will then become a thing of the past."

The mill has been the cause of controversy for several years with residents of the surrounding district complaining of damage from sooty fly-ash.

Tuesday the health board will decide whether to wait for the British engineer to put the new equipment in proper working order or whether to take further action against the mill.

BENNETT PAYS 'BILL' OF $50,000 TO 'Y'

Premier W. A. C. Bennett paid his bill to the Y today.

When the premier officiated at the opening of the new Y building last year he promised an additional provincial grant of $50,000 towards the building fund.

A cheque was received today. The provincial contribution now totals $100,000.

New Truck Lane Being Surveyed

Provincial highways department is surveying a right-of-way for a third lane on the Thetis Park slope of the Trans-Canada Highway, an official said Thursday.

The survey is needed for estimating cost of a full-scale additional northbound lane for truck and slow traffic to replace the present makeshift surfaced shoulder between Thetis underpass and the limits of Thetis Park.

The survey is not connected to another completed some weeks ago which plotted the widening of the Trans-Canada Highway entrance to Victoria to four full lanes.

The official said cost estimates are still under preparation for the four-lane study of the stretch between the Thetis underpass and the highway junction with Douglas Street.

LOGGER 'POOR'

A young Colwood logger, pinned by a falling tree Thursday, is in poor condition in St. Joseph's Hospital.

It was some time before workmates found Eric Peterson, 24, 3098 Paisley, after the accident near Sooke.

The two-foot thick tree was lying across his body.

A faller for Butler Bros., Peterson suffered back, facial and internal injuries.

'CRITICAL SHORTAGE OF TYPE B'

Donors with type B negative blood are needed tonight at Red Cross House on Fort St. near Cook.

There is a critical shortage of this rare type at the B.C. blood bank. At least 75 pints are needed immediately.

Today is the last day of the February clinic. The clinic will be open from 6:30 to 9 p.m. for all donors.

A recent two-day clinic at the Universtiy of Victoria collected 757 pints of blood.

'MOST UNUSUAL PARTY'

Winnifred Martha Lamb, 551 Niagara had an unusual birthday party Jan. 9, but Magistrate William Ostler acquitted her of bootlegging.

He gave judgment today in central court dismissing a charge of keeping liquor for sale.

When police raided her home they found 17 mickeys of rye under a bedroom dresser and 12 cases of beer in a chesterfeild storage compartment.

Other bottles of liquor were found throughout the home.

DELAYED PARTY

The woman testified at an earlier hearing the liquor was for a delayed birthday party.

She produced a birth certificate to show her birthday was Jan. 8.

She said several guests pooled $55 to buy the liquor.

"By ordinary standards it was a most unusual party," commented Magistrate Ostler.

'CURIOUS'

He noted the woman was not too familiar with some of her guests and the rye drinkers were in the kitchen and the beer drinkers in the living room.

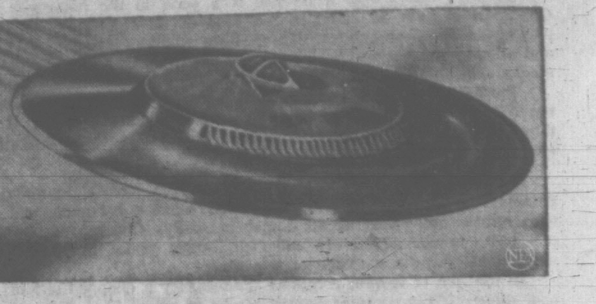
He added it was "curious she bought mickeys instead of larger bottles."

He said the woman "may well be a bootlegger" but her explanation created a doubt great enough to warrant a dismissal.

DR. MAX'S ADVICE

Watched by Aliens? Better Believe It!

By DESMOND BILL



Saucer Sighted on Vancouver Island?

A group of women had coffee cups in their hands and flying saucers on their minds after a meeting Thursday night at the University of Victoria.

They were members of the Faculty Women's Club and they had just heard a talk by Dr. Max Edwards on unidentified flying objects.

Most of them seemed willing to concede after that it is at least possible this world has been visited by strangers from another planet.

But to Dr. Edwards, a linguist who reads 15 languages and has made a hobby out of studying UFO, there is no doubt about it.

"I run the risk of ridicule, I know. Some people think you are a nut. But I believe otherwise after studying the evidence," he said.

★

To the Uvic professor, the evidence is "shattering and incontrovertible."

But when he first heard about flying saucers 15 years ago he scoffed at the idea.

Since then, he said, he has studied the matter in great detail both personally and by keeping up with the literature on the subject.

He told the Faculty Club what he has found out.

The best study on the subject is by a French physicist, Aime Michel. He plotted all the sightings of UFO over a number of years and discovered they followed a pattern.

Michel noted that most sightings occurred along two straight lines that circled the earth and intersected one another at about 50-degree angles.

On the basis of his theory, Michel predicted where future spottings would be reported and in the course of time his predictions were verified.

Another expert on the subject is Professor H. Oberth, a one-time German rocket scientist who worked for the U.S. government's space program for 10 years.

★

Oberth stated recently, "One must regard as real a phenomenon that has been definitely confirmed by 8,000 reports of sightings and landings and partially confirmed by at least 50,000 other reports."

Dr. Edwards also quoted the late General George C. Marshall, former U.S. defence secretary, as saying, "My government is aware we are being watched by alien beings who are trying to work out a way to breathe our atmosphere."

Dr. Edwards cited numerous examples of how descriptions of the sightings in widely different places and areas coincided. He gave examples of incidents involving hundreds of persons who confirmed strange events involving UFO.

He outlined the history of sightings, which in modern times started in 1891, although there are about 300 reports "back in time" of occurrences which could have been UFO. Dr. Edwards said the reports stopped almost entirely between 1916 and 1947 showing they did not result from a war psychosis or the influence of science-fiction comics.

He said too that when the reports began again in 1947 in North America the descriptions of what happened were exactly similar to reports in New Zealand in 1909.

Dr. Edwards said photographs have been made of UFO and of the burning that results when they land. He said plaster casts have been made of the footprints of the creatures that emerged from the crafts that landed.

The landings have taken place even on Vancouver Island, he said.

Dr. Edwards named a farmer near Mount Newton who in February last year saw a flying saucer land in one of his fields.

★

"He called the newspapers, the police and the airport and got laughed at for his trouble. But later he got a friend and they tested the ground with a geiger counter and found it was radioactive."

And one woman asked him, "What would you do if you actually saw one land?"

He replied, "I'd be scared stiff. I'd run away and watch from a safe distance."

PUNCHED OFFICER

Reckless Driver Jailed

A youth who drove recklessly around city streets and then punched a police officer was sentenced in central court today to eight months imprisonment.

Richard M. C. Jancowski, Albany Hotel, pleaded guilty Saturday to criminal negligence and assaulting police officer Brian Hayes Friday night.

He also received suspended sentences for being a minor without insurance and driving as a learner without an adult licence holder beside him.

PSYCHIATRIC PROBLEM

Council Digby Kier asked he not be sent to j il as the youth had a psychiatric problem but Magistrate J. A. Byers disagreed.

"Knowing something about your upbringing, your previous behavior and your difficulties, I would be the first to hesitate to send you to a penal institution," he told Jancowski.

ESCAPED CUSTODY

But he ordered the youth returned to the young offenders' unit because of previous convictions for theft and escaping custody.

Friday night Jancowski was chased by a police vehicle three times around Douglas, Discovery Government and Bay streets at speeds over 60 mph.

SPARK BEHIND last year's Dorion inquiry will speak tonight at 8 at Mount View High School on Carey Road. Yukon Conservative MP Erik Nielsen is sharp critic of Liberal government.

Driver In 'Shocking' State

Two motorists were fined and another two were remanded for sentence when they pleaded guilty in central court today to impaired driving.

James V. Slavin, 1701 Midgard, was fined $400 after court was told his blood contained .33 per cent alcohol.

Slavin was involved in a rear-end collision Thursday evening on Bay near Cook Street.

"You realize the shocking condition you were in, do you?" asked Magistrate William Ostler.

Steven Panchuk, 1256 Yates, was fined $300. He was involved in a head-on collision in the 800 block, Quadra Street, Sunday.

John David Humber, 18, of 2517 Graham, took money out of his wallet and tore it up, then ripped his shirt Tuesday night.

He had just collided with a fence when he tried to turn into a driveway on Richmond Road.

"You certainly ran the gamut of irrational conduct, didn't you?" said Magistrate Ostler remanding Humber to Feb. 15 for sentence.

Michael Nemec, 43, address unavailable, was remanded to Feb. 11 for sentence after he admitted impaired driving.

Historic B.C. Event Told in Diary

Dangerous Quest for River Gold

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A diary which throws new light on a gold rush which had Victorians wild with excitement in 1862 has been given to the Provincial Archives.

The diary of John Joseph Cowley, an English-born Victorian, deals with the search for gold along the Stikine River in Northern B.C.

The important find was discovered among the family papers of Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton of the B.C. Supreme Court, who turned it over to the archives.

●

"It's the only first-hand exciting event of the period," said archivist Willard Ireland. "For some time we have been looking for something like this."

The Stikine, which runs roughly halfway between Cassiar and Stewart high in the northwest, is one of the most treacherous rivers in the province. It is flanked by huge mountains, some more than 10,000 feet in height.

●

The B.C. government in 1964 listed the Stikine as a potential power site.

In 1861, a French-Canadian prospector, Alexander "Buck" Choquette, went up the river with some Indians and discovered gold in its sand-bars.

News of the discovery spread quickly and the following year 800 miners, mostly from Victoria, left for the Stikine territory in the hopes of making their fortunes.

Cowley's diary, which starts with his departure from London, and includes a stop-over in California, tells of his adventures in his search for gold.

The trip up the Stikine proved a back-breaking experience, frought with dangers. At one point they moved through a canyon where the waters tore at the mountains. So powerful was the current whole trees had been uprooted and were being tumbled down the river.

Cowley, like most of the miners, didn't do as well as he hoped.

●

He died in Victoria in 1909.

Lacking in the diary is Cowley's family background — which the archives would like to know because relatives in England may still have in their possession some of his letters which might give more historic information.

Mr. Justice Wootton recalls visits by Cowley to his home.

●

"I was only a young boy when he was living," he said. "I remember my parents saying he was a keen naturalist, a collector. He was also artistic."

He thinks Cowley may have come from Cornwall.

This is possible as a large number of the miners and prospectors in California, Nevada and Montana at the time were Cornish immigrants. Cowley may have meant to stay in California, but moved to B.C. when he heard of the gold discovery.

PIONEER'S DIARY is worth its weight in gold, says Miss Inez Mitchell, assistant archivist.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Pre-Dinner Panic? No More With These

By Penny Saver

Are you ever caught downtown in the five o'clock rush? It happens to all of us sooner or later. Nothing is more frustrating, especially if you have nothing planned for dinner. This means that when you get home, you must think of something to prepare, and have your dinner well under way by the time your family comes in. This is almost impossible. However, the impossible has to be achieved, as your family must be fed, and they are all going to be "as mad as hornets" if dinner isn't ready at the usual time.

On days like these, a freezer is a boon to the housewife. One item to have on hand in the case of an emergency is a package of beef steakettes. These little wonders are buttered, and all that you have to do is to fry or broil them. A bag of four steaks sells for 59 cents.

These must be prepared while still frozen, because they are made of very thin slices of beef, stacked to make one steak. If they are allowed to thaw, the slices begin to peel from the steak.

Meat pies are other items that should be stocked in your freezer. These just take about half an hour in a hot oven, and with hardly any effort at all dinner is ready. Chicken or beef pies, with tender vegetables and rich, brown gravy, are priced at 45 cents for the package of two pies.

In the line of frozen, complete dinners, try a chopped sirloin beef dinner. This contains hearty pieces of prime beef, French-fried potatoes, peas in a butter sauce, and a blueberry muffin for dessert. The complete dinner sells for 69 cents.

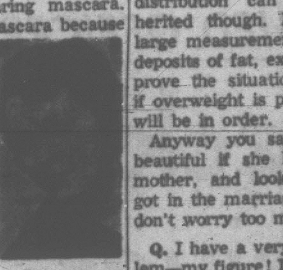
A quick dessert that's simple to prepare is sponge pudding. This is a self-saucing packaged mix. Different flavors, including apple, lemon, creamy chocolate, banana and caramel, sell for 29 cents. Delicious raisin pudding sells for 33 cents. For an added treat, add raisins to the other flavors. You need one-half cup of the fruit for each package.

Do you want to know where Penny found these quick dinner ideas? Give her a call at 382-3131.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

An Allergy or Eye Strain



Lowman

Q. I rub my eyes quite often because they itch. I am 15 and just started wearing mascara. It can't be the mascara because my eyes itched before I ever wore any. It can't be that I don't get enough sleep because school nights I get nine hours of sleep, and on weekends . . . more than that!

A. This could be due to a mild infection, eye strain or an allergy. See an eye doctor for his advice.

Q. I am the father of a six-month-old baby, and a two-year-old boy. The boy is the picture of me and we are very proud of him. If my daughter grows up to look like her mother, she will be a beautiful girl. However, it also appears that she will have her mother's legs. Her mother has had heavy legs since she was a young girl.

Is there any advice you can offer to prevent our daughter having the same shape legs? Are there any exercises she can do as a young girl to shape her legs for womanhood?

A. I do not think you can tell what shape legs a baby six months old will have when she grows up. They all look chubby and shapeless at that age. However, if you are right, there are several possibilities. If the heavy calves and thighs are due to bony structure and heavy muscles, exercise cannot help much. Weight distribution can also be inherited though. If the overly-large measurements are due to deposits of fat, exercise can improve the situation. Of course, if overweight is present, dieting will be in order.

Anyway you say she will be beautiful if she looks like her mother, and look what Mama got in the marriage lottery! So, don't worry too much.

Q. I have a very serious problem—my figure! I did weigh 142, but I reduced to 136. My bust measures 34, waist 27 and hips 42 inches. This hip measurement is a real problem and seems to get larger. What exercises should I take? I would also appreciate any exercises you have for round shoulders. Please send me exercises for these disasters.

You see, I have two lovely boys, ages one and two, and a wonderful, adorable husband. You can imagine how important it is for me to look my best. I wish I had been as determined a few months ago as I am now. MY MIND IS MADE UP!"

A. That's what it takes! This reader mentioned dieting so I judge that she is overweight and is counting calories. Do this exercise for round shoulders. Stand tall. Take the end of a wand or bath towel in each hand, behind your back. Hold on tightly as you raise your arms backwards-upward as far as you can, keeping the elbows straight. At the same time lower the head backward. Return arms and head to starting position and continue, slowly.

For the large hipline you should have more than one exercise. If you, or any of my readers would like to have my tested hip slimming exercises, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for these. Address Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Orchid corsages were worn by the honor guest, her mother and groom-elect's mother while white carnations en corsage were received by her grandmothers, Mrs. Alec Henderson and Mrs. Frank Quinn. Two of the bride-to-be's chosen bridesmaids, the Misses Sharon Henderson and Janice Kimmerly received white carnation corsages and the chosen flower girl, Kim Proceviat was presented with a headpiece of pink carnations.

Presiding at the refreshment table were Mrs. Alec Henderson, Mrs. Mahar, Mrs. Norman Pimlott and Mrs. Proceviat.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Oh, for Heaven's Sake

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: There are 365 days in the year, right? So will you please tell me why my sister had to pick the day of my wedding anniversary for her wedding date? Don't tell me she forgot, because she was my maid of honor and she knew perfectly well that that was my wedding date.

Now all of my future wedding anniversaries will have to be shared with her. That just burns me up!

BURNED UP.

DEAR BURNED: Even though you are burned up, don't make an ash of yourself by voicing your disapproval.

DEAR ABBY: About four years ago my sister-in-law gave us an old beat-up baby bed that she'd had in her basement for ten years. My husband sanded it down, painted it and fixed it up like new, and we used it until our baby was four years old. Then we traded it along with a lot of other odds and ends on a new set of bedroom furniture for the child's room. My sister-in-law heard about it and demanded that we get the baby bed back for her. (She had no use for it, she just wanted to start trouble.) Of course, by then it was too late. Well, she has a very big mouth, so she spread it all over the family and different ones took sides, and now there are lots of hard feelings. I admit I should have asked her before getting rid of it, but honestly, Abby, I had no idea she wanted it back. How can I patch up this mess? FAMILY ROW

DEAR FAMILY: Ask her how much she thinks the bed was worth, and insist that she take the cash. Even if it's expensive, it will shut her big mouth, and that's worth something.

DEAR ABBY: One of my best friends has a heart as big as this world. She knows what it is like to be forsaken, so she has been attempting to provide a home for forsaken animals. How can I tell her tactfully that she cannot keep a house full of cats? Abby, the odor is indescribable. She works, the house is closed all day, the smell comes through the walls. The odor clings to her clothing. Whew! I am afraid she will lose her job. These cats have not been "doctored" and they are producing more cats, which in turn produce still more cats; cats which have never seen the outdoors! Her kindness to these poor creatures is misplaced. Her nose must be numb. What can be done? HER FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Both the Department of Public Health and the SPCA should be called to investigate the living quarters of your friend. And a mental examination is very much in order for her. She has a "good" heart, but I fear the trouble is in her head, poor soul.

Problems? Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S RECIPE

ONION AND BEEF CASSEROLE

Four cups (1½ pounds) sliced onions, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 pound minced beef, 1 cup soft, stale bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon oregano, 1 can (10-ounce) condensed tomato soup, ⅓ cup water, ¼ cup buttered bread crumbs.

Saute onions in melted butter until transparent, about 10 minutes. Arrange half of the onions in bottom of a greased 6-cup casserole. Brown meat, then add bread crumbs, salt, pepper and oregano.

Spread meat mixture over onions and cover with remaining half of sauted onions.

Combine tomato soup and water. Pour over onions and bake in a 350-degree Farenheit oven until onions are almost tender, about 30 minutes.

Sprinkle top of casserole with buttered bread crumbs, return to oven and continue baking until onions are tender and crumbs browned, about 10 minutes longer. Makes four to five servings.

Verdict on Moon Pictures:

'THEY'RE SENSATIONAL!'

JODRELL BANK, England (AP — The radiotelescopic observatory here announced today it is receiving sensational pictures of the moon from the Soviet Luna IX satellite. They show individual rocks on the moon's surface, a spokesman said.

Signals from the moon rocket, which made history's first soft landing on the moon Thursday, were fed into a facsimile machine. After technicians worked out the focus, they got a picture showing rocks, a flat surface and the shadow of the spaceship itself.

Sir Bernard Lovell, director of the observatory and a veteran of tracking space vehicles, called them "the most sensational pictures we have ever had at Jodrell Bank."

133 Japanese Victims In Worst Air Disaster

Jetliner Plunges Into Tokyo Bay

TOKYO (UPI)—An All Nippon Airways Boeing 727 jet airliner with 133 persons aboard crashed into Tokyo Bay tonight only four minutes from a landing in perfect weather. All aboard were apparently dead in the worst single airplane disaster in history.

The plane carrying 126 passengers from a northern Japan snow festival and a crew of seven fell into the bay seven miles from Tokyo as the pilot was circling for a routine landing.

A search boat of the Maritime Safety Agency sighted several chairs and articles of clothing floating in the water at 11:40 p.m. (6:40 a.m. PST) and they were identified as coming from the missing plane.

Wing Found Floating in Water

Search ships operating with spotlights and an occasional flare from U.S. planes overhead converged on the scene southeast of Tokyo and found the wing of the plane floating in the water where a light mist hovered just above the surface.

At 11:50 p.m., the agency said its search boat spotted the floating body of a man and a book explaining how to use lifesaving equipment aboard the plane.

Six hours after the crash 21 bodies had been recovered.

A spokesman for the airways denied at 1 a.m. that there was any report by the pilot of instrument trouble and said the only word was that he was shifting over from instrument to visual flight for the final approach.

An official of the transportation ministry aviation bureau said, "Judging from the fact the plane lost contact immediately after it last made contact with the airport it is strongly suspected something—maybe some kind of trouble—happened to some mechanism in the plane."

The airways said the plane was almost new. It had been in service only since late last year and had a total of 1,600 flying hours. One of its three jet engines was replaced early this year and an airways spokesman said there was no foundation to reports of any faulty mechanism.

He said it was perfectly normal for a pilot to shift from instruments to visual landing under conditions of clear weather and long visibility such as existed.

The airline later led the weeping relatives from the terminal building and took them to the airport hotel to await recovery of the bodies. After serving them tea the company said it would take them to the morgue as soon as it could hire buses.

Fourth Fatal Crash of 727

It was the fourth fatal crash of the Boeing 727 three-jet airliner within a year and already Japanese officials were reported raising questions about the safety of the sleek craft in widespread use by airlines in the U.S.

Fishermen had reported seeing a plane trailing dense clouds of smoke and then a ball of fire as the plane apparently hit the waters of the bay. But the pilot had given no indication of possible trouble.

Capt. Masaki Takahashi, 39, trained as a pilot during the Second World War and cited only recently for his safety record, radioed the Haneda international airport control tower four minutes before his scheduled landing he was on the final, circling approach. Then disaster.

There were scenes of grief and despair at the Haneda airport serving the Tokyo-Yokohama area and at Chitose in the northernmost Island of Hokkaido where millions of Japanese were attending an annual snow festival to see the spectacular snow and ice carvings. The plane left Chitose earlier.

The passengers were said to be mostly Japanese from three Tokyo firms which sent its employees to Chitose on an outing.

About 50 relatives and friends were waiting at the airport when word of the missing plane was flashed on 9 p.m. television news broadcasts. Hundreds of Japanese poured into the terminal building.

Hysterical Scene at Airport

They jammed against the airlines' counter and simply stood. Most were stony-faced with the stoicism of the Orient. A few wept openly.

Among them were two small children, Emiko Yokoshima and her brother Yutaka whose parents had gone to Hokkaido. They wept with grief as a reporter tried to interview them before a television camera.

Airlines officials announced stonily every half hour there was no trace of the plane. There were shouts "were there enough life boats?" and "did the plane carry rescue rafts at all?" The questions were screamed in hysterical voices.

One man, clad in padded clothes and a hat with heavy earflaps, let the tears stream down his seamed and burdened face as he waited for word that did not come.

Shortly after midnight Saturday the Japanese government announced it had asked the U.S. embassy for assistance. It was assumed help was wanted from the military in rescue operations.

Landing Feat Gives Russia Lead to Moon

MOSCOW (CP)—Luna IX, the Soviet mechanical moon pioneer, has transmitted to earth pictures of the lunar landscape, Tass reported today.

An announcement distributed by the official Soviet news agency gave no indication when the pictures would be made public. It would be the first ever transmitted directly from the moon's surface to earth, after earlier Soviet and American pictures sent from spacecraft above the moon.

Luna IX "has begun scanning the lunar landscape and transmitting it to the earth's surface," the announcement said.

The space vehicle landed Thursday in an area of the moon that will be in direct sunlight for almost two weeks. This would permit a number of pictures to be sent, if Luna IX continues working properly and sunlight can power its batteries.

The announcement, made 20 hours after Luna IX's landing, said four radio communications sessions had been held with it today, totalling three hours 20 minutes.

RECEIVE DATA

"Telemetric information was received during these radio links from the station," it added. "It confirmed the normal functioning of the flight system. Transmission of the lunar landscape was carried out on command from earth."

Before this announcement, the Russians had been characteristically silent about information received from the mechanical pioneer sitting on the plain named Ocean of Storms, though the British radio observatory at Jodrell Bank said Luna IX had transmitted radio information and pictures.

The official Thursday announcement said the landing was in the area of the Ocean of Storms to the west of he craters Reiner and Maria, Yuri Pakovsky, a scienist, described the site for Tass.

"This area is an easily observable plain," he said, "although in the zone of landing there are hills and craters. The large light spot of Reiner Gamma lies to the south. Scientists still do not know what it is."

Pakovsky said the land site can be seen from earth with ordinary field glasses.

But triumphant space program chiefs cautiously held back detailed information until experts thoroughly examine pictures and technical data said to be streaming back to earth.

Informed sources said ground control planned several radio links a day with the Luna IX unmanned station which Thursday night gave the Soviet Union a dramatic space victory in landing — apparently undamaged—on the moon's dust-covered surface after a 3½ day flight from earth.

The heavy instrument filled capsule glided gently into the surface of earth's nearest neighbor at 9:45 p.m. (10:45 a.m. PST), after scientists slowed Luna IX's speed from about one mile a second to almost zero by firing retro-rockets.

Russia's feat was likened to its success as the first nation to put a man into orbit, and the first to send a human being to walk in outer space.

But Russians were cautious in talking about how soon it may be before they can cap their victory by sending a cosmonaut to touch down on the moon.

Experts believe the split-second timing achieve in landing Luna IX after a flight of more than 240,000 miles shows Russia

How Moon Looks From 10 Feet Away

One of the first pictures of the moon's surface taken by the Soviet Union's Luna 9 was released today by a British observatory.

The Luna 9 equipped with cameras and other equipment made a successful soft landing Thursday.

The craft's camera appeared to be shooting pictures from about six to 10 feet above the moon's surface, according to Sir Bernard Lovell, director of Jodrell Bank observatory where the pictures were being received.

Craters, rocks and pebbles could be distinguished and one crater was about 12 inches across, he said.

The pictures were being picked up in the United Kingdom by a big-dish radio telescope 250 feet across, fed into special receiving equipment and printed.

Lovell said Luna 9 began transmitting television pictures from the moon a few minutes after touching down Thursday which, he said, "would indicate the Luna had landed on a hard surface without encountering any great depths of dust."

The picture above was transmitted from Manchester, England, through the facilities of the Manchester Guardian simultaneously into the Associated Press wirephoto service in London and New York. The pictures were released by the observatory.

Lovell said:

"One thing is certain, these are photographs of the lunar surface in considerable detail. When we get a group of them we will be able to interpret them in more detail. We don't know yet the scale of the rocks shown in one of the photographs. There is a dark mark on one of them which is a shadow of the spaceship itself."

At first there had been problems in working out the focal length of the satellite's TV camera and the facsimile pictures showed a series of dark lines about one-quarter of an inch in width.

Then another shot showed light lines. But finally the focus was worked out and the pictures were translated from radio signals into visual images which technicians described as exceedingly clear.

UN Delegates Meet With No Success In Viet Nam Talks

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters)—Delegates to the United Nations Security Council resume their private efforts today to deal with the Viet Nam war without any immediate prospect of agreement.

(See Page 3, Viet Nam War Tod[illegible])

Talks were agreed on Wednesday when the Viet Nam crisis was placed on the council agenda at the request of the United States and over strong Russian objections.

Debate was suspended shortly after a close vote on the agenda because delegates wanted to avoid an acrimonious public debate which could only make the situation worse.

There was considerable speculation that Sori Coulibaly, chief delegate of Mali, might have a key role to play in the private negotiations.

Mali, one of the non-permanent Council members, has diplomatic relations with Peking. Coulibaly, chairman of the "committee of 24" on colonialism, has a reputation as a militant African delegate.

He conferred Thursday with Halim Budo, chief delegate of Albania, Charles Yost, deputy chief U.S. delegate, and Roger Seydoux, chief delegate of France.

DECLINES ANY COMMENT

Coulibaly declined any comment except to say that any initiative for another meeting would have to come from the U.S., which made the original request.

Nikolai T. Fedorenko, the chief Soviet delegate, was expected to continue his stiff opposition to any Council debate on Viet Nam, which he said would be a "propaganda farce" aimed at giving Washington a blank cheque for further aggression in Viet Nam.

Many delegates indicated they thought the best forum for dealing with the Viet Nam war was at a Geneva conference.

Arthur J. Goldberg, chief U.S. delegate, has circulated a draft council resolution calling for talks between the appropriate interested governments — apparently excluding the Viet Cong.

Fedorenko said the Viet Cong were the "sole genuine representatives of the South Vietnamese people" and reaffirmed his support of Hanoi's four points, which include a demand for withdrawal of all American troops.

McNAMARA WON'T TALK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defence Secretary Robert McNamara declined today to testify in public in the Senate foreign relations comittee investigation of President Johnson's Viet Nam war policies. He drew quick fire from some committee men. (See story Page 3).

EDMONTON (CP) — Joseph Percival and James McDougall, both of Vancouver, today were sentenced in Alberta Supreme Court to 2½ years each for possessing $12,000 in mutilated money stolen from a Vancouver warehouse last year.

IN HAWAII

Johnson Sets Up War Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson announced today that he will fly to Hawaii late Saturday for three days of meetings with South Vietnamese leaders and the U.S. high command.

Johnson told a news conference in his office that South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky and the Vietnamese chief of state, Nguyen Van Thieu, had accepted his invitation to meet him in Honolulu Sunday.

Also coming from Saigon for the conference are Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in Southeast Asia, and the U.S. Ambassador to Saigon, Henry Cabot Lodge.

Johnson will be accompanied by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara, Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman and John W. Gardner, secretary of health, education and welfare.

NO SHIFT SEEN

The president said he anticipated no shift in this country's policies in Viet Nam, but that the meeting was arranged because he wanted for some time to meet Ky and Thieu. He said he also had wanted to see Westmoreland and Lodge in person.

Johnson and his party planned to leave Washington for Hawaii in air force jet transports late Saturday. The president expected the Honolulu talks to run through next Tuesday and thought he would be back in the White House by Wednesday morning.

The building, which was up for sale, housed a small department store on the first floor.

'Time Come for Queen To Visit Every Year'

OTTAWA — A Conservative MP suggested Thursday that Queen Elizabeth should spend a few weeks in Canada every year.

Wallace Nesbitt, Oxford, said the government could build permanent quarters for her at Government House in Ottawa.

"I think it would be a splendid thing to be able to announce in our centenary year —1967—that Her Majesty would be Queen of Canada not just by representation but by her presence for a few weeks of each year," he stated.

Nesbitt said it is possible now for the Queen to get from London to Ottawa by air in a few hours.

If Canada is to continue as a constitutional monarchy, it has to be brought up to date, said Nesbitt.

The member said he thought royal tours are exhausting and an imposition on the Queen, and do not satisfy the requirements of a constitutional monarchy.

APPROXIMATE SPOT on moon where Russia's Luna 9 made soft landing Thursday is indicated by star on map released today in Moscow. Tass news agency said Luna landed in area of the Ocean of Storms to the west of the craters Reiner and Maria. (AP Wirephoto.)

. . . LANDING

already has the technical capacity to land a human being.

But the hazards he may face on the mysterious moon surface are still unknown. Delicate instruments aboard the space station will help scientists determine how a cosmonaut can survive, testing such factors as temperatures and pressures.

There is a widespread optimism in Moscow that Russia will solve the problem before 1970. The next few years may see a spectacular race between the Soviet Union and the United States to get there first.

Although U.S. probes have sent back detailed pictures of the moon's surface just before crashing, the U.S. has not attempted a soft landing. Its first try is scheduled for May.

The Soviet success came on its fifth attempt.

Soviet Cosmonaut Andrian Nikolayev said in a Pravda article the landing "could be said to be already a step on the lunar surface . . . wait for us, moon."

In another Pravda article, Prof. N. Barabashov of the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences said investigations on the moon would have a great effect on "earth-bound" science and would "enrich mankind with new knowledge about the basic laws of nature."

The Soviet news agency Tass said: "Radio contact with the station on the surface of the moon is reliable. Transmissions are on 183.538 megacycles. The instruments on board the station are functioning normally."

Scientists at the Jodrell Bank Radio Observatory in England said Luna IX transmitted facsimile pictures from its landing at 9:45 p.m. until 10:50 p.m., went off the air, and resumed signals shortly after midnight (6 p.m. PST).

Congratulations from heads of states around the world have poured into Moscow.

"Your accomplishment is one that can benefit all mankind and all mankind applauds it," said President Johnson in a message to President Nikolai Podgorny.

U.S. space officials at Cape Kennedy, Fla., conceded the Soviet success gave the Russians a lead in this phase of the race to put a man on the moon.

SCORE OTHER 'FIRSTS'

The Soviets were the first to crash-land a rocket on the moon in September, 1959. The following month they sent a space station around the moon that sent back photographs of its far side, never before seen by man.

The United States also crash-landed a picture-taking satellite on the moon, but not until July 31, 1964. This was Ranger 7 which sent back the most complete series of pictures taken of the moon.

An earlier U.S. attempt, Ranger 6, hit the moon Feb. 2, 1964, but its cameras did not work.

At Jodrell Bank, Lovell said the spacecraft landed in a region that will be in full sunlight for 14 days, permitting solar power to replenish Luna IX's batteries.

Cosmonaut Gherman Titov, the Soviet Union's second man in space, told Tass today he believes dogs or other animals will precede man to the moon, just as dogs preceded men in orbiting the earth in Soviet space shots.

He said the chief problem in preparing for manned flight to the moon is the return of the men to the earth.

Russian Moon Landing Hailed Around the World

LONDON (CP) — Political leaders and scientists around the world joined today in congratulating the Soviet Union on its successful moon landing.

Newspapers and radio and television stations in most countries gave the soft landing of Luna IX top attention. President Johnson was one of the first to hail the Soviet feat:

"You and the people of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics are to be congratulated for the great success of Luna IX," he said in a message to Soviet President Nikolai Podgorney.

"Your accomplishment is one that can benefit all mankind and all mankind applauds it. Your scientists have made a major contribution to man's knowledge of the moon and space."

President de Gaulle of France said in a telegram to Soviet leaders: "Soviet science has, in the interest of all humanity, added a new chapter to the history of great discoveries."

PRAISE FROM INDIA

Indian President Sarvapallo Radhakrishnan hailed "yet another triumph for Soviet scientists." Indian Premier Mrs. Indira Gandhi said the landing "comes like a sudden reassurance of man's continuous quest to transform the unattainable into the attainable."

"A great feat of science and technology," said Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake of New Zealand.

Scientists could not agree whether the landing put the Soviet Union ahead of the United States in the race to put a man on the moon or only in one phase of it.

The race to put a man on the moon is "still fairly even now," said Sir Bernard Lovell, director of the Jodrell Bank Radio Observatory in England.

"The Soviet Union has gone ahead in the techniques of soft landing," he said. "The Americans already achieved the other essential feature of rendezvous in space. Both countries now have one each to their credit."

LUNA TICKS OFF MOON SECRETS

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — With the successful soft landing of Luna IX, the Russians apparently have proved that man can safely explore the moon. They also put added pressure on the troubled United States Surveyor program, which hopes to make a similar landing in May.

Until Luna IX settled gently onto the dry, relatively flat Ocean of Storms Thursday, scientists were divided on whether the moon's surface could support a landing.

Some felt the surface might be a thick layer of dust or a fragile honeycomb structure that would swallow a heavy spacecraft.

But Luna IX touched down, established firm radio contact with Russian ground stations, and started sending photographs and information which will help in developing a manned lunar landing vehicle.

Other goals must be achieved before men venture to the moon. A key one is the joining of two vehicles in space, which the U.S. hopes to do with the Gemini 8 flight in March.

It's been nearly a year since the last Russian cosmonaut went aloft. In that period 10 American astronauts have rocketed into space.

But, as one rocket expert noted about Russian secrecy: "They could have a 20-man spacecraft on the pad right now and we wouldn't know about it until after it was launched."

NEAR-EPIDEMIC OUTBREAK OF RABIES IN ONTARIO

TORONTO (UPI)—An outbreak of rabies in southern Ontario has spread to near-epidemic proportions, the Ontario Lands and Forests Department warned today.

The department issued warnings to parents, pet owners and farmers.

During November last year, the department said 110 cases of rabies were reported in southern Ontario—the largest number from a large area north of Lake Huron.

B.C. SYNOPSIS—The main core of a large storm area over the eastern Pacific was located well off the Washington coast today and will drift slowly northward during the next 48 hours. A weak disturbance is expected to move out from the storm today and will bring steady rain to the south coast this evening and tonight. As the disturbance moves eastward on Saturday it will be preceded by showers of snow or mixed rain and snow in the southern interior. Elsewhere in the province skies will continue cloudy while periods of rain are looked for on the north coast and light snowflurries will persist in parts of the northern interior. Mild temperatures will prevail except in far northern B.C. which is still dominated by cold Arctic air.

ON MUNICIPAL RELATIONS

Grit Demands Work For House Committee

A written ruling to decide a procedural question that has caused violent argument in the B.C. legislature for the second year running is expected to be handed down Monday by Speaker William Murray.

The issue came to a head Thursday when Alan Macfarlane (L—Oak Bay) raised a point of order in the legislature to seek a ruling on whether legislative committees have the right to ask the legislature to give them some work.

Earlier in the day, the municipal affairs committee was disrupted when Mr. Macfarlane was overridden by chairman Herb Bruch (SC—Esquimalt) in his attempt to have the committee request the legislature to refer to it for study of Greater Victoria inter-municipal committee's demand for a hearing this session on provincial-municipal relations.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Macfarlane seized the floor on the point of order when the legislature's regular session opened and raised the question again despite some running demands from Premier Bennett and Attorney-general Robert Bonner that the speaker rule him out of order.

At one point, a heckle lost to hearing in the galleries above cause Opposition Leader Robert Strachan to shout at Mr. Bonner: "You are a smart, pompous ass."

But the speaker did not rebuke Mr. Strachan or rule Mr. Macfarlane out of order.

1948 RULING

Mr. Macfarlane said a 1948 speaker's ruling held that no legislative committee could make a report or a recommendation on a subject to the legislature unless it had been asked to study it first.

"But that doesn't mean the committe can't respectfully ask the house to submit something to it for examination," he said.

"There was no suggestion this morning that the committe examine or inquire into any matter. My motion only was that it request the legislature to refer a matter to it for study.

"The point I make goes to the very root of the reason for having committees. The question is whether a committee is going to have life or whether it is going to be sterile.

"Can the members ask to be put to work or must they just sit there impotent."

Mr. Speaker Murray said he agreed a point of order was involved and observed that the question had had much discussion in the past without being formally settled.

"I think the point is an interesting one and I would like to have the courtesy of the house to bring in a written ruling on the subject," he said.

His request was approved without dissent.

'More, Not Fewer' Members

Government policy and redistribution came under attack in the legislature Thursday by one of its own members.

Jacob Huhn (SC—North Peace River) became the third government member to openly criticize the recommendations made by the Angus Royal Commission on Redistribution.

He told the House that distances involved in representing the northern ridings made it impossible for the area to be served by fewer members.

The commission recommended giving more representation to the populous Greater Vancouver and lower mainland area while taking seats away from the north by expanding the ridings.

Cyril Shelford (SC—Omineca) questioned the recommendation Wednesday in the light of recent development in the north and J. Donald Smith (SC—Victoria City) suggested the addition of five members to represent the north.

Mr. Huhn said the urban residents of the province likely do not realize the vast distances involved in the sparsely-populated north.

"These well-populated regions have municipal government to represent the people whereas most of the northern area is unorganized territory.

"What bothers me is that now the north is beginning to develop we're getting rid of its members."

Mr. Huhn's criticism of government road policy—not enough paving for the north—brought a quip from Dave Barrett (NDP—Dewdney):

"You should be a member of the opposition."

Mr. Huhn went on to say the government was not providing enough campsites and parks in his riding and not changing the Motor Vehicles Act to allow northern residents to leave their cars running unattended in winter.

STEWART-CASSIAR ANSWER

Corridor 'East Plot' Charges North MLA

Demands for Ottawa to negotiate a corridor through the Alaska panhandle were blasted Thursday by a northern MLA who said it was an "eastern" plot.

Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) said that "every time (Northern Affairs Minister) Art Laing comes back from the east, for lack of something to say, he shouts 'let's have a corridor.'

"Well I don't go along with that," Mr. Calder told the legislature.

"I am an advocate of the Stewart-Cassiar Highway and Stewart (most northern community on the B.C. coast) could be our corridor when it is built. It has a fine harbor and only needs the road."

WON'T SHARE COST

He said Premier Bennett deserved praise for deciding to complete the Stewart-Cassiar Highway by 1967 despite Ottawa's refusal to share costs of a $15 million final leg.

"You put a corridor through southeastern Alaska and you're going to practically kill the highway."

Mr. Calder, an Indian, also took issue with Mr. Laing on Indian policy.

"Laing says he doesn't want to get rid of reservations, well I'm one boy who does.

"He says keep them—he's just so doggone many years behind the times."

Mr. Calder also said he strongly favored transfer of Indian affairs from the federal government to the B.C. government.

"In all the other provinces they (Indians) may not agree with this because its a binding clause in the treaties they signed but we have no treaty Indians in this province," he said.

"The constitution doesn't provide for segregation yet we are treated separately in this province . . . give us (Indians) the same treatment in this province as everyone else."

Mr. Calder urged the cabinet at the next federal-provincial conference to demand jurisdiction over B.C. Indians from the federal government.

"I have been criticized by some of our own Indian leaders for advocating such a bold step.

"But one day that is exactly what is going to happen so let's be bold and set this up. Try it. If it doesn't succeed, rub it out and try something else.

"But I am certain that if we take this action, we won't go wrong."

Former, Globe Mail Publisher Dies

TORONTO (CP) — Harry G. Kimber, former president and publisher of The Globe and Mail and active in the Canadian newspaper industry for more than 40 years, died today after a long illness. He was 73.

He was appointed president and publisher of The Globe and Mail in 1952

'Another Shot Needed Now To Change Act'

Redistribution of provincial constituencies would only be half a reform if the Elections Act is not amended to make it easier for persons to be registered as voters, the legislature was told Thursday.

Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) said he sympathized with other northern MLAs' complaints that the proposed new ridings would be too large for one man to represent, but said "I'm one who may just accept the boundaries as they are set forth" by the royal commission report.

"But the question of redistribution is just half the story," he said, speaking across to Premier Bennett. "If you're going to give one needle in the redistribution seats then you've got to give another shot in the seat of the Elections Act."

SEVEN-DAY DEADLINE

Mr. Calder noted that the present act puts a seven-day deadline on registration of voters in rural ridings.

"It is absolutely impossible in Atlin and other ridings to register the people in seven days."

WILL STAND ALONE

Mr. Calder also dissociated himself from other NDP members—including leader Robert Strachan—who accused the government of trying to stall demands for government auto insurance by setting up a royal commission study.

"I contradict anyone on this side of the house that argues putting this to a commission means waiting two or three years," he said. "I don't believe that."

Sooke-Jordan Road Breaking Up

Highways Minister Philip Gaglardi was criticized by one of his own backbenchers in the legislature Thursday.

Herb Bruch (SC—Esquimalt) complained that the Sooke-Jordan River Road is breaking up.

"The minister said at the last session that he would repave this road but unfortunately this has not been done," he said.

"I would urge the minister to let a contract so surfacing can get underway eraly this spring."

Mr. Bruch also said reconstruction of several roads in the Happy Valley and Cobble Hill areas is needed.

The Social Credit caucus chairman said he was pleased to see the B.C. Medical Plan being well received in this area despite some early difficulties which he did not detail.

"I'm glad to see the people who were in a financial squeeze before coming into the plan now," he said. "It was unfortunate that there were some initial troubles."

Smooth talk will never make a whisky mellow.

Extra charcoal filtering will. That's why every drop of Gooderham's Brown Jug is filtered through layer after layer of hard maple charcoal. It's a slow process, but we're in no hurry. In fact when it's finished, we take the time to do it all over again. Just to make sure Brown Jug is perfectly polished. Remember that when someone tries to smooth-talk you into buying another brand of whisky. The charcoal filtering story is printed on the back of every bottle of Gooderham's Brown Jug. Why don't you pick one up and read it sometime?

Gooderham's have been distilling fine whiskies since 1832.

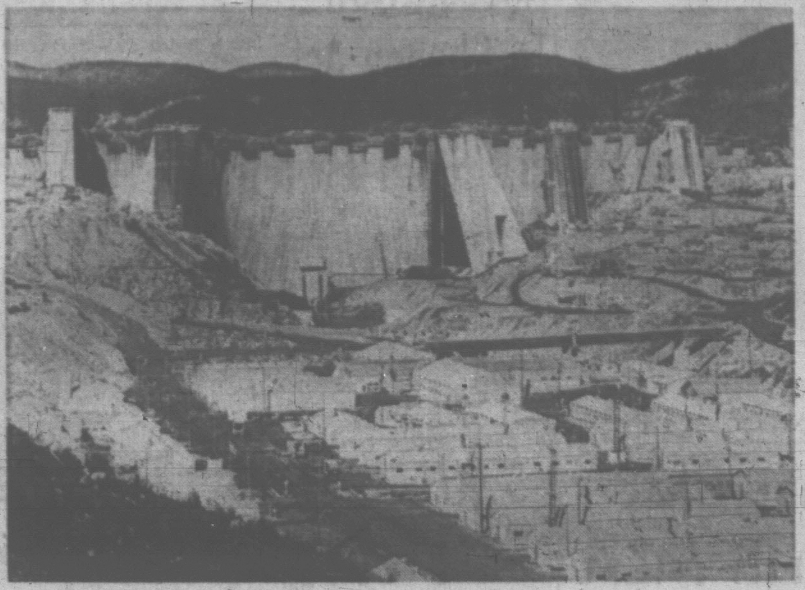
Manicouagan: A Symbol of the 'New Quebec'

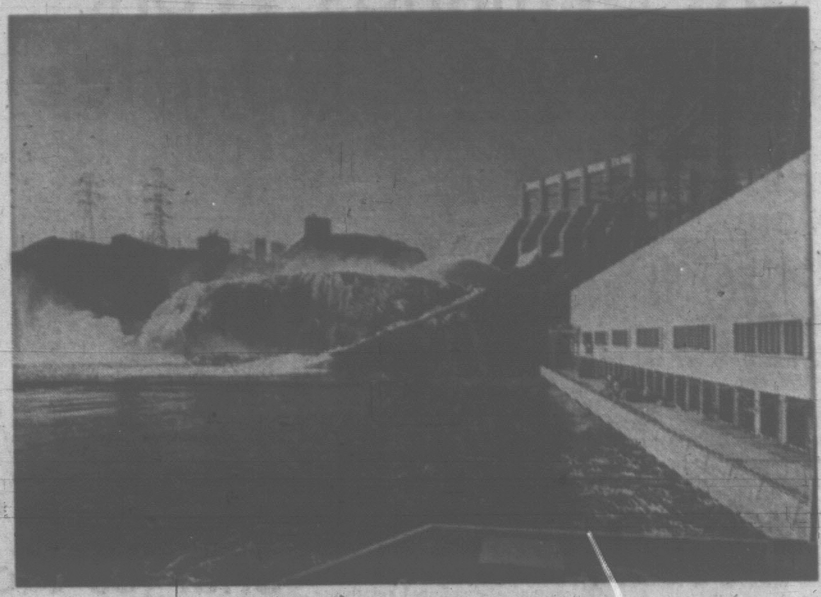
$2 Billion Project Bringing Industry

(Like British Columbia, the province of Quebec is engaged in a mighty development of its hydro-electric resources, seeing in them the hope for a more prosperous future through the wealth which is created by power. Here the Times Quebec correspondent describes the huge Manicouagan-Outardes project which dwarfs even the Peace River development in this province.)

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Quebec Correspondent



Central Arch at Manicouagan Five



Manicouagan Two Now in Operation

McDowell

Some of those "acres of snow" that Voltaire scoffed at in the days of old New France have turned out to be among the greatest assets of modern Quebec.

The snow falls 13 feet deep in an average winter on the wild land that is the watershed of the Manicouagan River.

The river, flowing south from Lake Manicouagan into the St. Lawrence near Baie Comeau, 250 miles east of Quebec City, drains 17,600 square miles. The spring runoff, from that depth of snow over that area, is enough to set the water gushing at 200,000 cubic feet per second through the river mouth.

But no more spring torrents will go raging down the 250-mile course (with 1,900 feet of fall) of the Manicouagan. The old watercourse itself is desappearing, swamped by its own waters, as a series of dams turns the river into a chain of colossal reservoirs, and one of the greatest sources of hydro-electric power for Quebec's growing industry.

When installations at four power sites on the Manicouagan, and three sites on its sister river the Outardes, are completed by 1973 at a cost of over $2 billion, the Manicouagan-Outardes development will be capable of pouring 5,504,000 kilowatts into Hydro-Quebec's power grid.

But Manicouagan is much more than a great addition to a public utility. It has become a symbol of the new Quebec.

To many people in French-Canada the development is a spectacular answer to the old myth that French Canadians make great painters and poets but are no world-beaters at practical matters like engineering and industry.

New Industry

The fact is that the harnessing of the Manicouagan and Outardes rivers is contributing mightily to the growth of Quebec as an industrial society.

Its development has brought in new industries, from the United States and Europe, to supply components and materials for power plants and transmission lines and has stimulated the expansion of industries that were already in the province.

Its promise, of plentiful electric power, has been one of the key factors in the establishment of 2,835 new industrial plants in Quebec in the last five years.

With striking timing, a few weeks after the first power began flowing from Manic 2, Hydro-Quebec's single largest customer, Quebec Iron and Titanium Corporation at Sorel, announced a $13.5 million expansion

The heart of that expansion is a new electric furnace that is half again as large as any now in operation.

The project, moreover, commits the province to an all-out effort to develop its industry.

Electric power cannot be stored. A power plant that is ready before it is needed is an investment that pays no return. To make Manicouagan pay, the demand for power must keep pace with its ability to produce power.

Although Manicouagan is one of the glowing names of the "quiet revolution," and rated proud mention in the recent speech from the throne of the Lesage government, the first serious work toward its development began in the late 1950s, the last years of the Duplessis era.

Started in 1962

But it was in 1962 that construction began on the main dam, largest of its kind in the world. And that was the year that Rene Levesque, then minister of hydraulic resources, waged his high-voltage campaign for the nationalization of the privately-owned electric power companies and made hydro power one of the symbols of the French-Canadian renaissance.

From then on "Manic" was more that just a great engineering undertaking, although on that score alone it is impressive enough.

The heart of the whole Manicouagan development is the immense, multiple-arch butressed dam at the site called Manic 5, some 125 miles upstream from the river mouth. It will control the flow of the river to provide a constant source of power at all generating stations the year round.

Everything about the Manic 5 dam is on a Paul Bunyan scale. It is being built in 14 arches, the central one 703 feet high and 530 feet between butresses. The whole dam, its arches striding 4,310 feet across the valley like a cross-section of some strange and immense cathedral, is almost 83 feet thick at the base of the central arch, and will carry a 17-foot roadway across its top.

The batching plant used in its construction turns out 320 cubic yards of concrete an hour. It will have mixed 2,900,000 cubic yards when the dam is finished.

Behind the dam the waters are already backing up into a reservoir that will contain 115,00,000 acre feet — that's 5,000 billions of cubic feet — and cover 800 square miles.

Because it will take eight years to build up such a volume, impounding of water began in 1964 and continues as the dam is built, with the water rising 50 feet below the crest of the dam.

This reservoir will provide a head of 505 feet to the Manic-5 power plant: eight 225,00-horsepower turbines, each driving a 168,000-kilowatt generator.

The plant's total installed capacity of 1,344,000 kilowatts is to be completed in 1971. First power will start flowing from Manic 5 in 1968.

Water from the tail-race at Manic 5 will enter a second reservoir, created by the dam at Manic 3, about 50 miles above the river mouth.

There will be no Manic 4 plant. The waterfall at the site that was named Manic 4, between Manic 3 and Manic 5, will be submerged by the 315 billion cubic feet of water backing up from the Manic 3 dam to the Manic 5 tail-race.

Seven Turbines

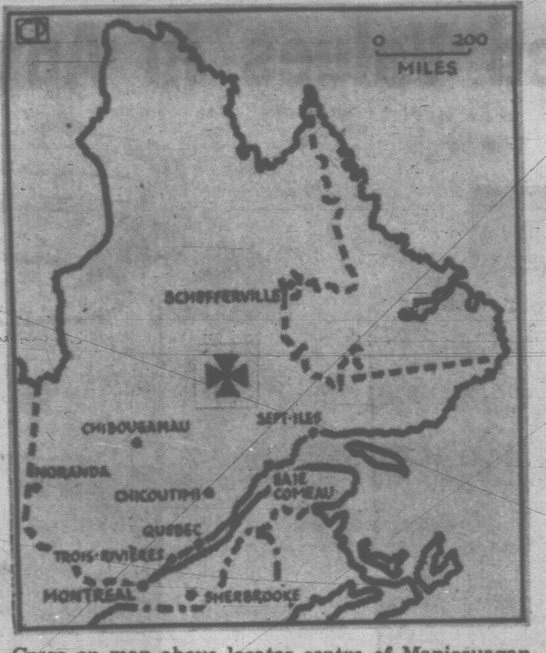
The head of water at Manic 3, boosted by adding the drop of the old falls at Manic 4, will be 310 feet. It will be used to drive seven 210,00-horsepower turbines turning seven 160, 430-kilowatt generators.

The Manic 2 plant, fed by water from a 344,000 acre-foot headpond behind a 300-foot dam, is already in partial operation.

Late in 1965 five of it eight 126,900-kilowatt generators began driving out electric power across the province to Montreal on a 735-kilovolt power line, the highest power-line voltage in the world. All eight generators are to be at work by 1967.

Flowing on down from Manic 2 the river has one more round of work to be done before its fresh waters merge with St. Lawrence salt.

At First Falls, near the river mouth, there is the McCormick generating station, operated by the Manicouagan Power Company, a subsidiary of Quebec North Shore Paper.



Cross on map above locates centre of Manicouagan-Outardes project in the heart of Quebec's wilderness, 250 miles north of Quebec City.

Power Added

The McCormick plant turned out 191,250 kilowatts up until 1965. Last year two additional 60,000-kilowatt generators started turning.

They were installed by the company at the request of Hydro-Quebec, to make use of the increase in available water resulting from control of the river's flow by the Manic 5 dam.

Hydro-Quebec will have its own plant as well at First Falls. This Manic 1 station, operating under the same 124-foot head of water as the older plant, will develop 180,000 kilowatts. The first of its three generators is to start this year.

A third of the total power of the Manicouagan-Outardes development will come from three power sites on the Outardes.

The Outardes, which falls 1,800 feet over a 350-mile course roughly parallel to the Manicouagan, drains a 7,258-square-mile watershed and empties into the St. Lawrence some 15 miles west of the Manicouagan's mouth.

The control dam on the Outardes will be at Outardes 4, some 58 miles above Outardes Falls and 65 miles above the mouth.

The main dam, 380 feet high, will be supported by seven other dams that will cut off open valleys to enclose 860 billion cubic feet of water in a new lake that covers 252 square miles.

Thus controlled, the water can be released in a steady flow of 12,500 cubic feet per second to drive generators turning out 632,00 kilowatts.

Two Sites

This controlled flow will also make it possible to develop 760,000 and 632,000 kilowatts at two sites further downstream, the last of them at Outardes Falls, where a small plant has been operating since 1937, supplying power to Baie Comeau pulp mills.

First power from the new Outardes developments is expected in 1968 and full output from all of them by 1969.

One of the side effects of the Manicouagan-Outardes development has been the construction in Quebec of the highest-voltage power line in the world.

Because the greatest part of the demand for power in the province continues to be in the Montreal region, 400 miles away, the problem of current loss in transmission over such a distance was serious.

Engineers had the choice of installing the conductors of enormous size that would have been needed to carry the immense wattage turned out by Manicouagan-Outardes, or to take on the technical challenge of a higher voltage than had ever been turned onto a transmission line.

Stepped Up

Their decision was to step the power up to 735 kilovolts. The first of three lines went into use last fall when power was turned on at Manic 2.

Demand for electric power doubles, in Canada, every 10 years. Hydro-Quebec is already looking into the potential of rivers flowing into James Bay and other northern waters to meet the future demand.

The corporation's view is that eventually all the rivers will have been exploited and they will have to turn to large-scale use of nuclear power generation.

But for the present, nuclear power would be extremely costly, in comparison with hydro power.

Provinces, like Quebec and British Columbia; with a wealth of rivers to develop, can afford to wait until nuclear generating stations are a better buy.

Britain's Churches Losing Their Grip

By CECIL NORTHCOTT

More than seven million people are missing from the registers of the Church of England according to the latest statistics. These are people who in their teen-age years were "confirmed" in membership of the church but later neglected to go to church at least once a year.

The figures show that each year the church "confirms" over nine million young people but loses seven million of them. The key statistic is the total number of people who make their Easter Communion. This has dropped to 2,300,000 a year.

One of the prime reasons for this serious fall is the shortage of parochial clergy which has fallen over the last decade from 15,000 to 11,000. The clergy also are ageing, the present average being 53 which is considered to be too old for active work among young people.

An even more serious situation in the religious life of England is revealed by the figures for baptisms. These amount to 27 million but when it comes to regular church attendance and support of the church these baptised millions produce only just over two millions of faithful church people.

Ten thousand members a year are likely to be lost by the Methodist Church in England if the present decline goes on. What was the fastest growing church in England in the 19th century has now become the church that will lose 100,000 members by 1975 according to a survey made by the Methodist Home Missions department just issued.

Social Change

Dr. Leslie Davidson, commenting on the situation, says the decline is partly due to changed social conditions in England. Methodism used to appeal to the lower middle and upper working classes but those class distinctions are now becoming middle class where the Methodist evangelical appeal is weakest.

Total membership of the Methodist Church is now 700,000. In 1933 it was 856,000. During this period the population of England has increased by 500,000 a year, but Methodism has failed to keep up with the increase in population.

Driver Suspension Proposal Could Touch Off Big Rumpus

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Mika

Well, the political war is joined again but the troops still seem to be ambling towards the front rather than sallying out of their seats for tongue-to-tongue combat.

By comparison with other campaigns, the opening days of the current legislative session were strangely quiet.

Even the opposition leaders' traditional counter-attack against the government's throne speech seemed to be a remote business, like a set-piece artillery barrage fired to a predetermined pattern which was endured by the targets with relatively little screaming.

Perhaps all the members are too pre-occupied with the question of redistribution which undoubtedly will be terrible for some. Exactly which ones won't be known until the government makes up its mind on the Angus Commission's report.

This is not to say the fuses of controversy have not been lit—just that they're slow burning.

A big rumpus, outside if not inside the legislature, could be touched off over the "roadside suspensions" proposal.

Almost 10 years ago I sat in a press gallery when Saskatchewan's provincial treasurer, Clarence M. Fines, introduced this country's first legislation permitting an agent of the state to suspend a driver's licence on the basis of a Breathalyzer test and it started a long and bitter argument that spilled out of that legislature and into almost every living room, street corner and beer parlor.

This week, I listened to Attorney-General Robert Bonner give a rough outline of how B.C. proposed to become the second province to venture in this direction.

Mr. Bonner's proposal is not quite as bold as Fine's plan and therefore it is not likely to be as controversial—still, a decade has not hushed my memory of the violent din that arose not only in Saskatchewan but across the country, particularly among lawyers, to greet the Saskatchewan bill.

There probably will be some echoes of the same basic arguments for and against the B.C. plan in the weeks ahead so here's what to expect.

The Saskatchewan legislation was aimed at virtually compelling—through the threat of a licence suspension or cancellation—a driver to take a blood-alcohol test which could be used as evidence against him in a court case or justification for a licence suspension by bureaucratic order.

This, of course, raised the cry of infringement of civil liberty and a back-door effort to circumvent the principle that no one should be compelled or intimidated into incriminating himself in respect of a criminal charge.

But the nub of the argument soon was revealed as a political issue, in the broadest sense.

This revolved around the nature of a subject's use of the Queen's highway.

If this was an unqualified right many contended, then officialdom clearly had no business interfering with a driver's credentials to use that road before he was convicted of any offence.

The counter-argument ran that free use of the highway was available only in the sense that the subject's person could not be barred from it—that is to say, he could walk on it.

But bringing a motor vehicle, wagon, bicycle or what-have-you onto that same road was a conditional privilege and the best proof of this was the fact that both cars and drivers had to be licensed in the first place. And submission to blood tests was just another condition.

All the arguments that began about the accident statistics, the demon rum and other aspects of the question usually wound up with the antagonists divided only by their attitude to this one point: Is driving a car a right or a privilege?

Soviets Set For Chinese Showdown

By LAJOS LEDERER

LONDON — Delegates from 79 out of the world's 81 Communist parties — the two absentees will be China and Albania — are due to meet in conference soon with the object of revitalising and reuniting the movement, so long at odds and at cross-purposes.

Place and date have not yet been announced, but it is clear that high on the agenda will be a proposal, certain to be carried, to excommunicate China and her ally, little Albania.

The calling of the conference is a triumph for Soviet leaders Brezhnev and Kosygin; they have succeeded where Khrushchev failed. It has taken months of patient consultation betweeen the two Russians and the leaders of the major Communist parties — with the exception of China and Albania — to hammer out differences and to reach agreement on all issues, issues which had divided the Communist camp since Peking publicly denounced Moscow two years ago.

As a result of policy changes by Mr. Khrushchev's successors, which eased relations with their East European allies and made important concessions to other Communist parties, the long decline of Moscow's authority in the world Communist movement has come to an end.

INDIAN PEOPLE WILL BE PAID . . . . . . NATIVE MLA TELLS LEGISLATURE

'I Congratulate You on 100th Birthday, But . . .'

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Choking with emotion, British Columbia's only Indian MLA Thursday predicted that the white man will never get away with his land grab—that the account will be paid in full some day.

"I'm going to predict in this Centennial year that some day we're going to be paid for the land in this province," said Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin).

"I tell you—whether you believe it now or not — that one day a government will sit on that side of the fence and it's going to damn well pay for the province of British Columbia," he said waving at the government benches.

FRANK CALDER
. . . they listened

INTENSE DELIVERY

Mr. Calder, visibly struggling with himself to keep his control, punched the air with his finger and slapped his desk to emphasize his points many times. He repeated himself over and over to underline his message.

An intent silence settled on both sides of the house during his remarks about the land question.

Mr. Calder said he wanted to congratulate the province on the current centennial celebrating the union of the colonies of Vancouver Island and B.C. mainland.

"As a member of the people who witnessed — I hate to say the word — the advent of the white man, I congratulate you on this 100th birthday of the province," he began.

"In that 100 years my people have had a rough go of it, but there have been some of our goals achieved and I'm sure that in the next 100 years, through good, constructive negotiations there will be more.

NOT LONG TIME

"Being here 100 years may seem like a long time for some people but for my people, who were here first, it is not a long time."

Applause from all sides, the only interruption to his remarks, greeted his statement:

"Some of our achievements in the past 100 years are the vote and the fact that I am standing here and I predict that in the next 100 there will be more of my people sitting in this house."

Mr. Calder said he conscientiously tried to speak for all his constituents but occasionally, because he was Indian, he had to give voice to Indian causes.

"We are gaining many legislative goals — but we have one thing in this province which is foremost in the minds of the Indians and that is known as the British Columbia land question."

Mr. Calder noted that the question was part of the Supreme Court case involved in the recent series of actions dealing with the question of Indian hunting and fishing rights outside of game regulations.

He said he did not want to discuss the case or the issue except to remind everyone again that British Columbia is the only province in which there has not been a treaty signed by the Indians.

NO SETTLEMENT

"There has been no settlement as far as the land is concerned — no treaty and no payment.

"In this Centennial year, if the premier doesn't see fit to recognize the rights of the Indians to a settlement, then I'm telling you that one day — even after all of us here are gone — there is going to be a settlement.

"It is going to be settled — it is going to be settled. You may not believe it now, but I tell you it is going to be settled."

First waving at the Socred benches, then at the NDP benches, he continued with emotion:

"If not by this government . . . if not by that government . . . I still say to you — it is going to be settled some day'

"This is the only place in the world where the people have not been paid for their land — we've never been paid for it!

"But one day we are going to be paid for this province."

Protect Consumer, Curb Sharp Dealers NDPer Urges House

The legislature was urged Thursday to get tough with shoddy goods and sharp dealers by enacting consumer protection laws.

Tony Gargrave (NDP—Mackenzie) suggested a publicly-supported consumers' council, controls on pedlars, an interest rate disclosure act, revision of conditional sales legislation, subsidized consumer report organizations and Better Business Bureau, and safety certification of used cars.

Stressing the need for quality in daily life, Mr. Gargrave said it is important that the consumer be protected "and informed to enable him to avoid faudulent practices and make wise selections in the market place so that businessmen and consumers may benefit.

"Shoddy goods and sharp dealers should be driven from the market place so that men can improve quality of their goods and services, the person of small means stretch his income and the busy man of affluence obtain good quality," he said.

Common law's rule, "let the buyer beware," is not broad enough to cover business dealings in one of the world's most affluent societies, Mr. Gargrave said.

Quality, not quantity, should be the aim of the market place.

He said a small minority of high-pressure door-to-door salesmen "should be swept aside."

A short contract cooling-off period to allow for cancellation of contracts should be allowed.

Off-premises salesmen should be licensed centrally; bonds should be required, and false advertising should mean offence in law.

A prospective buyer should be helped to decide whether to pay cash, obtain credit or wait and not purchase, which could be done through an interest rate disclosure act, he said.

The cash price of goods, total lump sum cost of carrying charges and rate of simple interest per year should be outlined, the speaker said.

Conditional sales legislation should be standardized, as with insurance policies, he argued.

When a contract is terminated early, the buyer should get an interest rebate, and when a certain percentage has been paid off, the chattel should not be repossessed. He cited several British practices which he found commendable.

Mr. Gargrave said existing legislation needs to be more aggressively applied through police to deal with faudulent pedlars and confidence men.

There should be insistence on accurate, informative package labelling, so that a housewife need not compare grams with ounces to decide whether the "giant economy size" really costs less, he said.

MLA Opposes Free Tuition For Students

Free university education was opposed Thursday by Herb Bruch (SC—Esquimalt).

He said university graduates make much more money in a lifetime than other workers "and the university students should have the responsibility to take this into account when they advocate free education."

Mr. Bruch said if undergraduates were to be given grants to cover tuition on the ground that they enrich the country later, "then are we going to say to the young man who wants to go into logging that he can have so many acres of crown forest for free?

"After all, he will be creating wealth and jobs too, yet that's the argument these professions use for university fees." he said.

SKI TRIP

Mr. Bruch also said he heard of some undergraduates working as security guards at a mainland dock area during their vacation who left four freighters at anchor unable to offload cargoes "because the security guards had gone off on a six-day ski trip."

"You can't have the parents of children who can't afford a university education or a six-day ski trip to pay the shot for a free education for university students," he said.

Mr. Bruch had some harsh words for vocational students too.

"In some of the machine shops, it's almost intolerable when a young man comes in with a diploma and thinks he knows it all," he said.

He said the education department should obtain closer cooperation from industry to inject more practical teaching into vocational school and apprenticeship programs to balance the theoretical training.

BEER PARLORS

'Pour It Down Your Throat Plan'

Any British Columbian disgusted with American commercialism should take a hard look at his own beer parlors, Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) told the legislature Thursday.

He said the sight should convert everyone to his view that legislation should be enacted to eliminate beer parlors and allow grocery stores to sell beer.

"I watch these people who sling beer," he said. "They have a trayful ready right there so you don't even get a chance to ask for a glass—it's a sort of 'pour it down your throat' plan.

COMMERCIALISM

"I've heard about commercialism in the United States but at least they don't pour it down your throat. When you go into a bar there, they wait for you to order before they bring anything."

He said people want the liquor act amended — particularly in outlying areas where liquor stores are rare—"not so we can drink more but so that we can be moderate drinkers, buy a few cans at the grocery store and take them home to drink."

Stop Moonlighting

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—The man who wrote the lyrics for the Bossa Nova hit, The Girl from Ipanema, has been told by his superiors at the foreign ministry to quit moonlighting. Vinicius de Morais, 53, a consul who also is a poet and journalist, was ordered to stop making public appearances under a rule that prohibits Brazilian diplomats from outside activities.

Dutch Donate Bell Instrument To B.C. Museum

A 37-bell carillon worth between $25,000 and $30,000 will be installed in the Centennial museum-archives now under construction beside the Legislative Buildings.

The instrument will be donated by the Dutch community of the province as a centennial gift, B.C. centennial chairman L. J. Wallace said Thursday.

L. R. Doorman, Vancouver, chairman of the Netherlands Community Centennial Committee, explained reasons for the choice in a letter to Dutch residents in the province.

"By presenting this gift your committee has thought this would express the feelings of all Dutch people in B.C. and show our gratitude toward Canada for everything we have received."

Industrial Harmony Aim of New Committee

A labor-management committee to promote industrial harmony in the province will be formed, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson announced in the Legislature Thursday.

Mr. Peterson made no mention of the fact but the committee had an additional significance because it placed one of the labor movement's "black sheep" in a joint committee for the first time.

'PROMINENT ROLE'

He is E. M. Lawson, president of the Teamster's Joint Council No. 36, who criticized the proposed general strike last fall and played a prominent role in fashioning the settlement formula of the oil industry dispute which prevented the B.C.-wide strike.

The significant factor is the the Teamsters were drummed out of the Canadian Labor Congress and B.C. Federation of Labor and still are considered beyond the pale by most unionists.

GOODWILL

The committee, headed by deputy labor minister William Sands, will also include the fiery secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, Pat O'Neal, who helped fashion the general strike ultimatum.

"Needless to say, a great amount of goodwill will be required if this new project is to be successful," said Mr. Peterson.

"The new committee will be asked to accept a much greater responsibility and undertake duties which will be much wider in scope than those performed by the Conference Planning Committee.

"I believe it is reasonable to expect representatives of labor and management to consider more controversial matters than has been the case in the past."

Mr. Peterson said although the exact functions of the committee have not been clearly defined one of its first jobs would be to examine the findings of Dr. J. T. Montague, director of the Institute of Industrial Relations at the University of B.C., who has been appointed to make a study of the manpower needs of the province.

Dr. Montague is named as vice-chairman of the new committee.

Other members are: John Billings, president of Forest Industrial Relation Ltd.; R. K. Gervin, secretary-manager of the B.C. Federation of Construction Associations; F. Fieber, secretary-treasurer, Western Canadian Regional Council No. 1, International Woodworkers of America; R. S. Wilson, works manager, Vancouver Plant, Aluminum Company of Canada.

J. R. St. Eloi, president, Vancouver, New Westminster and District Building Construction Trades Council; D. R. Blair, president, Pulp and Paper, Industrial Relations Bureau; S. G. Green, Canadian vice-president, International Brotherhood of Pulp and Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers Union; C. H. Mitchell, secretary, Mining Association of B.C.

VICTORIA, B.C., FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1966—PAGE 17

Arthur Mayse

A pride of profs has been roaring thunderously from the University of Victoria escarpments in recent weeks, and down here on the veldt where the taxpayers frolic, I have been listening perk-eared to the refrain.

The voice that most interests me belongs to English department lecturer Joseph Schwartz, a clever, able and challenging emigre from California jungles.

Mr. Schwartz' message has to do with intellectual ferment. He finds this to be in short supply at Uvic, and feels it can best be encouraged by severing the umbilical cord that unites the university with mama Victoria.

"The most healthy situation for a university is for it to be in a cold war with the community," he declared last week to Times education reporter Des Bill.

"That's why the great medieval universities were surrounded by walls. They needed them."

As for the community, Mr. Schwartz feels that it should content itself with leaving Uvic's money on the doorstep, then getting the heck out of the way.

★

These rumblings have caused a certain amount of panic at the water-hole.

The venerable wildebeest that crops Victoria's journalistic grasses alongside us has showed the whites of its eyes, flung its tail in air, and emitted a gaseous editorial in which it maintains the university should be "part and parcel" of the community that helps finance it.

Well, that's a chummy notion, but I for one won't buy it.

I don't think a university should be part and parcel of anything, and I suggest that if it becomes such, it loses its reason for existing.

While I don't fully agree with Mr. Schwartz — whose cold war concept impresses me as a paper dragon—I suggest that we should love Uvic, feed it, and otherwise leave it alone.

If we insist that it shave its beard, shine its shoes and come sit in the living room, we hinder it from doing for our young what we simply aren't geared to accomplish.

This is to de-louse them of their illusions, melt the baby fat from their intellects, and send them into the world as mentally capable men and women.

Personally, I think we need more speakers-out of instructor Schwartz' calibre.

If we acquire enough of them, and if their words are heeded, we may find that our sons and daughters are being educated rather than merely job-trained or kept from under our feet for a few years.

One delightful result will be that we'll have more thinkers and fewer fatheads in community affairs, public office, management and government.

★

Where I would cross a buttoned foil with Mr. Schwartz and his bristling associates is over their insistence that our (sorry . . . I mean their) university is short of intellectual ferment.

I think they over-state the case, as eager young men are inclined to do.

The clash of ideas in fortress Uvic is, in fact, so forthright that I venture into its precincts no oftener than need be. Among the husband-hunters and the time-servers are altogether too many young people who insist on making me stretch my wits.

They are fermenting intellectually all over the place, and I run into the same thing at home, where two Uvic students are ready to rattle my ribs with an argument any time I care to stick my neck out.

I like what's been happening to them in the necessarily closed world of the university.

We don't see very much of them, but when we do, they're stimulating company.

They have acquired the capacity to get excited over ideas as well as things.

Part of this, of course, is natural growth, but it does seem to me that the university which they are so fierce to defend is teaching them to think.

THERE'S MORE to this picture than meets the eye. Not too much more, as park workers Kurt Lampert (left) and Herman Abeling noticed this morning. The girl with the scintilating zebra look is pert Pamela Middleton, (36-24-36), 1092 Newport. The 18-year-old model ably demonstrates the art of looking hot while staying cool. In case anyone's interested in the suit, it's just arrived in local department stores. Designers say its the successor to the scandal suit—sort of more scandal, less suit.

Full Report Tuesday On Plumper Pollution

By JIM HUME

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health on Tuesday will hear a full report of the air pollution problem at Plumper Bay.

The health hazard, destined for elimination by Jan. 31, still exists but only because a specially designed wood-shaving processing machine isn't performing as it should.

Operators of the sawmill have informed the board of health that all sawdust from the mill is now being shipped to Port Angeles.

The manager of the mill has also informed the board that "some unforseen difficulties have arisen" with the operation of a British machine designed to process shavings and eliminate beehive burners.

An engineer from the factory where the machines are manufactured is expected to arrive in the city shortly.

"The procedure being used will in all probability be installed in many other lumber mills in this area," the manager wrote the board. "Beehive burners will then become a thing of the past."

The mill has been the cause of controversy for several years with residents of the surrounding district complaining of damage from sooty fly-ash.

Tuesday the health board will decide whether to wait for the British engineer to put the new equipment in proper working order or whether to take further action against the mill.

BENNETT PAYS 'BILL' OF $50,000 TO 'Y'

Premier W. A. C. Bennett paid his bill to the Y today.

When the premier officiated at the opening of the new Y building last year he promised an additional provincial grant of $50,000 towards the building fund.

A cheque was received today. The provincial contribution now totals $100,000.

New Truck Lane Being Surveyed

Provincial highways department is surveying a right-of-way for a third lane on the Thetis Park slope of the Trans-Canada Highway, an official said Thursday.

The survey is needed for estimating cost of a full-scale additional northbound lane for truck and slow traffic to replace the present makeshift surfaced shoulder between Thetis underpass and the limits of Thetis Park.

The survey is not connected to another completed some weeks ago which plotted the widening of the Trans-Canada Highway entrance to Victoria to four full lanes.

The official said cost estimates are still under preparation for the four-lane study of the stretch between the Thetis underpass and the highway junction with Douglas Street.

LOGGER 'POOR'

A young Colwood logger, pinned by a falling tree Thursday, is in poor condition in St. Joseph's Hospital.

It was some time before workmates found Eric Peterson, 24, 3098 Paisley, after the accident near Sooke.

The two-foot thick tree was lying across his body.

A faller for Butler Bros., Peterson suffered back, facial and internal injuries.

'CRITICAL SHORTAGE OF TYPE B'

Donors with type B negative blood are needed tonight at Red Cross House on Fort St. near Cook.

There is a critical shortage of this rare type at the B.C. blood bank. At least 75 pints are needed immediately.

Today is the last day of the February clinic. The clinic will be open from 6:30 to 9 p.m. for all donors.

A recent two-day clinic at the Universtiy of Victoria collected 757 pints of blood.

'MOST UNUSUAL PARTY'

Winnifred Martha Lamb, 551 Niagara had an unusual birthday party Jan. 9, but Magistrate William Ostler acquitted her of bootlegging.

He gave judgment today in central court dismissing a charge of keeping liquor for sale.

When police raided her home they found 17 mickeys of rye under a bedroom dresser and 12 cases of beer in a chesterfield storage compartment.

Other bottles of liquor were found throughout the home.

DELAYED PARTY

The woman testified at an earlier hearing the liquor was for a delayed birthday party.

She produced a birth certificate to show her birthday was Jan. 8.

She said several guests pooled $55 to buy the liquor.

"By ordinary standards it was a most unusual party," commented Magistrate Ostler.

'CURIOUS'

He noted the woman was not too familiar with some of her guests and the rye drinkers were in the kitchen and the beer drinkers in the living room.

He added it was "curious she bought mickeys instead of larger bottles."

He said the woman "may well be a bootlegger" but her explanation created a doubt great enough to warrant a dismissal.

DR. MAX'S ADVICE

Watched by Aliens? Better Believe It!

By DESMOND BILL

Saucer Sighted on Vancouver Island?

A group of women had coffee cups in their hands and flying saucers on their minds after a meeting Thursday night at the University of Victoria.

They were members of the Faculty Women's Club and they had just heard a talk by Dr. Max Edwards on unidentified flying objects.

Most of them seemed willing to concede after that it is at least possible this world has been visited by strangers from another planet.

But to Dr. Edwards, a linguist who reads 15 languages and has made a hobby out of studying UFO, there is no doubt about it.

"I run the risk of ridicule, I know. Some people think you are a nut. But I cannot believe otherwise after studying the evidence," he said.

★

To the Uvic professor, the evidence is "shattering and incontrovertible."

But when he first heard about flying saucers 15 years ago he scoffed at the idea.

Since then, he said, he has studied the matter in great detail both personally and by keeping up with the literature on the subject.

He told the Faculty Club what he has found out.

The best study on the subject is by a French physicist, Aime Michel. He plotted all the sightings of UFO over a number of years and discovered they followed a pattern.

Michel noted that most sightings occurred along two straight lines that circled the earth and intersected one another at about 50-degree angles.

On the basis of his theory, Michel predicted where future spottings would be reported and in the course of time his predictions were verified.

Another expert on the subject is Professor H. Oberth, a one-time German rocket scientist who worked for the U.S. government's space program for 10 years.

★

Oberth stated recently, "One must regard as real a phenomenon that has been definitely confirmed by 8,000 reports of sightings and landings and partially confirmed by at least 50,000 other reports."

Dr. Edwards also quoted the late General George C. Marshall, former U.S. defence secretary, as saying, "My government is aware we are being watched by alien beings who are trying to work out a way to breathe our atmosphere."

Dr. Edwards cited numerous examples of how descriptions of the sightings in widely different places and areas coincided. He gave examples of incidents involving hundreds of persons who confirmed strange events involving UFO.

He outlined the history of sightings, which in modern times started in 1891, although there are about 300 reports "back in time" of occurrences which could have been UFO. Dr. Edwards said the reports stopped almost entirely between 1916 and 1947 showing they did not result from a war psychosis or the influence of science-fiction comics.

He said too that when the reports began again in 1947 in North America the descriptions of what happened were exactly similar to reports in New Zealand in 1909.

Dr. Edwards said photographs have been made of UFO and of the burning that results when they land. He said plaster casts have been made of the footprints of the creatures that emerged from the crafts that landed.

The landings have taken place even on Vancouver Island, he said.

Dr. Edwards named a farmer near Mount Newton who in February last year saw a flying saucer land in one of his fields.

★

"He called the newspapers, the police and the airport and got laughed at for his trouble. But later he got a friend and they tested the ground with a geiger counter and found it was radioactive."

And one woman asked him, "What would you do if you actually saw one land?"

He replied, "I'd be scared stiff. I'd run away and watch from a safe distance."

PUNCHED OFFICER

Reckless Driver Jailed

A youth who drove recklessly around city streets and then punched a police officer was sentenced in central court today to eight months imprisonment.

Richard M. C. Jancowski, Albany Hotel, pleaded guilty Saturday to criminal negligence and assaulting police officer Brian Hayes Friday night.

He also received suspended sentences for being a minor without insurance and driving as a learner without an adult licence holder beside him.

PSYCHIATRIC PROBLEM

Counsel Digby Kier asked he not be sent to jail as the youth had a psychiatric problem but Magistrate J. A. Byers disagreed.

"Knowing something about your upbringing, your previous behavior and your difficulties, I would be the first to hesitate to send you to a penal institution," he told Jancowski.

ESCAPED CUSTODY

But he ordered the youth returned to the young offenders' unit because of previous convictions for theft and escaping custody.

Friday night Jancowski was chased by a police vehicle three times around Douglas, Discovery Government and Bay streets at speeds over 60 mph.

SPARK BEHIND last year's Dorion inquiry will speak tonight at 8 at Mount View High School on Carey Road. Yukon Conservative MP Erik Nielsen is sharp critic of Liberal government.

Driver In 'Shocking' State

Two motorists were fined and another two were remanded for sentence when they pleaded guilty in central court today to impaired driving.

James V. Slavin, 1701 Midgard, was fined $400 after court was told his blood contained .33 per cent alcohol.

Slavin was involved in a rear-end collision Thursday evening on Bay near Cook Street.

"You realize the shocking condition you were in, do you?" asked Magistrate William Ostler.

Steven Panchuk, 1256 Yates, was fined $300. He was involved in a head-on collision in the 800 block, Quadra Street, Sunday.

John David Humber, 18, of 2517 Graham, took money out of his wallet and tore it up, then ripped his shirt Tuesday night.

He had just collided with a fence when he tried to turn into a driveway on Richmond Road.

"You certainly ran the gamut of irrational conduct, didn't you?" said Magistrate Ostler remanding Humber to Feb. 15 for sentence.

Michael Nemec, 43, address unavailable, was remanded to Feb. 11 for sentence after he admitted impaired driving.

Historic B.C. Event Told in Diary

Dangerous Quest for River Gold

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A diary which throws new light on a gold rush which had Victorians wild with excitement in 1862 has been given to the Provincial Archives.

The diary of John Joseph Cowley, an English-born Victorian, deals with the search for gold along the Stikine River in Northern B.C.

The important find was discovered among the family papers of Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton of the B.C. Supreme Court, who turned it over to the archives.

●

"It's the only first-hand exciting event of the period," said archivist Willard Ireland. "For some time we have been looking for something like this."

The Stikine, which runs roughly halfway between Cassiar and Stewart high in the northwest, is one of the most treacherous rivers in the province. It is flanked by huge mountains, some more than 10,000 feet in height.

●

The B.C. government in 1964 listed the Stikine as a potential power site.

In 1861, a French-Canadian prospector, Alexander "Buck" Choquette, went up the river with some Indians and discovered gold in its sand-bars.

News of the discovery spread quickly and the following year 800 miners, mostly from Victoria, left for the Stikine territory in the hopes of making their fortunes.

Cowley's diary, which starts with his departure from London, and includes a stop-over in California, tells of his adventures in his search for gold.

The trip up the Stikine proved a back-breaking experience, frought with dangers. At one point they moved through a canyon where the waters tore at the mountains. So powerful was the current whole trees had been uprooted and were being tumbled down the river.

Cowley, like most of the miners, didn't do as well as he hoped.

●

He died in Victoria in 1909.

Lacking in the diary is Cowley's family background — which the archives would like to know because relatives in England may still have in their possession some of his letters which might give more historic information.

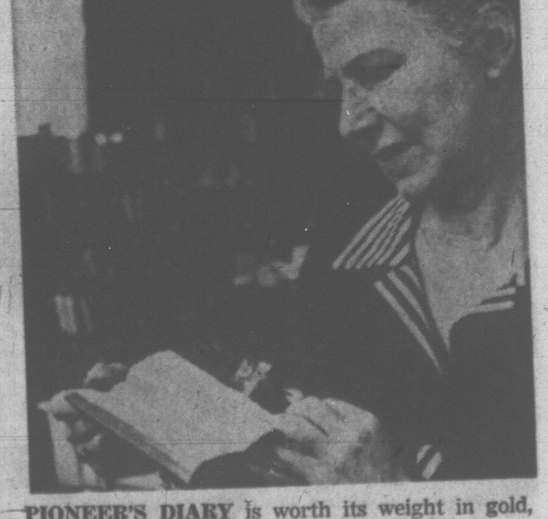
Mr. Justice Wootton recalls visits by Cowley to his home.

●

"I was only a young boy when he was living," he said. "I remember my parents saying he was a keen naturalist, a collector. He was also artistic."

He thinks Cowley may have come from Cornwall.

This is possible as a large number of the miners and prospectors in California, Nevada and Montana at the time were Cornish immigrants. Cowley may have meant to stay in California, but moved to B.C. when he heard of the gold discovery.



PIONEER'S DIARY is worth its weight in gold, says Miss Inez Mitchell, assistant archivist.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Pre-Dinner Panic? No More With These

By Penny Saver

Are you ever caught downtown in the five o'clock rush? It happens to all of us sooner or later. Nothing is more frustrating, especially if you have nothing planned for dinner. This means that when you get home, you must think of something to prepare, and have your dinner well under way by the time your family comes in. This is almost impossible. However, the impossible has to be achieved, as your family must be fed, and they are all going to be "as mad as hornets" if dinner isn't ready at the usual time.

On days like these, a freezer is a boon to the housewife. One item to have on hand in the case of an emergency is a package of beef steakettes. These little wonders are buttered, and all that you have to do is to fry or broil them. A bag of four steaks sells for 59 cents.

These must be prepared while still frozen, because they are made of very thin slices of beef, stacked to make one steak. If they are allowed to thaw, the slices begin to peel from the steak.

Meat pies are other items that should be stocked in your freezer. These just take about half an hour in a hot oven, and with hardly any effort at all dinner is ready. Chicken or beef pies, with tender vegetables and rich, brown gravy, are priced at 45 cents for the package of two pies.

In the line of frozen, complete dinners, try a chopped sirloin beef dinner. This contains hearty pieces of prime beef, French-fried potatoes, peas in a butter sauce, and a blueberry muffin for dessert. The complete dinner sells for 69 cents.

A quick dessert that's simple to prepare is sponge pudding. This is a self-saucing packaged mix. Different flavors, including apple, lemon, creamy chocolate, banana and caramel, sell for 29 cents. Delicious raisin pudding sells for 33 cents. For an added treat, add raisins to the other flavors. You need one-half cup of the fruit for each package.

Do you want to know where Penny found these quick dinner ideas? Give her a call at 382-3131.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

An Allergy or Eye Strain

Lowman

Q. I rub my eyes quite often because they itch. I am 15 and just started wearing mascara. It can't be the mascara because my eyes itched before I ever wore any. It can't be that I don't get enough sleep because school nights I get nine hours of sleep, and on weekends . . . more than that!

A. This could be due to a mild infection, eye strain or an allergy. See an eye doctor for his advice.

Q. I am the father of a six-month-old baby, and a two-year-old boy. The boy is the picture of me and we are very proud of him. If my daughter grows up to look like her mother, she will be a beautiful girl. However, it also appears that she will have her mother's legs. Her mother has had heavy legs since she was a young girl.

Is there any advice you can offer to prevent our daughter having the same shape legs? Are there any exercises she can do as a young girl to shape her legs for womanhood?

A. I do not think you can tell what shape legs a baby six months old will have when she grows up. They all look chubby and shapeless at that age. However, if you are right, there are several possibilities. If the heavy calves and thighs are due to bony structure and heavy muscles, exercise cannot help much. Weight distribution can also be inherited though. If the overly-large measurements are due to deposits of fat, exercise can improve the situation. Of course, if overweight is present, dieting will be in order.

Anyway you say she will be beautiful if she looks like her mother, and look what Mama got in the marriage lottery! So, don't worry too much.

Q. I have a very serious problem—my figure! I did weigh 142, but I reduced to 136. My bust measures 34, waist 27 and hips 42 inches. This hip measurement is a real problem and seems to get larger. What exercises should I take? I would also appreciate any exercises you have for round shoulders. Please send me exercises for these disasters.

You see, I have two lovely boys, ages one and two, and a wonderful, adorable husband. You can imagine how important it is for me to look my best. I wish I had been as determined a few months ago as I am now. MY MIND IS MADE UP!"

A. That's what it takes! This reader mentioned dieting so I judge that she is overweight and is counting calories. Do this exercise for round shoulders. Stand tall. Take the end of a wand or bath towel in each hand, behind your back. Hold on tightly as you raise your arms backwards-upward as far as you can, keeping the elbows straight. At the same time lower the head backward. Return arms and head to starting position and continue, slowly.

For the large hipline you should have more than one exercise. If you, or any of my readers would like to have my tested hip slimming exercises, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for these. Address Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Orchid corsages were worn by the honor guest, her mother and groom-elect's mother while white carnations en corsage were received by her grandmothers, Mrs. Alec Henderson and Mrs. Frank Quinn. Two of the bride-to-be's chosen bridesmaids, the Misses Sharon Henderson and Janice Kimmerly received white carnation corsages and the chosen flower girl, Kim Proceviat was presented with a headpiece of pink carnations.

Presiding at the refreshment table were Mrs. Alec Henderson, Mrs. Mahar, Mrs. Norman Pimlott and Mrs. Proceviat.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Oh, for Heaven's Sake

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: There are 365 days in the year, right? So will you please tell me why my sister had to pick the day of my wedding anniversary for her wedding date? Don't tell me she forgot, because she was my maid of honor and she knew perfectly well that that was my wedding date.

Now all of my future wedding anniversaries will have to be shared with her. That just burns me up!

BURNED UP.

DEAR BURNED: Even though you are burned up, don't make an ash of yourself by voicing your disapproval.

DEAR ABBY: About four years ago my sister-in-law gave us an old beat-up baby bed that she'd had in her basement for ten years. My husband sanded it down, painted it and fixed it up like new, and we used it until our baby was four years old. Then we traded it along with a lot of other odds and ends on a new set of bedroom furniture for the child's room. My sister-in-law heard about it and demanded that we get the baby bed back for her. (She had no use for it, she just wanted to start trouble.) Of course, by then it was too late. Well, she has a very big mouth, so she spread it all over the family and different ones took sides, and now there are lots of hard feelings. I admit I should have asked her before getting rid of it, but honestly, Abby, I had no idea she wanted it back. How can I patch up this mess? FAMILY ROW

DEAR FAMILY: Ask her how much she thinks the bed was worth, and insist that she take the cash. Even if it's expensive, it will shut her big mouth, and that's worth something.

DEAR ABBY: One of my best friends has a heart as big as this world. She knows what it is like to be forsaken, so she has been attempting to provide a home for forsaken animals. How can I tell her tactfully that she cannot keep a house full of cats? Abby, the odor is indescribable. She works, the house is closed all day, the smell comes through the walls. The odor clings to her clothing. Whew! I am afraid she will lose her job. These cats have not been "doctored" and they are producing more cats, which in turn produce still more cats; cats which have never seen the outdoors! Her kindness to these poor creatures is misplaced. Her nose must be numb. What can be done? HER FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Both the Department of Public Health and the SPCA should be called to investigate the living quarters of your friend. And a mental examination is very much in order for her. She has a "good" heart, but I fear the trouble is in her head, poor soul.

Problems? Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send one dollar to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., for Abby's booklet, "HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS."

TODAY'S RECIPE

ONION AND BEEF CASSEROLE

Four cups (1½ pounds) sliced onions, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 pound minced beef, 1 cup soft, stale bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon oregano, 1 can (10-ounce) condensed tomato soup, ⅓ cup water, ¼ cup buttered bread crumbs.

Saute onions in melted butter until transparent, about 10 minutes. Arrange half of the onions in bottom of a greased 6-cup casserole. Brown meat, then add bread crumbs, salt, pepper and oregano.

Spread meat mixture over onions and cover with remaining half of sauted onions.

Combine tomato soup and water. Pour over onions and bake in a 350-degree Farenheit oven until onions are almost tender, about 30 minutes.

Sprinkle top of casserole with buttered bread crumbs, return to oven and continue baking until onions are tender and crumbs browned, about 10 minutes longer. Makes four to five servings.

HONORS NEXT YEAR FOR MUSEUM MAN

Fannin's Name to Fore Again

The man who started the provincial museum and one of the founders of the Natural History Society of British Columbia will be honored in 1967.

Museum officials said today John Fannin, first curator of the government museum, will be commemorated when the new museum-archive buildings are completed in centennial year.

Fannin ranks high among outstanding British Columbians in the 19th century.

He was born in Kempville, Upper Canada (now Ontario), in 1837—the year of the rebellion—and grew up to be an authority on birds and animals.

He came west with the famous Overlanders, arriving in Kamloops in October, 1862. After trying his hand at mining in the Cariboo, he settled in New Westminster as a shoemaker for a few years.

He took an exploring trip up the Stikine River for the government between 1872 and 1875, later settling at Hastings on Burrard Inlet where he carried on taxidermy and the study of natural history.

In 1886 he was appointed curator of the government museum in process of being established in Victoria. His own collection of birds and animals became the nucleus of the museum, which was officially opened in 1887.

The museum then was located in a small room in the Administration Building of the old "Birdcages," formerly situated just behind the Legislative Buildings.

Later it was moved to its present quarters.

Fannin retired on Feb. 25, 1904, and died in June of that year. He was unmarried.

SOLUTION MONDAY

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Margaret Dudley Alford, age 11, of Charlottesville, Va., for her question:

How does Spanish moss hang from trees?

First, we learn that Spanish moss is not true to its name. It is not Spanish nor is it moss. It is a native plant of the West Indies and of tropical and semi-tropical America. It is a relative of the ground-hugging pineapple family and no kin to any of the true mosses.

After we have admired its green-grey tresses hanging from the boughs, we wonder how and why it fixes itself high in the tree tops. Perhaps it is a parasite that cannot make its own living and must feed upon nourishment from another plant. No, the Spanish moss is not a helpless parasite plant like the mistletoe. It takes no food from the tree on which it perches.

The strange, feather plant is classed as an epiphyte. It merely borrows a tree to get a place high in the air and the sunshine. Its seed begins by growing clamps that fix themselves securely into the rough bark of a trunk or branch. It does not, like the parasitic mistletoe, dig down roots to suck up sap from the tree, for the Spanish moss has no true roots.

Moss Not Harmful to Trees

When the strong little clamps are secure, the seed grows a long hairy stem that soon branches with fragile leaves. The plant grows longer, branches and re-branches and this feathery foliage is all that there is to it. It is dashed by rains and tossed by winds, but its basic clamps keep it fixed firmly to its lofty tree-house.

In order to make a living, a plant must be able to create sugar from air, water and sunlight. And to do this magic job, it must contain green chlorophyll. Spanish moss has chlorophyll in every stem and in every feathery leaf. High on its perch, it also has plenty of air and sunlight. All it needs is water. But unlike most plants, it has no roots to take water from the soil. However, the problem is solved by scaly little hairs all over its fine leaves and trailing stems. They trap moisture from the rain and the misty air like millions of miniature reservoirs. The airy epiphyte uses this moisture to make its own plant food.

Spanish moss does not harm a tree by stealing its juices, but sometimes it becomes so thick that its trailing festoons shut off air and sunlight. This may prevent a tree from making enough plant food for itself. The growth of some of its branches may be gnarled and stunted. The airy festoons do not kill the tree, but they do nothing to help it.

GUIDES TO HOLD SERVICE

A red-letter day for Victoria Girl Guides comes this month, when they hold a special service and flag dedication ceremony at Christ Church Cathedral.

To be held Feb. 27 at 2:30 p.m. the church parade and ceremony will wind up a week of Guide activities in the city, marking the worldwide Scout-Guide Thinking Week, Feb 20 to 27.

The international aspects of Guiding will be stressed during this time.

Youngsters from Guide companies throughout the area, who number 1,794, will take part in the parade and the interdenominational church service which follows.

Highlight will be the "laying up" of the flag, used for several years at local Guide headquarters, in the children's corner of the Cathedral.

A World Guide flag, dedicated in the cathedral six years ago, already rests in the Corner.

The church service and "laying up" ceremony will be followed by a tea in the Memorial Hall, 912 Vancouver.

YOUR HEALTH

Great Care Needed In Handling Food

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Many people fear food poisoning, and wonder how it comes about. There are some foods which are so poorly cooked or poorly refrigerated, or poorly handled—as to end up on a restaurant table containing disease-producing bacteria or some poisons produced by bacteria.

Among the most dangerous foods is hamburger—when it is not made from fresh meat which was kept very cold until it was ground, and after it was ground. It is dangerous when in summer it is made from scraps of meat that during the day were thrown into a basket. If not well refrigerated, such meat can harbor bad germs, which can cause a dysentery.

* * *

Another type of food which many a time has caused a number of people to be ill is the filling of custard pies and French pastries. When such a filling is made, it should immediately be put into a very cold refrigerator, in which it can be cooled quickly before bad germs can start growing in it. Occasionally, severe epidemics of food poisoning result when a woman who is carrying in her bowel and on her hands dangerous typhoid-like bacteria, one evening cooks a big dishpan full of macaroni or pudding which is to be used next day for a big church picnic.

If accidentally she gets some of her bad germs into the food, and then does not cool it quickly, these germs will reproduce so rapidly that by the next noon, everyone who eats the food will come down with an acute cholera-like disease which can cause much prostration. Fortunately, in most cases the people soon recover.

Sixty years ago when I was an intern, almost all patients operated on were kept in bed for at least two weeks. Today, many surgeons like to get the patients up and about in a few days. When, five years ago, I had a big abdominal operation, I was walking around the hospital on the third day.

Now I read an article by Dr. C. J. Bellis of Long Beach, California, who says that he has studied 5,903 patients who had their inguinal hernia (rupture) repaired under local anesthesia. They did not miss a meal, and they went back to work that afternoon! Practically all of the patients recovered well in spite of their getting out of bed so early.

* * *

I remember my surprise when one afternoon I dropped in at a hospital to see a friend of mine who that morning had his prostate gland "reamed out" through a tube that was passed down his urethra (the tube that carries urine from the bladder to the outside). I expected to find my friend groaning in bed, but I found him up and walking around his room dictating letters to his secretary, discussing business with his partner, and telephoning his broker in New York to buy certain stocks. He was none the worse for his early getting up.

BOSTON BAR (CP) — The Trans-Canada Highway through the Fraser Canyon was blocked Thursday night by a snowslide which highways department officials said would take about eight hours to clear.

A department spokesman said the slide covered the highway to a depth of 40 feet and was about 400 feet long.

WORST AIR DISASTER

133 Japanese Die In Crash

TOKYO (UPI)—An All Nippon Airways Boeing 727 jet airliner with 133 persons aboard crashed into Tokyo Bay tonight only four minutes from a landing in perfect weather. All aboard were apparently dead in the worst single airplane disaster in history.

The plane carrying 126 passengers from a northern Japan snow festival and a crew of seven fell into the bay seven miles from Tokyo as the pilot was circling for a routine landing.

A search boat of the Maritime Safety Agency sighted several chairs and articles of clothing floating in the water at 11:40 p.m. (6:40 a.m. PST) and they were identified as coming from the missing plane.

Wing Found Floating in Water

Search ships operating with spotlights and an occasional flare from U.S. planes overhead converged on the scene southeast of Tokyo and found the wing of the plane floating in the water where a light mist hovered just above the surface.

At 11:50 p.m., the agency said its search boat spotted the floating body of a man and a book explaining how to use lifesaving equipment aboard the plane.

Six hours after the crash 21 bodies had been recovered.

A spokesman for the airways denied at 1 a.m. that there was any report by the pilot of instrument trouble and said the only word was that he was shifting over from instrument to visual flight for the final approach.

An official of the transportation ministry aviation bureau said, "Judging from the fact the plane lost contact immediately after it last made contact with the airport it is strongly suspected something—maybe some kind of trouble—happened to some mechanism in the plane."

The airways said the plane was almost new. It had been in service only since late last year and had a total of 1,600 flying hours. One of its three jet engines was replaced early this year and an airways spokesman said there was no foundation to reports of any faulty mechanism.

He said it was perfectly normal for a pilot to shift from instruments to visual landing under conditions of clear weather and long visibility such as existed.

The airline later led the weeping relatives from the terminal building and took them to the airport hotel to await recovery of the bodies. After serving them tea the company said it would take them to the morgue as soon as it could hire buses.

Fourth Fatal Crash of 727

It was the fourth fatal crash of the Boeing 727 three-jet airliner within a year and already Japanese officials were reported raising questions about the safety of the sleek craft in widespread use by airlines in the U.S.

Fishermen had reported seeing a plane trailing dense clouds of smoke and then a ball of fire as the plane apparently hit the waters of the bay. But the pilot had given no indication of possible trouble.

Capt. Masaki Takahashi, 39, trained as a pilot during the Second World War and cited only recently for his safety record, radioed the Haneda international airport control tower four minutes before his scheduled landing he was on the final, circling approach. Then disaster.

There were scenes of grief and despair at the Haneda airport serving the Tokyo-Yokohama area and at Chitose in the northernmost Island of Hokkaido where millions of Japanese were attending an annual snow festival to see the spectacular snow and ice carvings. The plane left Chitose earlier.

The passengers were said to be mostly Japanese from three Tokyo firms which sent its employees to Chitose on an outing.

About 50 relatives and friends were waiting at the airport when word of the missing plane was flashed on 9 p.m. television news broadcasts. Hundreds of Japanese poured into the terminal building.

Hysterical Scene at Airport

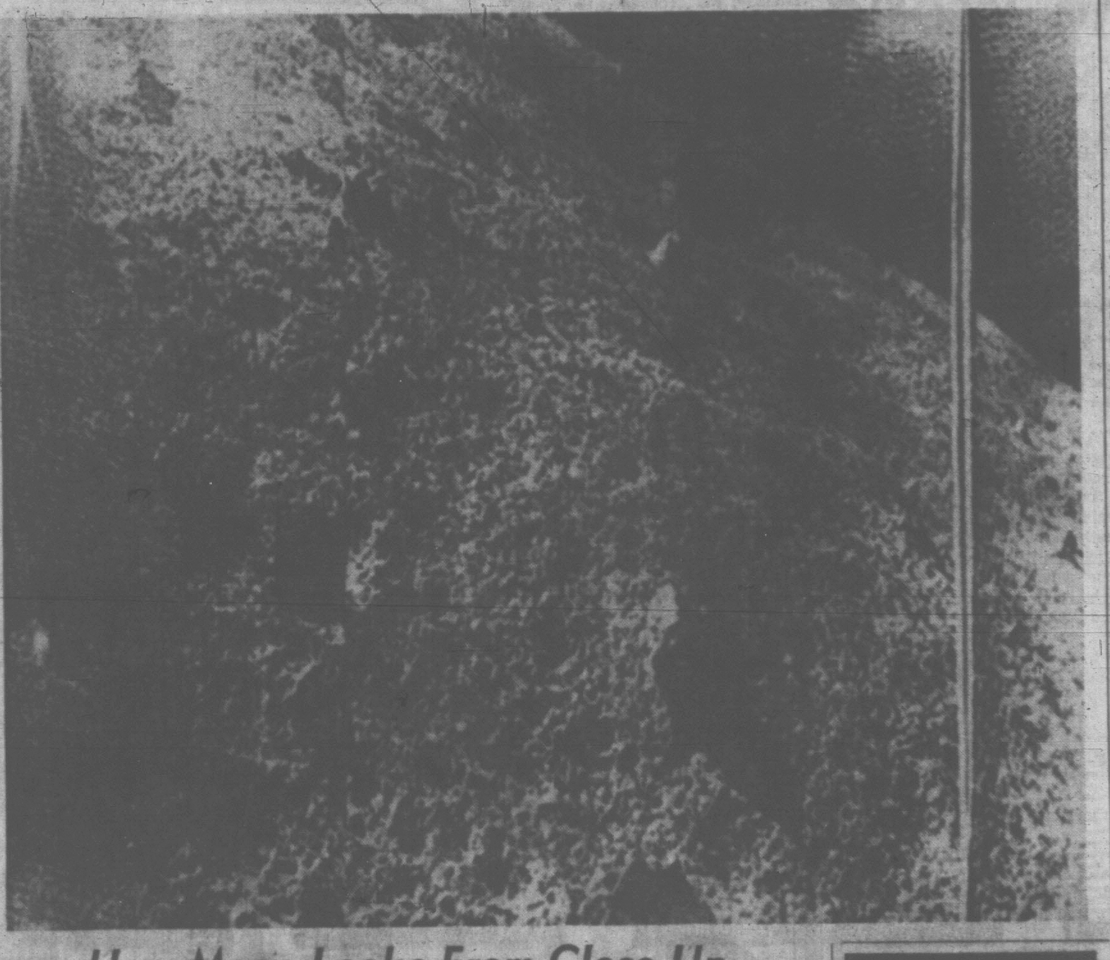
They jammed against the airlines' counter and simply stood. Most were stony-faced with the stoicism of the Orient. A few wept openly.

Among them were two small children, Emiko Yokoshima and her brother Yutaka whose parents had gone to Hokkaido. They wept with grief as a reporter tried to interview them before a television camera.

Airlines officials announced stonily every half hour there was no trace of the plane. There were shouts "were there enough life boats?" and "did the plane carry rescue rafts at all?" The questions were screamed in hysterical voices.

One man, clad in padded clothes and a hat with heavy earflaps, let the tears stream down his seamed and burdened face as he waited for word that did not come.

Shortly after midnight Saturday the Japanese government announced it had asked the U.S. embassy for assistance. It was assumed help was wanted from the military in rescue operations.



How Moon Looks From Close Up

One of the first pictures of the moon's surface taken by the Soviet Union's Luna 9 was released today by a British observatory.

The Luna 9 equipped with cameras and other equipment made a successful soft landing Thursday.

The craft's camera appeared to be shooting pictures from about six to 10 feet above the moon's surface, according to Sir Bernard Lovell, director of Jodrell Bank observatory where the pictures were being received.

Craters, rocks and pebbles could be distinguished and one crater was about 12 inches across, he said.

The pictures were being picked up in the United Kingdom by a big-dish radio telescope 250 feet across, fed into special receiving equipment and printed.

Lovell said Luna 9 began transmitting television pictures from the moon a few minutes after touching down Thursday which, he said, "would indicate the Luna had landed on a hard surface without encountering any great depths of dust."

The picture above was transmitted from Manchester, England, through the facilities of the Manchester Guardian simultaneously into the Associated Press wirephoto service in London and New York. The pictures were released by the observatory.

Lovell said:

"One thing is certain, these are photographs of the lunar surface in considerable detail. When we get a group of them we will be able to interpret them in more detail. We don't know yet the scale of the rocks shown in one of the photographs. There is a dark mark on one of them which is a shadow of the spaceship itself."

At first there had been problems in working out the focal length of the satellite's TV camera and the facsimile pictures showed a series of dark lines about one-quarter of an inch in width.

Then another shot showed light lines. But finally the focus was worked out and the pictures were translated from radio signals into visual images which technicians described as exceedingly clear.

UN Delegates Meet With No Success In Viet Nam Talks

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters)—Delegates to the United Nations Security Council resume their private efforts today to deal with the Viet Nam war without any immediate prospect of agreement.

(See Page 3, Viet Nam War Today.)

Talks were agreed on Wednesday when the Viet Nam crisis was placed on the council agenda at the request of the United States and over strong Russian objections.

Debate was suspended shortly after a close vote on the agenda because delegates wanted to avoid an acrimonious public debate which could only make the situation worse.

There was considerable speculation that Sori Coulibaly, chief delegate of Mali, might have a key role to play in the private negotiations.

Mali, one of the non-permanent Council members, has diplomatic relations with Peking. Coulibaly, chairman of the "committee of 24" on colonialism, has a reputation as a militant African delegate.

He conferred Thursday with Halim Budo, chief delegate of Albania, Charles Yost, deputy chief U.S. delegate, and Roger Seydoux, chief delegate of France.

DECLINES ANY COMMENT

Coulibaly declined any comment except to say that any initiative for another meeting would have to come from the U.S., which made the original request.

Nikolai T. Fedorenko, the chief Soviet delegate, was expected to continue his stiff opposition to any Council debate on Viet Nam, which he said would be a "propaganda farce" aimed at giving Washington a blank cheque for further aggression in Viet Nam.

Many delegates indicated they thought the best forum for dealing with the Viet Nam war was at a Geneva conference.

Arthur J. Goldberg, chief U.S. delegate, has circulated a draft council resolution calling for talks between the appropriate interested governments — apparently excluding the Viet Cong.

Fedorenko said the Viet Cong were the "sole genuine representatives of the South Vietnamese people" and reaffirmed his support of Hanoi's four points, which include a demand for withdrawal of all American troops.

Johnson Sets Up War Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson announced today that he will fly to Hawaii late Saturday for three days of meetings with South Vietnamese leaders and the U.S. high command.

Johnson told a news conference in his office that South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky and the Vietnamese chief of state, Nguyen Van Thieu, had accepted his invitation to meet him in Honolulu Sunday.

Also coming from Saigon for the conference are Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in Southeast Asia, and the U.S. Ambassador to Saigon, Henry Cabot Lodge.

Johnson will be accompanied by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara, Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman and John W. Gardner, secretary of health, education and welfare.

NO SHIFT SEEN

The president said he anticipated no shift in this country's policies in Viet Nam, but that the meeting was arranged because he wanted for some time to meet Ky and Thieu. He said he also had wanted to see Westmoreland and Lodge in person.

Johnson and his party planned to leave Washington for Hawaii in air force jet transports late Saturday. The president expected the Honolulu talks to run through next Tuesday and thought he would be back in the White House by Wednesday morning.

Rocket Cone On Surface

JODRELL BANK, England (Reuters)—Lunar dust appears to be only a few inches—not feet—thick, according to pictures from the Soviet Luna IX mooncraft examined tonight by Sir Bernard Lovell, director of Britain's giant radio-telescope here.

Lovell said one of the photographs conclusively destroyed the theory that dust on the moon is many feet thick.

Pictures produced here from signals from Luna IX on the moon also disclosed pinnacles of matter 10 to 20 feet tall.

What appears to be a nose cone of a rocket appears in the bottom right-hand corner of one picture, Lovell reported after a close examination of what he described as "the most sensational" photographs ever received by Jodrell Bank.

First picture signals from the Russian spacecraft resting on the moon's Ocean of Storms 238,000 miles away were picked up about 4 p.m. today. Transmissions went on for an hour and three clear complete pictures had by then been picked up.

A fourth picture also was picked up but was of poor quality.

Lovell described the pictures as "amazing," showing details of pebbles, rocks, craters and and features only a few inches in length.

One picture showed the shadow of the spacecraft and a crater of about one foot in diameter.

World Praises Landing Feat

MOSCOW (CP)—Luna IX, the Soviet mechanical moon pioneer, has transmitted to earth pictures of the lunar landscape, Tass reported today.

An announcement distributed by the official Soviet news agency gave no indication when the pictures would be made public. It would be the first ever transmitted directly from the moon's surface to earth, after earlier Soviet and American pictures sent from spacecraft above the moon.

Luna IX "has begun scanning the lunar landscape and transmitting it to the earth's surface," the announcement said.

The space vehicle landed Thursday in an area of the moon that will be in direct sunlight for almost two weeks. This would permit a number of pictures to be sent, if Luna IX continues working properly and sunlight can power its batteries.

The announcement, made 20 hours after Luna IX's landing, said four radio communications sessions had been held with it today, totalling three hours 20 minutes.

RECEIVE DATA

"Telemetric information was received during these radio links from the station," it added. "It confirmed the normal functioning of the flight system. Transmission of the lunar landscape was carried out on command from earth."

Before this announcement, the Russians had been characteristically silent about information received from the mechanical pioneer sitting on the plain named Ocean of Storms, though the British radio observatory at Jodrell Bank said Luna IX had transmitted radio information and pictures.

The official Thursday announcement said the landing was in the area of the Ocean of Storms to the west of he craters Reiner and Maria. Yuri Pakovsky, a scienist, described the site for Tass.

"This area is an easily observable plain," he said, "although in the zone of landing there are hills and craters. The large light spot of Reiner Gamma lies to the south. Scientists still do not know what it is."

Pakovsky said the land site can be seen from earth with ordinary field glasses.

But triumphant space program chiefs cautiously held back detailed information until experts thoroughly examine pictures and technical data said to be streaming back to earth.

Informed sources said ground control planned several radio links a day with the Luna IX unmanned station which Thursday night gave the Soviet Union a dramatic space victory in landing — apparently undamaged—on the moon's dust-covered surface after a 3½ day flight from earth.

The heavy instrument filled capsule glided gently into the surface of earth's nearest neighbor at 9:45 p.m. (10:45 a.m. PST), after scientists slowed Luna IX's speed from about one mile a second to almost zero by firing retro-rockets.

Russia's feat was likened to its success as the first nation to put a man into orbit, and the first to send a human being to walk in outer space.

But Russians were cautious in talking about how soon it may be before they can cap their victory by sending a cosmonaut to touch down on the moon.

Experts believe the split-second timing achieve in landing Luna IX after a flight of more than 240,000 miles shows Russia

. . . LANDING

already has the technical capacity to land a human being.

But the hazards he may face on the mysterious moon surface are still unknown. Delicate instruments aboard the space station will help scientists determine how a cosmonaut can survive, testing such factors as temperatures and pressures.

There is a widespread optimism in Moscow that Russia will solve the problem before 1970. The next few years may see a spectacular race between the Soviet Union and the United States to get there first.

Although U.S. probes have sent back detailed pictures of the moon's surface just before crashing, the U.S. has not attempted a soft landing. Its first try is scheduled for May.

The Soviet success came on its fifth attempt.

Soviet Cosmonaut Andrian Nikolayev said in a Pravda article the landing "could be said to be already a step on the lunar surface . . . wait for us, moon."

In another Pravda article, Prof. N. Barabashov of the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences said investigations on the moon would have a great effect on "earth-bound" science and would "enrich mankind with new knowledge about the basic laws of nature."

The Soviet news agency Tass said: "Radio contact with the station on the surface of the moon is reliable. Transmissions are on 183.538 megacycles. The instruments on board the station are functioning normally."

Scientists at the Jodrell Bank Radio Observatory in England said Luna IX transmitted facsimile pictures from its landing at 9:45 p.m. until 10:50 p.m., went off the air, and resumed signals shortly after midnight (6 p.m. PST).

Congratulations from heads of states around the world have poured into Moscow.

"Your accomplishment is one that can benefit all mankind and all mankind applauds it," said President Johnson in a message to President Nikolai Podgorny.

U.S. space officials at Cape Kennedy, Fla., conceded the Soviet success gave the Russians a lead in this phase of the race to put a man on the moon.

SCORE OTHER 'FIRSTS'

The Soviets were the first to crash-land a rocket on the moon in September, 1959. The following month they sent a space station around the moon that sent back photographs of its far side, never before seen by man.

The United States also crash-landed a picture-taking satellite on the moon, but not until July 31, 1964. This was Ranger 7 which sent back the most complete series of pictures taken of the moon.

An earlier U.S. attempt, Ranger 6, hit the moon Feb. 2, 1964, but its cameras did not work.

At Jodrell Bank, Lovell said the spacecraft landed in a region that will be in full sunlight for 14 days, permitting solar power to replenish Luna IX's batteries.

Cosmonaut Gherman Titov, the Soviet Union's second man in space, told Tass today he believes dogs or other animals will precede man to the moon, just as dogs preceded men in orbiting the earth in Soviet space shots.

He said the chief problem in preparing for manned flight to the moon is the return of the men to the earth.

Russian Moon Landing Hailed Around the World

LONDON (CP) — Political leaders and scientists around the world joined today in congratulating the Soviet Union on its successful moon landing.

Newspapers and radio and television stations in most countries gave the soft landing of Luna IX top attention. President Johnson was one of the first to hail the Soviet feat.

"You and the people of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics are to be congratulated for the great success of Luna IX," he said in a message to Soviet President Nikolai Podgorney.

"Your accomplishment is one that can benefit all mankind and all mankind applauds it. Your scientists have made a major contribution to man's knowledge of the moon and space."

President de Gaulle of France said in a telegram to Soviet leaders: "Soviet science has, in the interest of all humanity, added a new chapter to the history of great discoveries."

PRAISE FROM INDIA

Indian President Sarvapallo Radhakrishnan hailed "yet another triumph for Soviet scientists." Indian Premier Mrs. Indira Gandhi said the landing "comes like a sudden reassurance of man's continuous quest to transform the unattainable into the attainable."

"A great feat of science and technology," said Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake of New Zealand.

Scientists could not agree whether the landing put the Soviet Union ahead of the United States in the race to put a man on the moon or only in one phase of it.

The race to put a man on the moon is "still fairly even now," said Sir Bernard Lovell, director of the Jodrell Bank Radio Observatory in England.

"The Soviet Union has gone ahead in the techniques of soft landing," he said. "The Americans already achieved the other essential feature of rendezvous in space. Both countries now have one each to their credit."

LUNA TICKS OFF MOON SECRETS

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — With the successful soft landing of Luna IX, the Russians apparently have proved that man can safely explore the moon. They also put added pressure on the troubled United States Surveyor program, which hopes to make a similar landing in May.

Until Luna IX settled gently onto the dry, relatively flat Ocean of Storms Thursday, scientists were divided on whether the moon's surface could support a landing.

Some felt the surface might be a thick layer of dust or a fragile honeycomb structure that would swallow a heavy spacecraft.

But Luna IX touched down, established firm radio contact with Russian ground stations, and started sending photographs and information which will help in developing a manned lunar landing vehicle.

Other goals must be achieved before men venture to the moon. A key one is the joining of two vehicles in space, which the U.S. hopes to do with the Gemini 8 flight in March.

It's been nearly a year since the last Russian cosmonaut went aloft. In that period 10 American astronauts have rocketed into space.

But, as one rocket expert noted about Russian secrecy: "They could have a 20-man spacecraft on the pad right now and we wouldn't know about it until after it was launched."

NEAR-EPIDEMIC OUTBREAK OF RABIES IN ONTARIO

TORONTO (UPI)—An outbreak of rabies in southern Ontario has spread to near-epidemic proportions, the Ontario Lands and Forests Department warned today.

The department issued warnings to parents, pet owners and farmers.

During November last year, the department said 110 cases of rabies were reported in southern Ontario—the largest number from a large area north of Lake Huron.

As the disturbance moves eastward on Saturday it will be preceded by showers of snow or mixed rain and snow in the southern interior. Elsewhere in the province skies will continue cloudy while periods of rain are looked for on the north coast and light snowflurries will persist in parts of the northern interior. Mild temperatures will prevail except in far northern B.C. which is still dominated by cold Arctic air.
